A WEAK WOMAN AND HER STORY

In Floral, Ark., Lives a Lady Who Feels That Her Strength Was Restored by Cardui.

Floral, Ark.—"I must speak a good word for Cardui," writes Mrs. Viola Baker, of this place.

"About a month ago I was in very bad health. I was so weak and nervous that I was not able to do my housework."

"My husband bought me one bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic. I took it according to directions and now I am in good health."

"I think Cardui is a fine tonic for weak women."

And you are not the only lady who thinks so, Mrs. Baker.

"Thousands, like you, have written to tell of the wonderful benefit Cardui has been to them."

Cardui contains no minerals, or other powerful drugs. It contains no glycerin or other marshmallow-tasting ingredients.

It is just a pure, natural extract of natural vegetable herbs, that have been found to regulate the womanly functions and strengthen the female system.

All druggists sell Cardui.

See yours about it.

These having been provided, the chief juggler made a small tentlike structure with the canvas and some stools. He then placed his assistant in the sack and allowed a sailor to tie the knot which bound him a fast prisoner. This done, the chief carried the sack into an open space, warning the people to stand back some distance, and then carried on an animated conversation with his assistant, whose replies could be distinctly heard coming from the sack. Suddenly the chief rushed forward, picked up the sack and dumped it overboard, where, to the horror of the passengers and crew, it sank out of sight.

Immediately the captain rushed forward and seized the man under the full belief that he had murdered his companion, but the juggler only smiled and, pointing to the canvas, asked that it be raised. This was done, and the supposed drowned man was discovered squatting on the deck. So realistic had been the throwing overboard, however, that it was some time before the surprised passengers could realize a murder had not been committed.

How a Bird Dresses.

As bird fashions do not change, two suits a year are quite enough for most birds, but those need to take great care of them. Each separate feather must be cleaned and looked over and the useless ones pulled out. These feathers are not packed close together, you know, but lie loose and have places between filled with air. When a bird wants to get warmer he lifts his feathers so that these air spaces may be larger. But if his feathers are tangled or wet and dirty he could not raise them, and soon be could not keep the head in his little body and would, of course, die.

A JUGGLER'S TRICK.

Clever Feat of Illusion Performed by an East Indian.

A retired naval official who served long in the east says the feats of the East Indian jugglers are wonderful.

He cites one.

While he was an officer on board a P. and O. steamship two natives came aboard at Madras, he says. They were a juggler and his assistant. After they had performed a number of minor feats and had gathered quite a crowd around them they called for a sack and a piece of salicloth.

These having been provided, the chief juggler made a small tentlike structure with the canvas and some stools. He then placed his assistant in the sack and allowed a sailor to tie the knot which bound him a fast prisoner.

This done, the chief carried the sack into an open space, warning the people to stand back some distance, and then carried on an animated conversation with his assistant, whose replies could be distinctly heard coming from the sack. Suddenly the chief rushed forward, picked up the sack and dumped it overboard, where, to the horror of the passengers and crew, it sank out of sight.

Immediately the captain rushed forward and seized the man under the full belief that he had murdered his companion, but the juggler only smiled and, pointing to the canvas, asked that it be raised. This was done, and the supposed drowned man was discovered squatting on the deck. So realistic had been the throwing overboard, however, that it was some time before the surprised passengers could realize a murder had not been committed.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by an operation.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When the tube is closed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation is removed the ear will not hear again.

Tells of New Epoch in Farming

Leader in Scientific Agriculture Directs Illinois Teachers to Guarantee Greater Ease and Wealth for Farmers.

Speaking before the Country Teachers' Association of Illinois Normal last evening, L. H. Malley, director of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell and chairman of the commission of country life appointed by ex-President Roosevelt, told facts of interest to farmers all over the country. The subject of his address was "Leadership in Country Life," and an abstract of the speech follows:

We are meeting in one of the most prolific agricultural regions in the world. There is probably no other area anywhere so full of the fatness of the land as the mid region of the great Mississippi valley. This is to be the center of one of the great world units. It is important not only to you who live here, but to all people everywhere what kind of civilization you develop on these great prairies and plains.

This is an epoch of reconstruction in every line of human endeavor. All institutions and ideas are being challenged. The period of human drift is passing, and we are beginning consciously to build new civilizations. We must rebuild the open country with the rest, not because the open country is decadent, but because all society is progressing.

Country Must Solve Problems.

The reconstruction of the open country must depend in the main on the efforts of the country people themselves. We are glad of all interchange of populations; the influx of country blood has thus far been the salvation of cities; the outgo of city people has set new aspirations into the country, and it is still necessary to call on the cities for labor in times of pressure; but stated in its large terms, the open country will rise no higher than the aspirations of the people who live there and the problems must be solved in such a way that they will meet the conditions as they exist on the spot. It is therefore of the utmost importance that the country people themselves be roused to the necessity of a reconstruction of rural civilization.

Profitable Farming Not Sufficient.

It is the very first duty of every man to earn a decent living for himself and those dependent upon him. We must all learn how to be better farmers; and a countryman cannot expect to have much influence on his time and community until he makes his farm pay in dollars and cents.

But the final object in life is not to make money, but
