Romantic Story of the Life of J. Wess Moore

Milton, Sept. 4.—Many years ago a young man by the name of "Joe" Moore, now known as J. Wess Moore, was reared at Dublin, this county. He was a nephew of the late Mrs. Aaron White of Milton, and mingled with the young people here. When the Civil war broke out Joe Moore donned the blue and went to do valiant service amid shot and shell in defense of his country's flag. He was spared to return to his home, but later on went to California, where he took up a mining claim. He married and settled down to a happy life with the noble woman who afterwards proved herself worthy of her wifely vows of faithfulness to him, until death should them part.

They were living happily and quietly in Trinity county, California when business called Mr. Moore from home for a time. When he returned he found that evil-minded men had come into the vicinity and "jumped" his claim. He sought to get peaceable return of his property, but the men were unwilling to give it up. He next resorted to law, but again he was treated with injustice and it was of no avail. At last human nature could bear no more and he sought to take the law in his own hands and drive the intruders off. It was at this time that the bitterness of death entered his soul, for in self-defense he shot and killed one of the men. He was brought to trial and again the law proved itself unjust and he was given a lifelong prison sentence. From his happy home, his loving wife and his quiet citizenship and his pleasant Grand Army associations he was led away to San Quentin and placed in the state penitentiary, where he became dead to the world and his Indiana relatives and friends until brought to their knowledge in a peculiar manner.

Beginning of Inspiration.

A few years ago the correspondent from Milton, then the local correspondent of the Daily Sun-Telegram, published at Richmond by B. F. Wissler, among other locals, sent in a notice of a little girls' club that had been organized at Milton. The little girls at first met to play and have a nice time when out of school on Saturday. But this seemed trivial to them and after organizing into a club with Miss Ruby Kellam of Milton as one of the leading officers, they formed into a religious society and for the benefit of people who were needy and in distress. They each gave a small offering at each meeting and opened their meetings with scripture reading, singing and prayer. At length they noticed some little children were coming to school without warm clothing and barefooted even when it was too cold for such exposure. They talked the matter over and concluded to help these little children. But their offerings were small and they did not have readily done and soon they had a neat little sum which was advantageously spent.

Convict Sends Letter.

The notice of this little club and its noble work, as published in the Richmond paper, was read in the far-away gloomy prison of San Quentin, in California, by "Joe" Moore. And through the efforts of a lady whose life was given to good works in the prison cells and whose home was at San Francisco, Mr. Moore wrote B. F. Wissler of the Sun-Telegram, at Richmond, subscribing for the weekly paper for one year. He also enclosed some literature of his own writing and a letter, all of which was to be sent by Mr. Wissler to Miss Ruby Kellam of Milton, who appeared prominently in the little girls' club. This letter told how he admired the object of the club and that he would in the future send them a few dollars to help on their good work. Among the literature was a little pamphlet containing a poem, which he, as J. Wess Moore, had written, describing his prison life, and the beloved and frail little wife who had come to San Quentin to live that she might be near him and visit him in prison, and thus comfort him by the love of a devoted and faithful wife. The poem went on to tell how sickliness had laid its hand upon that wife, how she had died and left him alone to bear his burden of injustice. The promised money was looked for in vain, and it was learned that the prison authorities took care of his pension money and refused to let him have it. A letter was addressed to the lady, who wrote in his behalf from San Francisco. No reply ever came from her, and as it was about the time of the earthquake there, those interested here thought she might have perished at that time.

Brother Makes Inquiry.

The story of the letter and subscription for the Richmond paper came to the knowledge of his brother, Albert, residing at Greenfield, and inquiry was made of the local correspondent here, who related all that was known here. This led to friends at Dublin taking an active interest in the matter. A paper was put into circulation asking the governor of California to pardon J. Wess Moore. He was finally released on parole and went out to establish a mission home and follow the teachings of the little girls' club at Milton, as a letter afterwards attested.

A recent letter from Oakland, Cal., in a Cincinnati paper tells how Mr. Moore went to Oakland, Cal., where he organized what he named a "Society for the Friendless" and devoted his energies to the assistance of ex-convicts and friendless men like himself. At last a lady, Mrs. M. V. Newman, a prominent prison worker of that city, offered to help him. Her offer was accepted gladly. Others were enlisted until the "society" was firmly established.

But the success that J. Wess Moore was meeting caused envy in the mind his work, or go back to prison. J. Wess Moore accepted the latter, saying his work was established, and in competent hands. But as J. Wess Moore had shown tender sympathy for his fellow sufferer advocated by the lowly Man of Galilee, so was he rewarded. He had looked above to One who had said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee" and noble men were raised up for his defense. Attorneys offered him their services without money and without price. Friends came from every quarter. The pressure brought to bear was so forcible that the prison director was obliged to yield and J. Wess Moore, the paroled convict of San Quentin, went forth a free man to carry on his good work he had begun. "Then shall the King say unto them, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto Me." F. N.

IN BARN TWO YEARS

Chicago, Sept. 4.—On a charge of cruelty to animals, Patrick Gannon, a farmer living near Algonquin, Ill., was fined $200 and costs by Justice of the Peace Emil Arnold at Woodstock yesterday. The case was prosecuted by the Illinois Humane society. Gannon was charged with having kept two cows and two horses locked in a barn for two years with scarcely enough feed to keep them alive. At the hearing he gave as an excuse that he had gone to work by the day and that he had no further use for the animals.

NEW YORK STATE
BOASTS NEW LAWS

Thirty-four Statutes Went Into Effect September First.

JOY RIDING IS LARCENY

RESTRICTIONS ARE PLACED ON MOVING PICTURE SHOWS, IMMORAL PLAYS AND POSTING OF INDECENT BILLS.

