

SUPT. AULT SAYS IT WAS MISTAKE

Believes Stories About School Dissension Have Been Magnified.

CAMBRIDGE BOND REFUSED

SCHOOL TRUSTEES MUST SECURE OTHER BONDSTERS AS SURETY COMPANY CAN NOT BE ACCEPTED.

Prof. Lee Ault, superintendent of the Cambridge City schools denies that the story in Saturday's issue that there had been trouble in the school system, with himself, Mrs. Isadore Wilson and Dr. Boyd as principals. Prof. Ault says the story is a great injustice to himself, Dr. Boyd and Mrs. Wilson.

He says there has been no serious difficulty between himself and Mrs. Wilson. However he admitted that he had called Mrs. Wilson's attention last February to lack of school discipline. Prof. Ault further stated that there had been serious difficulty between himself and Mrs. Wilson, he would not have wanted her to succeed herself when the teachers were appointed last spring.

Prof. Ault says that Dr. Boyd is still a member of the board by reason of the fact that his successor Mr. Petro has not given his bond. He claims that Dr. Boyd announced several months ago that his business was so great he could not continue a member of the board and therefore would not accept another term.

Cambridge Bonds Refused.

Inquiry with relation to the bonds of the various school trustees of the school corporations of Wayne county made Saturday afternoon at county auditor's office showed that several of the trustees have not yet qualified. The bonds of the Cambridge City school trustees were forwarded to the auditor a few days ago but were not approved because a surety company instead of freehold sureties had been given. Last year a surety company signed the bonds of the trustees of the Cambridge City school board and it was not known at the time that such a bond could not be legally given. This year, however, the requirement was made that the law would have to be followed closely and only free hold sureties would be acceptable. One officer of the Spring Grove board of trustees had not filed his bond up to Saturday and none of the officers of the Richmond school board had filed theirs, although all were in readiness and were filed today.

CHILDREN DIE OF SUMMER COMPLAINT

Several Cases Have Been Reported Lately.

Summer complaint among children is very prevalent at the present time. Several deaths have occurred. The last death was that of the thirteen months old child of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Strait, residing at 1144 North 1st street, who died at its parents' home yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The funeral was held this morning at 9 o'clock. Friends may call at 9 o'clock. Burial was in the cemetery at Goschen.

HE LIKES TO WORK.

Milton, Ind., Aug. 9.—Peter Shumaker of this place, who was recently paralysed on one side, is partially recovered, but as yet is unable to do any work. He thought it would be pleasant to be occupied and Saturday opened a popcorn and candy stand on the side walk in front of his home, on West Main street, where he sits during the nice weather. His little stock of merchandise disappeared quickly.

ROBERT G. TUCKER WANTS AN OFFICE

Indianapolis Man Republican Candidate for Secretary of State.

CARL RIDDICK ALSO OUT

ENTRANCE OF TUCKER INTO THE ARENA, IT IS PREDICTED, WILL MEAN A GREAT FIGHT ON CERTAIN LINES.

Indianapolis, Aug. 9.—Robert G. Tucker of this city, has gotten into the race for the republican nomination for secretary of state, and his friends say he will make a determined fight for the place. The only other candidate mentioned thus far for this nomination is Carl Riddick of Winamac, the present secretary of the republican state committee. And it is not even certain that Riddick will be a candidate, although the general understanding is that he will be.

The entrance of Tucker into the race for the nomination may mean a big fight along certain lines. Tucker is the Indianapolis correspondent for the Cincinnati Enquirer and his political "dope" which he serves to that paper Sunday is read with a good deal of interest over the state. He has been an Indianapolis newspaper man for years. He was such an ardent supporter of James E. Watson that many people believed that he was to have something good out of it—probably would be appointed Watson's private secretary in case of his election as governor. Tucker knows all of the politicians in the state, and it is believed that he has received some encouragement from them to enter the fight for secretary of state.

Riddick was believed to have no opposition for the nomination until Tucker's name was posted, and it was thought that he would get the nomination unanimously in return for the hard work which he had done in the last two campaigns. He and Chairman Goodrich have worked together in politics for several years, and he knows the game all the way through. There is a large element in the party which believes that Mr. Riddick is entitled to the nomination by reason of his faithful service and if he stays in the race it is altogether probable that it will be a hot one.

