CEMETERY COMPANY OFFERS NEW LEASE

Club Members, However, Do
Not Desire to Erect Building
On Site Which They Can
Have Only Ten Years.

The advisability of securing a new club house site was discussed at a meeting of the members of the Richmond Country Club last evening. It is probable that a handsome new club house will be erected at Highland Park, east of the city next year, unless a more satisfactory arrangement can be made with the Earlham cemetery association.

The association is not willing to lease the grounds on which the club is now located for a period of more than ten years and asks $450 a year rental. Members of the club do not believe it would be advisable to put $3,000 in a new club house there for so short a time.

Want to Lease Land.

The cemetery association is especially desirous of leasing the grounds to the club in view of the fact that when the lease expires the grounds will be in perfect condition and the otherwise expense of improving them will be avoided. However, they refuse to lease the grounds for a longer time than ten years and, according to members, that is not long enough.

In all probability a one-year lease will be taken out from the association, and a company will be formed to buy the property at the old fair grounds site, National road, east, called Highland Park. These grounds can be made into a very desirable location for the club. The grounds are ample and consist of a number of beautiful rolling hills where a sporty golf course might be constructed. There is also street car service directly to the grounds. The proposed company would also erect a handsome club house.

LITTLE GIRL LOST

Pretty Miss Deloris Kortwright
Had Real Adventure
Today.

WAS ON A SHOPPING TOUR

Little Deloris Kortwright, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kortwright, of Fifth and Main streets, was found this morning by Patrolman Scott Winters, wandering aimlessly around in the vicinity of Eighth and Main alone. The child was taken to police headquarters but was too badly frightened to tell her name or where she lived. Deloris had a pony grasped tightly in her hand when found by the policemen and it is presumed that she was out to do a little shopping on her own account.

The anxious mother rushed frantically into police headquarters later in the morning and on seeing her child was profuse in her thanks to the officers for her safe return. Chief of Police Staabach had his hands full for while amusing the youthful charge, but he kept her from crying, even if it did require some rather burlesque gestures on the part of the big chief.

Aged Empress is Traveling in Ireland

NOISES IN VENICE.

The Way They Crash Upon the Normal Quiet of the City.

With all the water traffic and with not a horse or a cab or a wagon to while the echoes, the utter silence of Venice is the thing that first impresses
the traveler. Yet, though there is no underneath of city noises in which occasional noises may merge the Grand canal at Venice seems to the sleeper at night the noisiest place in the world, for every little noise crashes into one's sleep, and the most wakeful hours of our six weeks in Italy were spent on the Grand canal in Venice.

The bells of the churches probably do not ring louder nor more frequently than they do in other cities, yet, because Venice is so still these bells ring through the night like the alarm of a earthquake and ever increasing fire. The bawl of a lonesome human calf carrying home three sticks and a throbbing heart, a noise that may be heard by the attentive listener any place on earth after 11 o'clock,
in Venice becomes insistent and demo-nized. The common quarrel in the street enters the bedroom at night with noise racing distinctness, and the moraling song of the market gardener bringing his wares to town in his silent boat smites the sleeper's ears like a call to arms. If Macbeth really did murder sleep, the crime was done in Venice.

There are, of course, considerable acres in Venice—Islands—where the streets are paved and where commerce goes on in the ordinary way, except that there are no horses or carriages
in the narrow ways.—William Allen White in Emporia Gazette.

A Professor of "Fine Arts" Gives Women Tip on Dressing

Chicago, Sept. 23.—The "excelsior" woman and the fleshy woman have come into their own. A new cult, of the "psychology of lines," has come to their relief and offers to add to the knowledge of dressmakers in clothing women so that they will seem to have good figures—even if they have not.

The master of the new science is Carl N. Wernitz of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, who showed his "psychology" to the Chicago Dressmakers' club at the Palmer house yesterday.

The man with the new cult used a chalk talk to prove the merits of the psychology to the women. He drew figures such as little Willie makes on his slate at school, and he made the same figure represent a Jack Spratt-like leanness and a Mrs. Spratt-like fatness, just by a few odd strokes of charcoal. With stripes he would have the dressmakers do the same for the figures that nature made in a hurry.

"A woman is fat or slim, always according to the psychology of lines in her dress," explained Mr. Wernitz.

"Here are two vertical lines of equal height. I illustrate my point," he said, as he marked upon a sheet of drawing paper. "At either end of the first line I draw angles, their sides spreading out from the center line. You note the effect. The line is made slender. That is the remedy for the fat lady."

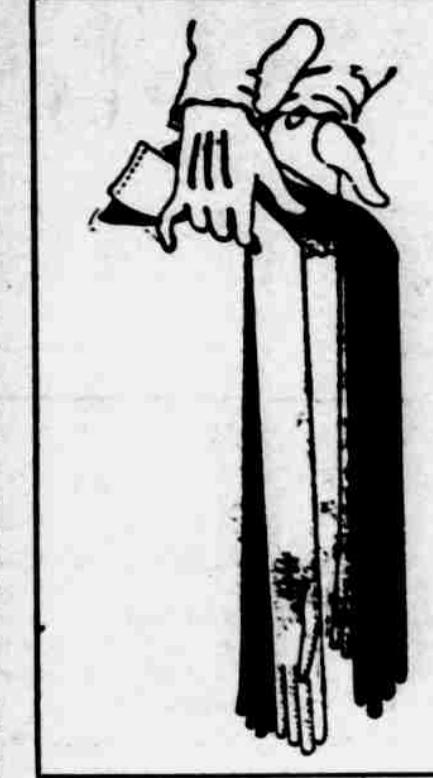

"I make angles at the ends of the other line, with the open of the angles pointing up and down, away from the center line. The line appears broad. That is the narrow lady."

TARDY.

School teachers say that there are more cases of tardiness on Monday morning than any other morning in the week. The reason is plainly evident. As the mother is busy washing and has not time to attend to anything else, the children are neglected. Start earlier and use rub-a-lac and have the children there by school time. Rub-a-lac is so cheap you should not do without it. Ask your grocer for it and try it.

"Here is something very elegant," says the salesman, piloting the lady through the display of beds. "This is our latest design in twin beds and is one of the most popular things we sell. I would suggest that you cannot do better than to buy them."