Albany, Sept. 4.—Thirty-four of the laws enacted at the last session of the legislature went into effect this month. Eleven of the chapters amend the penal code, fourteen the civil and five the criminal code, while of the remaining five two concern the New York City charter.

Chapter 400, which is in effect on Sept. 30, adds seven sections to the charter, for the regulation and conduct of public dancing academies. Each public dancing academy must pay a license of $50 a year, must be accessible to inspectors at all times, and must be properly ventilated. The selling of liquor is prohibited.

The other New York City charter amendment relates to the jurisdiction of courts of special sessions.

Most Important.

Perhaps the most important of the penal law amendments is that making the maximum punishment for kidnapping fifty instead of twenty-five years. Hereafter the punishment for extortion and blackmail will have five years as the minimum, while the maximum sentence remains fifteen years. It is now a misdemeanor to sell elevated or underground railroad transfer tickets. The phraseology is changed of the section making false registration a felony, and the period of juvenile delinquency is made definite, from the age of 7 to 16 years.

"Joy" riding constitutes a larceny, and those who borrow automobiles without the authority of their owner by Section 1239-a are declared to have stolen them and are liable to punishment accordingly. Then, by another amendment, a person who, with intent damages an automobile or other motor vehicle, is declared to be guilty of a misdemeanor.

A Corporation Law.

Since Sept. 1 it is unlawful for any corporation to practice or appear as an attorney at law for any person other than itself in any court, or to make it a business to practice as an attorney or render legal service, except for itself. The provision, how-

Old Woman an Heir to $200,000
Found After Years' Search

New York, Sept. 4.—After a search lasting many years the law firm of Niebrugge & Maxwell have discovered a woman now more than 80 years old who, they assert, is entitled to an estate of $200,000 left by Joseph W. Kendregan, a real estate operator of Waterbury, Conn.

The woman is living in San Francisco, and the lawyers are making arrangements to bring her here and make a claim for dower rights in the estate. The woman had a child, Mary who, it is declared, is entitled to the remainder of the estate, but the lawyers will not say that they have found her.

Residents of Waterbury thought that Kendregan, who died in 1907 without leaving a will, was a recluse, and it was only a short time before he died that it was learned he had a romantic marriage in his youth which ended unhappily.

The couple did not live happily, and soon after their girl was born the wife went West, taking the child with her. A few years later she returned and had the marriage annulled. After putting the child in an institution she departed for San Francisco, where she began life anew.

The husband entered the real estate business and amassed a fortune. He had lost all track of his wife and child, but in his declining years he yearned for them and began a systematic search. He employed numerous detectives and advertised extensively but no trace of the missing ones could be found. He died mourning them, it is said.

San Francisco lawyers finally found the wife, now more than 80 years old, a few weeks ago. It is said her marriage annulment was illegal.

AT ONION DINNER

Chairman of Hamilton Club Seeks Entertainment for The Executive.

OTHER PLANS PROGRESS

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Atlanta proposes to give President Taft another "possum dinner, and Spokane has plans for an apple dinner. What can Chicago set before him that will be distinctive?"

That question was discussed yesterday by the chairman of the various committees of the Hamilton club, which have the entertainment of President Taft in hand. They have culled their brains to find a menu of viands that are indigenous to this city, and had almost given up when suddenly Chesley R. Perry came to bat with a suggestion.

"Chicago," said he, "is said to be the Indian word meaning onion. Why not give the president an onion dinner?" he asked.

The idea seemed to be almost an inspiration and was greeted with much enthusiasm. But on further discussion the majority of the committees concluded there were obstacles in the way. Mr. Perry, however, stood by his guns to the last, and expatiated upon the beauties of the onion and the great nourishment that is contained in one of these tear compelling bulbs.

NEW INDIAN LANDS

C., M. and St. P. Road Expects A Rush of Settlers to Dakotas.

CONDITIONS OF DRAWING

Chicago, Sept. 4.—In preparation for the opening of the Standing Rock and Cheyenne River Indian reservations in the Dakotas by the federal government next month and an anticipated heavy registration, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has issued a circular setting forth the conditions of registration and location and qualities of the land open for drawing. The circular came from the press yesterday and will be distributed from all stations of the road.

The dates of registration are from Oct. 4 to Oct. 23, and the places of registration are Aberdeen, Mobridge and Lemmon, S. D. The drawings will be held at Aberdeen on Oct. 26.

Farms Open for 10,000.

The information given in the circular, in part, is as follows: "Standing Rock and Cheyenne River Indian Reservations.—These reservations are located in the north central portion of South Dakota. They are bounded on the east by the Missouri river and contain approximately 2,237,040 acres. There are about 10,000 farms of 160 acres each open to entry. The government has appraised these lands at from 50 cents to $6 an acre. Easy annual payments over a period of five years may be arranged.

"These lands are bounded on the east by the great Missouri river and on the south by the Cheyenne river. The principal rivers traversing these lands are the Grand river, Moreau river and Oak creek, and tributary to these streams are numerous creeks, furnishing excellent natural drainage for the entire territory.

Soil is Fertile.

"The soil, generally speaking, is a rich, black loam, underlaid with clay. The clay subsoil contains an almost inexhaustible supply of the most valuable soil ingredients—namely: soluble silica, lime, potash, nitrogen and decayed vegetable matter. The ground is easily pulverized and when the soil is once broken cultivation can be carried on with a minimum of labor.

"The total annual precipitation in this locality runs from sixteen to twenty-four inches. Good drinking water is found throughout this section at a depth of from twenty to fifty feet."
