

HAND OF DEATH IS FELT AT EATON, O.

Funeral Services of Mr. Waters and Mrs. Ada Baker Campbell Were Held.

HORSETHIEF ASSOCIATION

TOTAL MEMBERSHIP OF LAW ENFORCERS IS NOW 55—THE BODY HAS BEEN IN EXISTENCE FOR OVER TWENTY YEARS.

Eaton, O., Sept. 9.—The funeral of Mrs. Ada Baker Campbell, who died Sunday, was held at St. Paul's M. E. church, conducted by Rev. Earle M. Ellsworth and under the auspices of Dorcas Temple of Pythian Sisters. The deceased was aged 28 years and was the wife of Earl Campbell. She was one of the most beloved of Eaton's young women.

The funeral of Marion Waters, who died Monday morning of tuberculosis, was held this afternoon at the Presbyterian church, conducted by Rev. G. W. Gowdy of Lebanon, O., and under the auspices of Waverly lodge, Knights of Pythias. The deceased was aged 53 years and died of pulmonary tuberculosis. He leaves a widow.

The Preble County Horsethief Detective association has elected the following corps of officers for the coming year: President, George Morningstar; vice president, Perry Marker; secretary, John Dalrymple, assistant secretary, B. W. Pence; treasurer, Henry F. Ehler; chief, Scott Ewing; delegate, George Morningstar; directors, John Hendricks, Henry Pence, T. M. Kirkhoff and Earl R. Cook. The total membership of the organization now numbers 55, the body having been in existence for over twenty years. In that time the society has been re-organized twice. The roster of the association is growing rapidly. Delegate George Morningstar and a number of the members of the organization will attend the annual meeting of the National Horsethief Detective Association at Crawfordsville, Ind., October 6th.

Parishioners of St. Paul's M. E. church rejoice over the return of Rev. Earle M. Ellsworth to the Eaton charge. During his two years of service here, Rev. Ellsworth has proven himself to be a man of considerable ability and one possessed of that spirit and energy that makes for success and is productive of good results. He has done much for the church in Eaton.

THE TEASEL

A Queer Plant With Water Traps For Its Insect Victims.

Among common plants there are few more remarkable than the teasel. There is little doubt, says a well informed natural history contributor to the London Chronicle, that the teasel is as much a flesh eating organism as any spider that ever spun a web.

Moreover, its method of securing its victims, though quite as ingenious as that of the spider, is much more comprehensive as well as more efficacious. Not only does this extraordinary plant capture all species of flies and gnats, great or small, but caterpillars, slugs, wood lice and the like are all frequent victims.

How this is brought about forms one of the most wonderful incidents in nature's fascinating story of the year. The spider weaves her net of the finest silk; the teasel makes her snare out of dewdrops. The plant grows up straight as a church spire, throwing out its leaves in pairs at intervals up the juked green stem. The twin leaves unite at their base to form a deep cup, and the leaves are so contrived that the moisture precipitated on them runs down into this reservoir.

A well developed plant will thus catch and hold in four or five of these water traps a full half pint of liquid, and the heat of the sun appears to evaporate so little of it that the cups will be brimming even at the close of a hot June day. The smooth, steep leaves all lead down into these pits, and their gradient gets sharper as the water is approached.

Thus the teasel's victims are made to "walk the plank" to their death, and once in the water there is no hope of return. They soon drown, and every teasel well has at its bottom a layer of slime formed by their disintegrated bodies.

It is of course difficult to prove that this deposit is absorbed by the plant as nutriment, but careful dissection will show at the base of each cup a ring of apertures—sink holes, in fact—which lead into the substance of the stem and the presence of which affords little room for doubt on the matter.

DRIVING A NAIL

More to It Than Simply Hammering It Into the Wood.

One who thinks that the driving of a nail consists simply in getting the whole length of it out of sight has little conception of the real nature of the operation, says the Scientific American. A nail driven by an expert will often hold several times as much as one ill driven, while, too, it is often made to draw the parts into place. If you have ever watched a mechanic driving nails you have doubtless noted that he rarely drives one at right angles with the face of the work. There is a reason for this. Suppose that he is nailing the "sheeting" on the frame of a building and desires to draw the board down tightly against the one below it. He points the nail downward, and a few well considered blows at the last produce the desired effect. If the board is bent edgewise, so that much force is required, probably he will start the nail in the upper edge, pointing very sharply downward.

Again, two nails driven in a board at different angles will hold it in place much more firmly than the same nails would if they were driven at right angles with the face of the board.

Did you ever notice that in driving a nail in very hard wood one man will do it successfully, while another succeeds only in doubling the nail up before the point has fairly entered the wood? The difference lies in the fact that the expert strikes the nail fairly and not too hard, "coaxing" it in, while the other strikes too hard and with indirection. It may be properly mentioned right here that in driving a nail into very hard wood it is usually profitable to dip the end in oil or grease. This will not sensibly interfere with the holding qualities of the nail, while it will be found to very materially facilitate its driving.

His One Good Trait.

Loafer—Can yer spare us a 'penny, mate?

Workingman—Wotcher want a 'penny for?

Loafer—Cos I got one, and I wants another for the price of 'arf a pint.

Workingman—Ever done a day's work in yer life?

Loafer—No, guv'nor, cawn't say as I 'ave.

Workingman—Well, yer never done a pore bloke out of a job, anyway. 'Ere's yer 'a'penny.—London Punch.
