Deaths and Funerals.

Services will be held at the home at 12 and again at the Boston M. E. church at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Burial will be at Boston.

TOWNSEND—Mrs. Lida Townsend, mother of Dr. E. E. Townsend of this city died at her son's residence, Ninth and North A street about 12 o'clock today from kidney trouble. Dr. Townsend had brought his mother to this city from Billings, Montana, but a short time ago hoping that the climate and water would improve her health.

She is survived by three children, Mrs. Prickett of Billings, Montana, with whom she had been making her home, Mrs. George Douglas, of Columbus, Montana and Dr. Townsend of this city. The funeral arrangements will be given later.

STINSON—James Henry Stinson of Indianapolis, formerly of this city who died yesterday at his home will be buried in Earlham cemetery, Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The body will arrive on the Interurban and be removed from the car and taken direct to the grave. An Odd Fellows lodge of Indianapolis as well as local Odd Fellows will have charge of the services.

RAMLER—Friends may call at anytime at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Grothaus, 138 South Fifth street to see the remains of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Ramlar.

Tommy—What is a retainer, pa? "A retainer, my son, is the money people pay to lawyers before we can do any work."

"Oh, I see. It's like those slot game meters. The people have to pay their money before they can get any gas."

London Tit-Bits.

"It's physically impossible," pleaded Martin.

"Nonsense!" said Nicholas. "I insist on its being done."

Finding himself on the horns of a dilemma, the mimic took heart of grace and, with a promptitude and presence of mind that probably saved him, buttoned his coat over his breast, expanded his chest, threw up his head and, assuming the imperial part to the best of his power, strode across the room and back; then, standing opposite the minister, he cried in the exact tone and manner of the czar:

"Volkhonsky, pay M. Martineff 1,000 silver rubles!"

The emperor for a moment was disconcerted; but, recovering himself with a smile, he ordered the money to be paid.

Stories of John Bright.

John Bright was supposed to be a total abstainer, but once when Edward Miall was very nervous at the prospect of having to make an important speech in the house Bright said:

"Well, Miall, if I were you I'd for once go and have a pint of champagne."

Mr. Miall did as he was told, and the result may be judged from the narrator's comment that "champagne on an unaccustomed interior is not always a curative or a tonic."

Bright "rarely had any difference with his wife," but occasionally they were not at one about the children. When they came to a point of absolute disagreement he used to say:

"Now, I tell thee, if thou doesn't do what I wish I'll go straight to Mr. Gladstone and ask him to make me a knight," to which the answer invariably was:

"Oh, anything rather than that."

He Was Not Superstitious.

A captain of an ocean liner tells the following story: Coming from the old country was a very nervous old lady who complained that she was sure there was a rat in her stateroom.

"Keep it rat, madam," said the captain.

"But you like rats?" asked she.

"I've got a nest in my cabin," he retorted the brusque seaman, "and I never disturb them. When they leave the ship I do."

"Why, you must be superstitious," urged the dame.

"No, madam," wound up the captain, "I'm not, but the rats are."

Plant Savings Banks.

All bulb plants have savings banks—storehouses that in fact seasons they fill with substance which in the lean days may be drawn upon. The leaf buds on the bare winter branches of plants are savings banks full of the plant currency called starch.

This currency, accumulated in the easy summer, makes life through the hard winter endurable. Some plants, the beet, carrot and turnip, run particular fine savings banks called taproots.

These plants have turned economy to parsimony. They are misers. Their buds, or taproots, are bigger and finer than themselves, hence their destruction. Man eats them, or, rather, he eats their savings, their best part—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
