delighted his audience. His intellectual interpretation of the great poet's dramatization of various phases of the life of one of the heroes of history was beyond par. He received the heartiest applause by his excellent delivery of Mark Anthony's oration and the quarrel between Julius and Cassius. Mr. Howard has several times been called one of the greatest dramatic readers of the age and the truth of the assertion was forcibly and thoroughly demonstrated to his listeners last evening. Family Cough Syrup

Cures Any Cough in Five Hours. NEW PRESCRIPTION HERE.

Here is given the most effective cough prescription known to the medical world. It is a mild laxative, too, and this is what the body needs when suffering with cough and cold on the lungs. A cough or cold indicates poisons in the system, causing inflammation and congestion. Nearly all cough syrups relieve, but make the trouble worse by their constipating effects. This prescription not only relieves quickly, but it cures any cough that is curable. Get one-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Mix in a bottle. Take for acute cough or bronchitis twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less according to age. A few hours' treatment will cure and heal the throat and lungs of all but consumptives. Cut this out and give it to some friend who may need it to be saved from an early death by consumption.

Pure Food and the State Health Law

(By Dr. J. N. Hurty, Secretary State Board of Health, written especially for the Palladium.)

Not a few of our laws are resultants of our complex civilization, which certainly tends toward higher complexity. Among such laws are those which in their object the protection of the public health, and the protection of the food supply against adulteration. With the memory of living man, such a thing as food adulteration was unknown. In pioneer days, feeding was simple and more rational than in these times. Then, families sat down to tables which were supplied with pork and beans of home production, to corn bread, apple sauce, chickens raised naturally in woods and fields, to milk and butter produced from non-tuberculous, non-swift fed cows, which stood almost at the kitchen door, doughnuts, hot from the sizzling lard; pumpkin pies made from pumpkin which had been confined for months; hominy made in the very room in which it was eaten, instead of being taken from a can filled in a frame shed somewhere and called a canning factory. And what delicious flavors were attendant upon all of these articles. With what joy did they salute the gustatory nerve, and how gratefully they were received by the stomach.

But these days are not necessarily gone, for even now it is not necessary to live the cannibal life. The city dweller finds the canned life handy and convenient, and lives it at the cost of the good health and superior enjoyment which attend simple and more natural nutrition. If he would supply himself with a "fireless-cooker," and in the evening before retiring would start his plain breakfast in it, he would in the morning have food, which would give him superior gustatory pleasure, a clear head and abundant energy. Instead of a simple rational breakfast, our city dweller has embalmed hog, better known as ham and bacon, or highly spiced sausage, or beefsteak from a tuberculous animal or from an animal slaughtered and its meat kept under the most revolting conditions. Eggs, most always from cold storage, are added, and all is washed down with black coffee. Such a breakfast is not a balanced ration. It makes too much soot and ash and so clogs the furnace grates and the boiler's flues. Clearness of head does not attend, and kidneys and liver suffer from over work in clearing away the debris. In time, Bright's disease appears, and the victim wonders where it came from. "Why was I selected to have this malady?" he asks. Eat plain, unembalmed foods, cooking them well. Potatoes, rice, hominy, vegetables, fruit, cornmeal, well baked, whole wheat flour bread, milk from healthy animals and a clean dairy, fresh eggs or none. What more can one want? Darwin, Spencer, Pasteur lived entirely upon such food, and they did some good work, too. A gentleman of my acquaintance was one time a guest of Darwin's on his farm in Kent. For supper bread and milk was offered; nothing more, and no apology. Darwin's work was certainly worth a million times more to humanity than the work of Harriman. Rich, highly spiced foods, pickles, fancy cooking, much meat are all hard on kidneys and livers.

Excessive use of salt is injurious. The blood and the body need only a very little salt. A body weighing 150 pounds contains only a little over one ounce. We all eat a great deal more salt than is for our good. Certain forms of stomach troubles are caused by excessive salt eating. If your stomach hurts, try cutting out salt, salads, pickles, meats, and chew your plain foods extra well. You will find this treatment has the pepsin and drug treatment skinned a mile. Well, the whole lesson is—pure food laws are needed principally because we will not eat rationally. It is the same with health laws. We need health laws because we refuse to live according to the natural laws of our well-being. We have consumption, because we spit, because we just will not thoroughly ventilate our school-rooms, our bed-rooms, our offices, our churches and our public halls. We ride in closed trolley cars and breathe the fetid air which has already been down into the lungs of others, we heave in alcohol and meats and spices, and fray our nerves with caffeine. Old Solomon said: "Be ye not among wine bibbers, among riotous eaters of flesh." We have typhoid fever, and spend enough on it annually to present every member of the legislature and each door keeper with a red automobile, just because we will not dispose of human and animal manure in a sanitary way. Sir Henry Treves, King Edward's physician, who has grown rich off disease, has said: "When simplicity and frugality of living is achieved, voluntary celibacy will become discreditable, and the premature deaths of the bread-winners will disappear before sanctified cities and vanishing intemperance."

FUNERAL WEDNESDAY

Raimaro Paige, Who Died Sunday, Will Be Given Private Burial.

WAS A PROMINENT MASON

Friends may call Tuesday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock. It is requested that flowers be omitted.

Diplomatic Objection.

"My dear," says the cigar manufacturer to his wife, "while it will be very pleasing to you to have a Paris gown, have you stopped to think of the criticisms and jests such a procedure would insure from my competitors?" It would hurt my business, really."

"Nonsense! How could it?" asks the wife.

"Why, they would point me out as the man who didn't know the business any better than to allow a domestic fillet to be put into an imported wrapper!"—Life.

Gives $15,000 For Fun of Seeing Women Spend It

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Adolph J. Lichstern, 3736 Michigan avenue, believes his wife and daughter should have plenty of spending money—without waiting for his death. The idea of getting rid of wealth while alive and seeing how it is being spent caught Mr. Lichstern's fancy.

As soon as the idea flashed across his mind Mr. Lichstern put it into active operation. He called up his lawyer on the phone. Arrangements were made and soon after the idea was born Mrs. Lichstern, her daughter Lucile and Mr. Lichstern's four sisters, Mrs. Alma Becker, Mrs. Gertrude Sickle, Mrs. Clara La Londa and Mrs. Flora Skillings, were the possessors of an annual income of $2,500. Mr. Lichstern had arranged that the income from the property at 160-162 Washington street, amounting to $15,000, be equally divided among the six relatives.

"Love and affection for the beneficiaries" is the consideration mentioned in the declaration of trust filed yesterday.

"I wanted to give them this property while I am alive," explained Mr. Lichstern last night. "Of course, I could not very well divide the property itself, so I have arranged that each will receive her share of the income from it. They will begin to receive the money beginning today. The trust specifies that they get this as long as they live.

"I have more money than I can use, and, if I write a will, I will give this money to these same relatives. I want to have the pleasure of seeing them enjoy it now."
