Remembered the Text.
A little Tokpeka girl came home from church the other day and was asked what the minister's text was. "I know it all right," she asserted. "Well, repeat it," her questioner demanded. "Don't be afraid and I will get you a bedquilt," was the astonishing answer. Investigation proved that the central thought of the sermon had been, "Fear not, and I will send you a comforter."—Kansas City Journal.

End of His Dream.
"I thought you said you were going to have a den in your new house."
"Yes, I did expect to, but after it had gone so far that we couldn't change things my wife discovered that she would need another closet."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Great Lie is Like a Great Fish on Dry Land; it may fret and fling and make a frightful bother, but it cannot hurt you. You have only to keep still and it will die of itself.—Craib.

Up to Date.

"Well, well," remarked old Mr. Pastanogon, "the young women of today are not what they were in my time."
"No?" replied Miss Huskie.
"No, indeed. Why, all you young women nowadays are muscular athletes."

"That's so. In the proud lexicon of feminine youth there is no such word as 'frail.'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

STANDARD OF LIVING

If Set by the Cheapest Man Society Retrogrades.

LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND

A False and Specious Doctrine That Trades Unionism Resents—Based on Greed and Desire to Profit at Humanity's Expense.

It has been a pet phrase of those who favor low wages that "the law of supply and demand" must, in the natural order of events, control the labor market—if there are three men for the one job, then the one who will work for the smallest sum is properly entitled to the situation.

Civilization advances as the people move forward. All that retards progress is a handicap. If living conditions are to have a standard set by the cheapest man, whose individual needs may be of such a nature as to preclude the home life of a community from following its normal way, then the people of the era will suffer and the backward tendency become more marked as time goes on.

Time and again have employers endeavored to impress this specious cry of "supply and demand" on their employees. Trades unionism resents the doctrine and in so doing is proving of service to all.

There are recognized among thinking men and women certain requisites necessary to enable our present day civilization to be tolerable. One of these is a wage sufficient to provide for the home and those living therein. While we live under a competitive system that, it is hoped, will be improved as time goes on, it is desirable that we should make the most of the work at hand. In objecting to the "law of supply and demand" we are making no false move, for it is based primarily on greed and the desire to save or make money even at the expense of the community life.

At the present time unfortunately there are thousands of men and women without employment. It might be possible to reduce wages because of this condition. If this were done there wouldn't be any more work to be obtained as a result, and merchants and mechanics would suffer.

There is a persistent and growing demand for educational facilities, for reasonable leisure, for books and pictures, for a home with all the civilizing influences. Setting its face sternly against all these is the "law of supply and demand."

There isn't an employer who takes advantage of periods of depression who would not resent encroachments on his home life. We will admit that the man in business frequently suffers severely from dull times. We are not now considering the problem of making money, but the larger issue of whether the children should be properly fed and educated and whether the mother should be secure in providing for the household needs.

From every standpoint—the economic, the sociological and the humanitarian—there come objections to the "law of supply and demand" as applied to men, women and children. The latter have long been victims to the "law," and the searchlight has revealed the need of preventing loss of life and stunted moral and physical growth. It is impossible to measure human life by the yardstick of the goods store or the weight of the grocer's commodities. There are so many essential things to be considered that this article of protest has hardly been able to do more than touch the surface.—Painter and Decorator.

Labor in the Old Days.

A statute of King Edward VI. provided that laborers could work only at a "certain price or rate," under penalty in certain cases "of the pillory or loss of an ear." Another statute provided that if a man refused to work at wages fixed by law he was to be branded with the letter "V" (meaning vagabond) and reduced to slavery for two years. If he attempted to escape, he was branded with an "S" and made a slave for life. If he then had spirit enough to protest he was hanged. It was not until 1795 that an English workman could legally seek work outside his own parish. Down to 1779 miners in Scotland were obliged to work in the pit as long as their employers chose to keep them there, and they were legally sold as part of the plant.

W. T. U. L. National Officers.

The recent convention of the National Women's Trades Union league, held at Chicago, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Raymond Robins of Chicago; first vice president, Mrs. Mary K. O'Sullivan of Boston; second vice president, Miss Melinda Scott of New York City; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. D. W. Kneifer of St. Louis. Mrs. Robins is a sister of Miss Mary E. Dreier of Montague terrace, Brooklyn, who is president of the Women's Trades Union league of Greater New York and delegate to the Brooklyn Central Labor union.

Printers' Wages in Hungary.

President Gompers found on his visit to Hungary that 95 per cent of the men and women engaged in the printing trades were organized. A low wage scale generally prevails, the minimum pay for day work being $4 per week, although on the average the wages reach a little more than $8.—Typographical Journal.

Subtraction That Adds.

The air was sweet with the smell of willow wood, and the artificial limb maker was adjusting a delicate metal spring in a superb leg.

"This one of a pair of legs," he said, "I am making for an aviator. They are longer legs than his own were. His height before the accident was only five feet six. Now, with these legs, he will be five feet ten."

"Men all like to be tall. And short men, when as sometimes happens, they lose both legs, gratify this universal desire for height by ordering wooden legs of an excessive length."

"Yes, paradoxical though it seems, cut a short man's legs off and he becomes taller."—Exchange.
