WHO WOULD BELIEVE IT?

County Clerk Harry E. Penny observed his forty-fourth birthday today. Mr. Penny was born on South Fifth street this city. He received many congratulations from his fellow associates at the court house and also submitted to a beating by Linus Meredith, the crippled Wayne county sheriff. The clerk has the distinction of being an unusual young grandfather, but he doesn't tell about it. Look for his hair.

Why the Pink Dresses.

She had on a pink dress of pink. They were complimenting it. "You always wear pink somehow," they said. "Why?" "Well, you see," she explained, "once I bought an extra spool of silk with a pink dress. It was a long time ago, and the silk seemed never to give out. It would last nearly through the next dress, so I had to buy another spool, a whole lot of which was left over again. And so I just kept on buying pink dresses to match the leftover spools of silk."—New York Press.

The Missing Ones.

This is one of the old stories told by Henry Clews of Travers, the New York stammering wit. Mr. Clews always insists that the average Wall street broker is the most honest of men. "Travers," said Mr. Clews, "was once invited to be a guest at a yacht regatta. The waters of Newport harbor were covered with a beautiful squadron. Mr. Travers found that each yacht belonged to a banker or broker. He gazed blankly into the distance for a time and then inquired softly, 'W-w-w-where are the c-c-customers' yachts?'"

Drifting Souls.

Ah, there be souls none understand. Like clouds, they cannot touch the land. Drive as they may, by field or town. Then we look west at this and frown. And we cry, "Fool!" and cry, "Take hold Of earth and fashion gods of gold!"

Unanchored ships, they blow and blow, Sail to and fro and then go down In unknown seas that none shall know Without one ripple of renown. Poor, drifting dreamers, sailing by. They seem to only live and die.

Call these not fools! The test of worth Is not the boldness they have on earth. Lo, there be gentle souls sea blown That know not any harbor known. And oft of this the reason is— They touch on fairer shores than this. —Joachim Miller.

Woman's Keen Sense of Humor.

A lady who was at the head of a suffrage organization attended a social function during the course of which there was presented to her a gentleman who seemed disposed to poke fun at the principles so dear to the lady and her following. "All this goes to show, my dear young lady," said he, "how utterly you women lack a sense of humor."

"I perceive you share the general error in that respect," said the suffragette. "That women lack humor? Yes. 'Really, sir, you're most unobservant,'" continued the suffragette. "There is in every married woman's life at least one occasion when she evinces the keenest sense of humor."

"You astonish me!" exclaimed the man. "May I ask you to particularize?" "Certainly. Does she not get by the 'love, honor and obey' part of the marriage ceremony without so much as a snicker?"

The Party He Belongs To.

A matron of the most determined character was encountered by a young woman reporter who was sent out to interview leading citizens as to their politics. "May I see Mr. —?" she asked of a stern-looking woman who opened the door at one house. "No, you can't," answered the matron decisively. "But I want to know what party he belongs to," pleaded the girl. "Well, take a good look at me," she said; "I'm the party he belongs to!"

All the Trimmings.

Mrs. Brown was young and pretty and innocent of household wisdom. She was also married but a month and just settled in her little villa outside London. A friend had sent her a present ent of a brace of pheasants, and as she expected company the following evening she told the servant to keep the birds till the morrow and then cook them for dinner the next morning the girl came to her mistress and said, "Please, mum, do you like the birds 'light'?" "Like the birds' eye, Mary?" said Mrs. Brown. "Why, whatever do you mean?" "Well, mum," said Mary, "some folks, you know, like the birds 'stale'." "Oh, they like the birds' tail?" said the mistress. "Why, of course, certainly, Mary. Bring in both the eye and the tail."

A Surprise For Jim.

A mission worker in New Orleans was visiting a reformatory near that city when she observed among the inmates an old acquaintance, a negro lad long thought to be a model of integrity. "Jim!" exclaimed the mission worker. "Is it possible I find you here?" "Yassum," blithely responded the backslider. "I's charged with stealin' a barrel o' sweet potatoes." The visitor sighed. "You, Jim," she repeated. "I am surprised!" "Yassum," said Jim. "So was I or I wouldn't be here!"—Lippincott's.

Good Deeds.

Remember that if the opportunities for great deeds should never come, the opportunity for good deeds is renewed day by day. The thing for us to long for is the goodness, not the glory.—F. W. Faber.

Game He Didn't Like.

Years ago a bill entitled "An act for the preservation of the health and honor of the people" was introduced into the New York house of assembly. The speaker of the house, who was not especially interested in matters of this kind, gravely read it. "An act for the preservation of the health and honor of the people."

He was blissfully unconscious of his blunder until an honest member from the northern part of the state who had suffered from the depredations of the frontier Indians rose to his feet. "I should like to move an amendment to the bill," he said mildly, "by adding the words, 'except Indians.'"

DIED WHILE VISITING

Mrs. Agnes Schilderink, of Newport, Ky., who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Philip Witte, 242 South Fifth street, died suddenly last evening of heart trouble. She was 76 years of age. Mrs. Schilderink has made many friends in this city during her numerous visits here and her untimely death is greatly deplored by all who knew her. She is survived by three daughters and two sisters. The funeral arrangements have not been made.

Many thieves were stolen alive from the cross by friends, and that is why Rome ordered their legs broken.
