Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by HENRY CATARRH CURE. Send for circulars free.

Won Trophies from the Kaiser

Alexander S. Cochran of New York and his yacht, the Westward, which won all the races in which she was started at Warnemunde, Germany, defeating the Kaiser's Meteor and other fast racing schooner-yachts. On June 26, at Kiel Mr. Cochran's schooner won the Jubilee prize on a stiff breeze, the Meteor coming in second. On July 1, the Westward won the Emperor's cup in a rain storm over a 77-mile course. On July 3 in a soft breeze the Westward came in first after leading by a good margin all the way. Mr. Cochran inherited $25,000,000 from his uncle, Warren B. Smith, the carpet manufacturer and $15,000,000 from his father.

THE PRIZE PRESENT.

It Was the Gem of the Wedding Gifts He Assured the Bride.

Bored, unappealingly bored, he found himself in the room where the gifts were displayed. But then he might as well be here as any place else, he argued, for everything connected with a wedding was a bore. His gaze wandered listlessly over the collection of silver, meat forks, cut glass berry bowls and onyx clocks till it fell on a faded little Japanese print almost hidden behind a hideous chafing dish that looked as if it might have been handed down by the stiff duffers.

In another moment he was before it, gazing with excitement, the spirit of the collector rampant.

"An Utamaro, sure as you're alive!" he exclaimed, looking about for some one with whom to share his joy. Anybody would do, so he tapped a stranger on the shoulder and announced with the air of reporting the discovery of a diamond mine, "It's an Utamaro, the real thing!"

"A what?" asked the man, adjusting his glasses.

"It is by Utamaro, the master of Japanese artists," he answered as he fled in search of his wife. She would understand. "To think of wasting it on those donkeys who won't know it from a signboard!" he grumbled.

He found her shaking hands with the bride, so he rushed up and rung the girl's hand enthusiastically. "I have just been admiring that peachy Utamaro!" he exclaimed excitedly.

"A peachy Utamaro! What's that?" asked the bride, mystified.

"That rare old Japanese print up there. It's the gem of your whole lay-out."

"Oh!" exclaimed the bride faintly, looking a little queer, so he thought, as she turned to greet another guest.

As his wife dragged him away he demanded to know what the Dickens was the matter with that Utamaro.

"It was our present to them," she moaned. "I didn't dare tell you. You would have wanted it for your collection."—Los Angeles Times.

A BOSTON LANDMARK.

The Grasshopper Weather Vane Perched atop Fanell Hall.

Perched on the cupola of Fanell hall is a grasshopper weather vane which is not only one of the oldest vases in the country, but is famous as the product of one of America's earliest woodcarvers and artisans, Shem Drowne of Boston.

Drowne's shop was on Ann street in the north end.

Of the many vases he made only three are now known to be in existence—the one on the Shepard Memorial church in Cambridge, which formerly was on the steeple of the New Brick church on Hanover street in this city and known as the revenge vane; the one in the collection of the Massachusetts Historical society, a relic of the old Boston province house, and the one on Fanell hall.

This grasshopper of copper, hammered out by hand, has large glassy eyes, which in the sunlight shine like fire. It was made in 1742 at the order of Peter Fanell when the hall, his gift to the town, was nearing completion.

It has not, however, lived a life of unbroken peace, for several times it has been near destruction. In 1755, when Boston was shaken by an earthquake, the vane fell to the ground, but after being supplied with a new leg by the son of the man who made it it was replaced.

Five years later Fanell hall was seriously damaged by fire, but the vane remained intact, and when the hall was rebuilt the grasshopper was once more given the place of honor.

Another disaster befell it when in 1830 a flag was being raised to celebrate the anniversary of the evacuation of the city by the British. The hooper hopped to the street below. But in a few days it hopped right back again, and there it has remained ever since, with the exception of an occasional removal for repairs.—Boston Globe.

When Solid Iron Fleets.

