

A JAPANESE GIRL IN SUTTON CASE

She Is Relied Upon by Man's
Mother to Give Important
Testimony.

SHE FORWARDS A LETTER

TELLS GRIEVING PARENT NOT TO BECOME ILL AND TO PERSIST
IN LEARNING WHO SON'S MUR-DERER IS.

(American News Service)
Annapolis, Md., July 24.—A statement of a pretty Japanese girl, who served in the capacity of governess in a family of Col. Charles A. Doyen, commandant of the barracks, at the time of Lieut. Jas. N. Sutton's tragic death, two years ago, is relied upon by the dead man's family to aid them in proving that Sutton was slain.
In a letter to Mrs. James N. Sutton, the marine officer's mother, the girl, whose name is Utsuno, wrote:
"It will not do for you to become ill, for you want to find out who killed your son."

Taught Her Prayers.
The girl's statement that Sutton taught her to say her prayers when she told him how she grieved over her mother's death is the more remarkable because of the testimony of the witnesses that the dead naval officer was at all times arrogant, overbearing and quarrelsome.

In making the letter public, Mrs. Sutton declared that she would take the case to the U. S. supreme court if necessary to prove that a "party of thugs" killed her son.

The letter, which follows in part, throws a remarkable sidelight on the character of the dead officer:

"Dear Mrs. Sutton:—I feel so sorry for you because your pretty son is dead. He was always so kind to me and to everybody that everyone loved him."

"Don't grieve too much over the death of the pretty soldier. It will not do for you to become ill, for you want to find out who killed your son. I lost my mother a few years ago. I felt so bad that I never got over it. I loved the pretty officer next to my dear mother. He was so good and kind to me and he was so pretty, too."

The letter was written by the wife of Col. Doyen as the young woman dictated it.

THRONE OF SPAIN IS SHAKING FROM BLOWS OF JAIME

stage of the opportunities offered by the universal unrest which has swept over Spain.

Today while Alfonso is posting loyal troops in all strategic positions to quell any uprising in its incipency the republican and radical press renewed their attacks upon the government and its martial policy with redoubled vigor. The king is hoisted wherever he appears.

His Italian Hand.

There are some who see in this tidal wave of unrest the Italian hand of the new pretender. Carefully cloaked under a veil of republican sentiment he is inciting the people in every region through his agents. They are posted in the lonely mountain villages of the Pyrenees and in the stately coast cities of the east and south.

The opportunities they see they have made for themselves. It is strongly felt that Don Jaime is the power behind the present revolutionary movement and that, while working under the guise of republicanism, he really knows that Spain can not exist as a republic and thus sees the way paved to the Spanish throne.

The rigorous censorship which is being exercised throughout the provinces is adding fuel to the flames of resentment which are already strongly burning. The fire brand Spaniards, excitable of temper and strong in their desire for liberty, are incensed over the restrictions. The government claims these measures justified; the crafty republicans and radicals declare the government is carrying out a policy against the will of the people and against the best wishes of the state.

Jails Are Filled.

The jails are being filled with political offenders. Secret agents of the Pretenders followers and those who are merely suspected of being agents are being cast into prison. The fiery orators declaiming against the African policy of the government and the wasting of human lives, and pulled from their pulpits and cast behind stone walls; the radical editors who unlimbered unbridled pens have been clapped behind bars where their language while their desire for vengeance against an unjust government grows stronger every day.

In the meantime Don Jaime directs his campaign. He is a restless man of forty years. Inheriting many of his father's characteristics, Don Jaime found his father's supporters loyal to him.

King Alfonso, the once beloved monarch, may find himself ruthlessly opposed by this middle-aged scion of the house of Bourbon. Don Jaime is a man of immediate action, too. In 1896 when his sister Donna Elvira, who eloped with Count Folchi, a penniless hunchback, wrote to her father that her home life had become so unbearable she could stand it no longer, Don Jaime obtained a leave of absence from the twenty-fourth regiment Prussian dragoons of Lubny, to which he was then attached and went to the Spanish frontier post-haste with the intention of killing Folchi if the latter crossed the border into France.

Inherited Traits.

Don Jaime could hardly help inheriting the traits of politics and action. His father was the third in the line of pretenders, and had fought, stubbornly all through his lifetime for the throne. Don Jaime's pretensions to the Spanish throne are based on the ground that Isabelle, tutor of Ferdinand VII, who was Don Carlos' grand uncle, and Christina, mother of Alfonso XII, owing to the Salic law were debarred from succession. Don Carlos by sheer force of arms ruled northern Spain for four years, but was later driven over into France.

Thus the pretender comes upon the scene. Spain is figuratively a financial corpse. Stripped by the Spanish-American war and not yet recovered she finds herself facing a situation so serious that the disruption of the nation may hinge upon it. The Kabyle and Riff tribesmen are prepared to put an army of 50,000 men in the field, all equipped with the latest and most deadly firearms. To raise, equip and keep a force of 50,000 men in the field against the tribesmen would shatter the poor remnants of Spain's finances. Without war Spain needs money. With war the situation is desperate. The newspapers, save those of the royalists loyal to Alfonso are teaching the people the facts as they see them. The pretender is behind the curtain. The stage is set for the greatest national drama Europe has seen in a decade.

PROSECUTION OF ADAMS PROBABLE

Cass County Prosecutor Tries
To Get Boston Marriage Certificate.

STOCK DEALER NOT HERE

RUMORS THAT HE IS IN HIDING
IN RICHMOND GROUNDLESS—
SEVERAL BUSINESS RELATIONS WITH FATHER.

