TURNS THE TABLES

Cambridge City, Ind., Sept. 2.—Silas Clark, an automobilist, acted as prosecuting witness in the case of the state against Silas Kaufman, a log teamster, in Justice Bowmaster's court yesterday afternoon. Kaufman plead guilty to obstructing the highway so that Clark had to run down on the side of the road to pass the wagon. He was fined $1 and costs.

Romantic Jena.

A quiet old town is Jena, with crooked streets, red tiled old houses, a fifteen century church, with peasant women sitting on the steps selling the charmingly glazed blue and yellow pots which give the kitchens of Jena the air of an art studio; a market place with the statues of the founder of the university and of Martin Luther and many unexpected narrow passages, with sudden and curious odors of cabages, herrings, pickled cucumbers, the smoke of sausages roasted in the open air and cheese quickening into stirring life. In addition to these characteristic features Jena has a romantic past, a prosperous present and a rosy future. Its prosperity is obvious to the most stranger, for new red villas are breaking out all over the hillside, quaint gables and carved balconies are vanishing off the face of the earth, narrow and cobbled streets are being swept away, and new paved streets with roomy ventilated buildings are taking their places.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Tables Turned.

Birds, we know, are sometimes trained to fire off pistols as well as to perform other unusual feats, but it is not often that a wild bird in the woods shoots a man with his own gun, as related in "South American Sketches" by Robert Crawford. A pavo del monte, a bird of Uruguay not unlike the turkey, had been winged by a hunter. It fell to the ground, but was at once on its feet and ran away. Throwing his gun hastily aside, the hunter started in pursuit, and a game of hide and seek ensued. In one of its doublings and turnings the bird passed over the gun, which was lying on the ground, and its foot chanced to strike against the trigger of the undischarged barrel, the hammer of which in the hurry of the moment had been left at full cock. There was a loud report, followed by an exclamation of pain from the man. The bird escaped, and the luckless hunter had an ugly wound in the fleshy part of his leg to remind him for weeks afterward of the adventure.

Napoleon's English Medal.

It has often been doubted whether Napoleon seriously intended to invade England in 1804, but there is a queer fact which practically settles the question. He had a die engraved by Denon in anticipation of the event, and from this die a number of medals were struck, with the obvious intention of being issued from London should the invasion prove successful. On the obverse of the medal is a finely cut bust of Napoleon, the head encircled with a laurel wreath, with the legend "Napoleon Emp. et Roi." On the reverse is a design of Hercules conquering Antaeus, the features of the Hercules being modeled after the Napoleonic type. The principal inscription on the reverse is "Descents on Angleterre." In smaller characters, beneath the feet of the group, are the words "Frappé à Londres, 1804." When the invasion failed these medals were carefully put aside, but some of them were discovered in Paris after the battle of Waterloo.—Westminster Gazette.

A Remarkable Grass.

There grows in New Guinea a very remarkable sort of grass, which the natives call "slang." It has a tall, thick and tough stalk, but its greatest peculiarity is in its roots, which spread out through every particle of earth they reach and give it a matted texture, something like felt. There is no room left for the roots of any other kind of vegetation. Fields of slang cannot exist in forests, because the plant does not thrive in the shade. Neither can any kind of tree make headway in a patch of slang. Large patches of slang are found surrounded by timber and remain there like islands, for no trees will grow in them. Between the slang and the forest is a sort of neutral zone, for the shade of the high trees prevents the development of the grass. The New Guinea natives help to extend the area covered by this grass. Each year they make a new clearing in the forest for their little plantations.

Wanted.—A steady man to look after a garden and milk a cow who has a good voice and is accustomed to sing in a choir.—English Paper.

TO HOLD BIG RALLY A BOWLING LEAGUE

The Fifth Street Methodist church will hold rally day services Sunday, September 5, at the church. Following the regular services in the morning there will be a basket dinner served in the church parlor and in addition at 2:30 o'clock there will be a love feast and class service led by Mrs. Laura Lovin and Mrs. Emma Hudson. At 3:30 o'clock the Rev. A. H. Kenna of the Third Methodist church in West Richmond will deliver a sermon. Evening services will be conducted in the evening at 6:30 o'clock under the direction of E. R. Thompson.

The organization of the City Bowling League will be perfected at a meeting, to be held at the City Bowling League alleys, next Sunday afternoon.

It is expected that the game will be as popular this winter as ever. An effort will be made to divide up the best bowlers in the city into six teams of comparatively equal strength. The schedule will include games every night except Saturday.

A similar league will be organized at the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys. The association was opened too late last year to organize a league, but nevertheless the alleys did a very good business and were patronized by the best bowlers in the city.