Experiments have shown that if a ball of solid iron be lowered into a mass of liquid iron by means of a metal fork the ball at first sinks to the bottom with the fork, but that in a few seconds it will leave the prongs and rise to the surface, where it continues to float until it melts. The rising is explained by the expansion of the ball, due to heating, whereby it becomes, bulk for bulk, less dense than the molten metal.—St. Louis Republic.

THE FASHIONABLE DOG.

THE FASHIONABLE DOG.

Samoyede Canine Pets Are "It" This Summer.

THE LATEST FAVORITE OF FASHION.

The Samoyede dog is the latest craze in canine pets for fashionable folk. This dog is a sort of four footed Admiration Crichton. He can do anything you ask of him—that is, anything within canine powers—and he can do it very well. He comes from the northeast of Russia, and, although new as a smart pet, he is the oldest domesticated dog in the world.

He is an ideal dog for children—intelligent, quick to learn tricks, good tempered and gentle, intensely affectionate, faithful and invariably well behaved. In short, he is a perfect four footed gentleman.

The Samoyede does splendidly harnessed singly or in pairs to a child's go-cart. He takes to harness naturally, is untiring and strong and, to use a horsey expression, "quite without vice."

Apart from these excellent traits of character, the Samoyede dog's appearance is distinctly "fetching." In the puppy stage he is a fascinating little creature with a soft, fluffy white coat, for all the world like a Teddy bear. As he grows older he passes through the usual leggy state and at about a year old develops into a most aristocratic-looking animal, very handsome and attractive, with long white fur standing straight out from the body, each hair having the icelike glisten peculiar to the breed.

Standing nearly as tall as a collie, ears pricked, eyes expressive, tail a spreading plume—not coiled tightly, like a chow—the striking appearance and elegant carriage of the Samoyede attract attention wherever he goes.

The Champion.

"By the way," continued the near sport, "who is the lightweight champion of America?"

"It is still a matter of doubt," answered the wise guy. "Some claim the title for the coal dealer, while others say the ice man is entitled to it."—Chicago News.

PAINTING THE WORLD.

Indian Legend of the Way Spring Came into Existence.

Once, long before there were men in the world, all the earth was covered with snow and ice.

White and frozen lay the rivers and the seas; white and frozen lay the plains. The mountains stood tall and dead, like ghosts in white gowns. There was no color except white in all the world except in the sky, and it was almost black. At night the stars looked through it like angry eyes.

Then God sent the Spring down into the world—the Spring with red lips and curling yellow hair.

In his arms he bore sprays of apple blossoms and of the first flowers—crocuses, anemones and violets, red, pink, blue, purple, violet and yellow.

The first animal to greet the Spring was the white rabbit. The Spring dropped a red crocus on his head, and ever since then all white rabbits have had red eyes.

Then the Spring dropped a blue violet on a white bird, the first bird to greet the Spring, and that is the way the bluebirds were made. Ever since then it is the first bird to arrive when the Spring comes down from heaven.

So the Spring went through the world. Wherever he tossed the leaves from his fragrant burden the earth became green. He tossed the blossoms on the frozen seas, and the ice melted and the fish became painted with all the tint of his flowers. That is the way the trout and the minnows and the salmon became gay.

Only the high mountains would not bow to the Spring. So their summits remain white and dead, for they would let the Spring paint only the sides.

The snow owls and the white geese and the polar bears fled from the Spring, so they, too, remain white to this day.

Curious Tombstone.

On a gravestone in the parish churchyard of Great Yarmouth, England, there is sculptured the unusual representation of a clown seated in a tub, which is being drawn down a river by two swans. Beneath this stone lies one of the many victims who were drowned years ago by the collapse of an iron suspension bridge on which they had crowded to see a clown pass underneath in the manner described. The feat, which was a novel form of advertisement by a traveling circus, was actually performed, but the rush of people from one side of the bridge to the other after the man had passed under caused the tragic ending.