PLAYED WITH HIS SON

Temporary Delay Because of Tariff Squabble Hurt His Golf.

PLAYED WITH HIS SON

SCORES OF AUTOMOBILES CARRIED SPECTATORS TO LINKS TO WATCH PLAY AND HOLD RECEPTION.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 9.—President Taft began his vacation this afternoon by following up his favorite game—golf. Accompanied by his son, Robert the two took leave of Mrs. Taft and the president's automobile whirled them over the roads to the links of the fashionable Myopia club in Hamilton, where a tournament is in progress this afternoon. James Sloan of the secret service guard went with them. The Myopia links are among the finest in the east and it is probable that the president may be asked to try a few holes. As soon as it became known that the president was off for the links scores of automobiles laden with members of the fashionable North Shore social colony began leaving for the same place when the presidents' automobile came into the automobile park at the Myopia there was a general tooting of horns and this acted as a signal for the throng in the club house and on the links. They pressed forward and soon the president was busy shaking hands. Later the gallery began to form for the tournament and the president seated himself to watch the start.

GAMBLER'S LUCK.

The Lackey Who Changed Places With His Former Master.

Some years ago a remarkable occurrence transpired at Nice, which is very near to Monte Carlo. A notorious habitue of the casino, who had made his money principally there, had set up an English vehicle, a pair of horses, "tiger" and all, and cut quite a swell driving in the neighborhood, says Illustrazione. One day he was riding in the environs of the town when his servant, sitting upon the raised box behind, who had been feeling some what uneasy at not receiving his wages for some time, seeing his master quite alone, ventured to ask him through the back window if he would not make it convenient to pay him. The master was in a good humor and asked:

"How much is it, La Fleur?"

"One hundred and twenty-five livres, may it please you, monsieur."

"Very well; here it is," said the master, spreading the sum in paper currency upon the seat of the vehicle. "Now, La Fleur, have you a pack of cards with you?"

"Certainly," answered the obsequious lackey. "I always carry them, monsieur," producing the cards at once.

"That is well. Now, I will be banker, and you shall play against me. I will take the front seat, the back one shall serve for our table, and you can look through this back window."

The lackey assented to this, amused at his master's condescension. Luck was rather on the master's side, but both men became quite eager in the game, thinking of that, and that only. Little by little the footman's money went until all that was left of his wages was 5 livres. He began to feel anxious, when suddenly his luck turned, and he won the whole sum back, with every son his master had about him.

Piqued at his loss, the master wagged a horse, which the lackey won; then its mate, next the harness and lastly the carriage itself. Luck ran all one way, and the servant, La Fleur, won everything. The master took out his watch and put it down against a given sum. The cards were shuffled, and the lackey won.

"I have nothing more, La Fleur. You have cleaned me out," said the half desperate gambler.

The servant was in high spirits at his strange run of luck.

"Here are a hundred livres, monsieur. I will stake them against your position. If you win they are yours. If you lose we change seats."

"Agreed."

The cards were shuffled. La Fleur won, and the vehicle returned to Nice with its former master occupying the servant's box behind and La Fleur sitting inside!

The Last Speaker of Cornish.

In the little village of St. Paul, near Penzance, there is a monument erected to the memory of Dell or Dolly Pentreath, who attained the age of 102 and was the last woman who spoke the Cornish tongue. This is the inscription: "Here lieth interred Dorothy Pentreath, who died in 1777, said to have been the last person who conversed in the ancient Cornish, the peculiar language of this country from the earliest times till it expired in the eighteenth century in this parish of St. Paul. This stone is erected by the Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte, in union with the Rev. John Garnett, vicar of St. Paul, June, 1860. 'Honorable father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee' (Exodus xx, 12).—London News."

The Youngster Hushed.

