THE SCRAP BOOK*LIVER TWIST.

The New Medicine That Mr. Blodgett Did Not Buy.

Mr. Blodgett, who lives out of town, fancies he is afflicted with liver complaint and in consequence tries every new medicine that comes on the market, fondly expecting it to prove effective for his particular malady. Not only that, but he swallows every sample of medicine left at the door by canvassers and anxiously continues his search for something new.

"Did you ever hear of liver twist, Maria?" was Blodgett's first remark to his wife as he came home from business a few evenings since.

"No, I never heard of it, but I suppose I shall have to get you a bottle if you want to try it," was the answer.

"I will find out something more about it tomorrow and see if they have any testimonials before we get it."

"I don't think you need mind about the testimonials for you will take it anyway," said Mrs. Blodgett wearily.

When Mr. Blodgett came home the next evening his wife said, "Charles, have you got that bottle of liver twist yet?"

"Well—no—er—you see, Maria, there's no such thing."

"No such thing!" exclaimed the astonished Maria.

"No, I saw it advertised in big letters on a barn. It just said liver twist and that was all. This morning I saw it on a fence the other side of the road, and then I looked at the barn to see where the mistake was, and I found that the first board was pulled off, and it was an advertisement for a theater, and the name of the play was 'Liver Twist.'—New York Press.

His Warning.
 A voluble faker was selling bottles of a mixture he called hair grower on a street corner. He said:

"Yes, gentle, one bottle of this unrivaled hair grower will raise a rich, luxuriant crop of hair on the balddest head in the crowd. But let me give you this one word of warning."

Here he paused to pocket a half dollar and hand a bottle of the liquid to a baldhead.

"My warning is: Do not neglect when the full head of hair is grown to take the last dose in the bottle internally, that is, swallow it."

"Swallow it. What for?" the buyer asked.

"To clinch the roots," was the reply.

The Cat's Bed.
 "It's a bad thing to mix presence of mind and absentmindedness," said an actress. "When 'Mme. Sans-Gene' was the play of the hour I had the part of the blanchisseuse in the laundry scene and was busily engaged in ironing when a cat which had its home somewhere about the theater came walking on to the stage. I thought this would furnish a good opportunity to give a realistic domestic touch to the scene, and so when puss came purring up and rubbed against me I stroked her fur, spoke to her, and then, for fear she might be distracting, I picked her up and put her down on the nearest place at hand, saying, 'There, pussy, go to sleep!'"

"The cat curled up contentedly, and I went on with my lines. Suddenly I was aware of a murmur among the audience, which increased to a ripple of laughter. I realized something was up and turned instinctively to look at puss. There she was, asleep, where I had put her, among the iron on the 'red-hot' range."—Young's Magazine.

Anger.
 If a man meets with injustice it is not required that he shall not be roused to meet it, but if he is angry after he has had time to think upon it, that is sinful. The flame is not wrong, but the coals are.—Beecher.

How a Juror Was Lost.
 In a southern county of Missouri years ago, when the form of questioning was slightly different than now, much trouble was experienced in getting a jury in a murder trial. Finally an old fellow answered every question satisfactorily—he had no prejudices, was not opposed to capital punishment and was generally a valuable find. Then the prosecutor said solemnly:

"Juror, look upon the prisoner. Prisoner, look upon the juror."

The old man adjusted his spectacles and peered at the prisoner for a full minute. Then, turning to the judge, as though fully satisfied with the inspection, he said:

"Judge, damn me if I don't believe he's guilty."—Kansas City Star.

What little information we now have about the new Russian dreadnaughts tells more than many words could do. The four now in course of construction, the Sevastopol, the Petropavlovsk, the Gangut and the Poltava, are each 500 feet long, 89 feet wide and 27 feet three inches deep, and have a displacement of 23,000 tons.

They are to be of 42,000 horsepower and will have a speed of 23 knots. The first two are being built by the Baltic shipworks the last two at the Imperial navy yard.—Lokal Anzeiger.

Henry Sienkiewicz, the Polish novelist, is a leader of the nationalists in Poland today. Sienkiewicz visited the United States in 1877, when he came to California with a party that included Mme. Modjeska in the vain hope of starting an idealistic communal life on the lines of the Brook farm.

Illinois ranks first of all the state in the matter of internal revenue collections. New York is second.