More Acceptable.

The judge frowned down on the humorous tramp.

"At first I was disposed to give you a year and a quarter," said the former in stern tones, "but now I think I'll drop the quarter and give you a year."

The humorous tramp looked up quickly.

"Your honor, why don't you make yourself a good fellow and drop de year and give me de quarter?"—New York World.

A NEW WEAVE OF SWEATER.

The Long Effect in These Coats Is Smartest.

FOR THE GOLFING GIRL.

If any girl can go through the summer without a sweater she is a rare specimen of femininity. Its uses are infinite and too many to enumerate. Each year the type of sweater varies. Last season we had the long style, and this summer the longer lengths are still modish, but the difference in this year's sweater is in the weave. The illustration shows one of the newest and smartest of the season's weaves, a broad fancy stripe, which is very becoming to the figure.

Charge It to the Woman.

That cheerful farce known to the public as an "inquiry" into the causes of the cost of living" assumes more amazing proportions day by day. Somebody or something is to blame for the prohibitive prices which mock our indignance, and under no circumstances may the sensitive feelings of the protectionists be hurt. Consequently political economists who are not calm enough to share the frank indifference of congress offer us strange and artless solutions of a problem which has grown too formidable for play, says Agnes Repplier.

The most original of all these suggestions comes from an instructor in economics in the Wharton School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania, who holds that food is dear because women buy it and women "b" no basis for estimating the value what they spend." Money to a represents so many hours or day labor. Money to a woman stands no economic effort. The price of commodities is unreasonably dear because of the "extravagant willingness of women to pay for them."

If this be true all that is needed to reduce the cost of living is that men shall shop and market. The poultryer will not venture to ask $2.50 for a pair of chickens; the dairyman will blush at the mere thought of demanding 50 cents a dozen for eggs when confronted by the wage earner of the family. Hogs were quoted recently at a figure calculated to make these lordly animals swagger in their sties, but they will soon be reduced to humility and moderation if the father of the family buys the morning sausage. Even the cook will cheerfully accept $4 a week instead of $7 when her master pays her wages, especially if she can be brought to understand that he is philosophically indifferent to his food and that it was only the "extravagant willingness" of her mistress to pay her $7 which made her ask so much.

The Charm of Enthusiasm.

Have you ever realized what a charm there is in enthusiasm? Life is so often monotonous that we like occasionally to be awakened up with interest, and the person who is radiant over small things is always a delight.

The girl who carries enthusiasm into her work as well as into her play will find that she holds a winning card.

Work that is done for the "joy of working" is likely to be well done. Lack of interest makes the dull routine, remarks a writer. It brings discontent and often failure. The man who succeeds is the man who can inspire both themselves and others by their magnetic personality, and there is nothing so magnetic as enthusiasm. People will follow us, like us and admire us if we have it. It is worth cultivating if it is not natural endowment.

Pleasantness a Tonic.

Don't be afraid of being pleasant. It cannot hurt you and will be as good as a tonic for all you meet.

What though you do think yourself superior to most of your acquaintances, is it good taste to placard your belief by a freezing countenance?

There is nothing like affability to conceal one's family skeletons. A haughty manner is a direct bid for the rest of the world to rake up ancestral secrets that you thought buried.

Wanted to Be Truthful.

On one occasion Hall Caine met a fellow writer who had to confess that he had never read any of his books.

It was during one of Mr. Caine's visits to the United States, when, at a banquet given in his honor, Thomas Nelson Page had been asked to introduce the guest of the evening. Just before the toasts began one of the diners passed his menu card round the table with the request that Mr. Caine would sign his autograph upon it as a memento of the occasion.

"Good idea," said Nelson Page. "I'll send my card along now. I've got to introduce Hall Caine in a few minutes, and I want to be able to say that I have read something he has written."

He Wouldn't Tell.