According to a dispatch from Logansport, the prosecutor of Cass county has taken steps to secure a certified copy of the marriage of Frank R. Adams in Boston, Mass., to his first wife, and if it proves authentic, will, it is asserted, take steps to have Adams arrested. It may be said on the best of authority that despite all reports to the contrary that Frank R. Adams is no longer in Richmond. Stories to the effect that the man has been in hiding here are without foundation, though for a day or so following the revelations of his matrimonial ventures he was here.

His Affairs All Right.

At this time his whereabouts is unknown to his Richmond acquaintances. It may also be said on authority that Adams has no longer any connection with the business affairs of the company in which numerous Richmond men are interested. Adams was never an officer in the company and his connection was solely in the capacity of a stock salesman. His business affairs with the company have been absolutely straight. J. W. Adams, of Chattanooga, father of Frank R. Adams was in Richmond yesterday in conference with local members of the company. He is one of the wealthiest men in Chattanooga and none stands higher in the estimation of the people of that city.

ONLY LEWIS CAN PREVENT MINERS FROM GOING OUT

go Tinplate works are out on a sympathetic strike with the tin workers. This includes electricians, engineers, firemen, boiler men, carpenters, brickmasons and machinists, and cripples the plant so that the strike breakers are useless.

Some 225 men in the American Tin Can company here were laid off today because there is no available tin.

At Butler, Pa., although two-thirds of the 2,000 strikers at the plants of the Standard Steel company and the Forged Steel Wheel company and the Butler Car Wheel works have voted to return to work on terms agreed upon Tuesday, the strike continues only about six hundred men being at work, most of whom are Americans. At the plant of the Pressed Steel Car company at McKee's Rocks, the six thousand strikers continue to dominate the situation. The company's efforts to secure professional strike breakers so far has been confined to Pittsburgh agencies it is claimed, but if not more successful will be extended to Cleveland, Chicago and other cities. The co-operation of the Butler and McKee's Rocks strikers is said by the strikers to be a bitter disappointment to the officials of the Pressed Steel Car company, who counted on a large body of competent men coming from Butler to this plant.

C. J. FULTON HAS GYPSY ARRESTED

Complained to Eaton Authorities That the Woman
"Worked" Him.

APPROPRIATED $10.00 BILL

BORROWED TWO GREENBACKS WITH X MARKED ON THEM,
BUT THEN SHE CARELESSLY
ONLY RETURNED ONE.

Eaton, O., July 24.—At the instigation of C. J. Fulton, of Richmond, Ind., a representative of the Starr Piano company, a band of gypsies were apprehended here Friday afternoon by Marshal J. W. Harris, and one of their number, Elizabeth Smith, brought in police court to answer to the charge of operating a bunco scheme. The woman, Fulton claims, worked him for a $10 bill.

While enroute to Richmond from Eaton Fulton passed the band a short distance west of New Hope, where they had been in camp. He says he was hailed by one of the tribe, and was asked to stop and have his fortune told. Fulton consented.

Before beginning to unravel his past and future, the woman stated her charming workings would be more successful if he would kindly loan her two ten dollar bills. Fulton again consented and drew out the money.

Finds a Shortage.

The woman took the green, wadded them together in her hand and proceeded to relate his fortune. After she had finished she handed the crumpled money to Fulton, who returned them to his pocket, without looking to see if all was there.

Fulton proceeded on his way to Richmond. A little later when he took a personal invoice of the cash on hand, he discovered the shortage, and immediately notified the authorities at Eaton.

The fortune teller was arrested about noon and held until 3 o'clock, but was released, because Fulton had not yet shown up to testify in the case. He, however, came to Eaton later and paid the costs.

Oh, What a Difference.

Mr. Towington (showing his guest the sights)—Here comes Indigo. He's one of our most prosperous painters.

The Guest—Oh, how interesting! How quaint these artists dress—such marks of genius! See how the artistic temperament stands out all over him! Some people might call his dress affectation, but to me it simply is the unconscious expression of a great personality, etc.

Mr. Towington (showing signs of vertigo)—Yes, as I was saying, he's one of our most prosperous painters and paperhangers. He did over our back parlor last fall and—
The Guest—Doesn't it beat the deuce what apex some of these tradesmen make of themselves!—Puck.

UP OVER CONTEST ARRANGED
BY THREE OF THE MOST DARING
AVIATORS.

(American News Service)
Calais, France, July 24.—High winds this morning again prevented an attempt on the part of three aeronauts waiting here to fly across the English channel. In case better weather conditions prevail later an attempt may be made this evening.

The excitement of the match among Hubert Latham, M. Bleriot and Comte de Lambert is growing keener. When M. Bleriot arrived on the scene with his service-scarred flyer it was confidently believed that he would steal a march on his competitors who did not expect to be ready to make another try so soon.

Caused a Stir.

The arrival of Latham's new machine, Antoinette No. 7, caused a stir. It is bigger than his old flyer, No. 4. The aeronauts are getting restive and it is believed that more reckless chances will be encountered than Latham cared to risk on his first trip, for the honor of making the first successful flight.

M. Levavasseur, Latham's companion, declared today that M. Hubert is determined to win the Daily Mail prize and is willing to take a desperate chance.

Roadsters—Chalmers-Detroit, Lexington, Moline and two Pierses.
Toy tonneau class—American Simplex.

The committee wishes it stated that any suggestion that will tend to the betterment of the Fall Festival this year will be gladly received. There will be another meeting of this committee next Friday night.

For the purpose of advertising the Fall Festival a large delegation of Richmond people will attend the Hagerstown fair on Thursday. In this way it is hoped to boom the festival and arouse a more general interest in the affair.