When the great French chemist Chevreul attained his hundredth birthday he was entertained at a public dinner, at which his son, a high official in the department of justice, sixty-seven years old, was also present. The old man made a speech, and in telling an anecdote made a slight slip, which his son corrected. Old Chevreul turned around quickly and said in a sharp tone, "Hush, youngster, when I am talking." And the "youngster" held his tongue.

An Odd Perquisite.

One of the most curious perquisites in connection with English coronations is the right of one of the peers to claim the bed and bedding used by the heir apparent on the night preceding the coronation. In olden times this was a perquisite of considerable value, as the "bedding" usually consisted of richly embroidered coverlets of velvet or silk, with priceless hangings of cloth of silver and gold.

Cigarette Smoker Finds no Jobs Awaiting Him in Gay New York

Lawrenceville, Pa., Aug. 9.—That the heads of big enterprises are not taking men addicted to the cigarette and beer habits, is shown by the experience of a boy of seventeen years, living near Wellsboro, who went to visit friends in New York. He saw an advertisement from a big department store wanting a young man to fill a certain job, and he applied. He was there early and was shown into the presence of the head of the firm. The following conversation took place:

"What can I do for you?"

"I am here in response to an advertisement."

"Do you smoke cigarettes?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever smoke cigarettes?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever want to smoke cigarettes?"

"No, sir."

"Do you drink beer?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever drink beer?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever want to drink beer?"

"No, sir."

"Come around at 6 o'clock and go home with me."

The boy reported five minutes before time; his new employer took him home with him to dinner and kept him in the family for nine months.

FLOATING STORES.

Merchandise Steamers of the Muskoka Lake Country in Ontario.

Among the interesting features of life in the Muskoka lake country, in Ontario, are the floating stores. A good sized steam vessel fitted out with every imaginable item of merchandise that might be required makes a tour of an assigned chain of lakes once each week. On a certain hour of a certain day the boat is expected at the different resorts and summer homes, and enough merchandise must be bought at each to tide over until the next trip of the floating store.

Upon stepping on board the store boat, says a writer in Popular Mechanics, the purchaser approaches a counter with scales and cash drawer, as in any other kind of store. Behind the counter are shelves, on which are displayed such articles as may tempt the eye. Behind these shelves is the entrance to the storeroom and hold, in which more merchandise is stored. Each article has its place, and the stockkeeper can find it in a moment.

Sometimes isolated farms on the lakes are not worth stopping at every trip, so a flag is flown when stores are desired. The store vessel drops anchor when the signal flag is flown, and some member of the family rows out and makes the purchases.

Engraved Gems of the Ancients.

Engraved gems are among the most interesting objects of art inherited by us from the ancients. Though many of the cameos and intaglios were engraved on precious stones over 2,000 years ago, they are still as clear and fine as if they were cut yesterday. The designs engraved on these stones indicate that the old Greeks and Romans regarded them as charms against accident or misfortune. This superstition generally took the form of a fondness for representation of certain animals. Sailors affected the dolphin because it was believed to be the mariner's friend. Women, so far as fishes were concerned, preferred the representation of the prolific arisings of the Adriatic, which was a symbol of fruitfulness because of the great number of its eggs. The ant was worn as an emblem of industry. By the frog was indicated the idea of resurrection, because that interesting batrachian renewes its youth each spring by shedding its old skin.

Pertaining to Fish.

Blessings on thee, little man! Go a-fishing when you can. Never mind the teacher's rule not to run away from school. Take your bait and aider pole and then hunt the deepest hole where the wary troutie hide by the canyon streamlet's side. You'll get licked at home, of course, and you'll suffer great remorse, but when daddy sees your string he'll gasp and say, "By jing!" And his rod and reel he'll snatch and start out to make a catch when your jacket doth tan. Blessings on you, little man!—London Chronicle.

Clothes and the Man.

Man is in some sort a slave to his clothes, and there are many men who dislike wearing the same clothes on two consecutive days, more particularly the necktie. For the first two or three things you look at when you meet a man are his eyes and his necktie. And there is a sort of underlying consciousness as you face the morning world that your tie must be straight and clean and new. But to this end you must buy the cheap tie and throw it away with your sins before going to bed.—London Chronicle.
