

SAYS INSURGENTS SHOULD BE FIRED

Speaker Cannon Still on War-path and Blasting All of His Enemies.

A WARNING TO KANSANS

TELLS THEM TO KEEP THEIR EYES ON ALL LAWMEN WHO PROPOSE TO REFORM CONGRESS—MAKES CHARGES.

Alma, Kan., July 20.—Speaker Joseph G. Cannon arrived at this county seat shortly after noon yesterday and was escorted by an automobile parade to the courthouse lawn where he delivered one of the speeches of his last day in the Kansas primary campaign. Mr. Cannon plunged directly into an attack on insurgency.

"Whenever," he said, "you hear a man talking about how in congress he is going to kick out of the party traces, telling about how he is going to be a reformer and straighten things out, when you get a fellow that talks like that, you want to watch him."

"I believe in organization when I see people proclaiming their own wisdom and that they and God are a majority and they won't work with anybody else. When I hear that kind of talk I sometimes think that the insane asylums are not large enough."

Why He Is Talking.

"Why am I talking this way? Because I am trying to show that we must cooperate. I believe in two parties—one to watch the other. There ought to be a well organized minority to hold the majority in check."

"I have high respect for a man who honestly differs with me on governmental policy. I am a republican, dyed in the wool. I am a partisan and have been since I voted for Lincoln."

At this point Speaker Cannon discussed the prosperity of the country since 1907 and then said:

"I sometimes wonder why men that kick out of the party organization and are wiser than anybody else cannot learn something. There are lots of things that I don't get my way about in the republican party, but I abide by the will of the majority. The man that kicks out of the traces like a balky mule ought to get out of the team."

"In the framing of the tariff bill seven senators—Bristow, LaFollette, Clapp, Beveridge and company—and 23 representatives said: 'If you won't let us say how this tariff shall be framed we won't play in the game.' Now, who were the Cears?"

A DIVORCE SUNDAY

Richmond ministers are preparing to have a "Divorce Sunday" when every pulpit in the city will be a battery from which separation, alimony and divorce statistics will be hurled into the congregations. It is expected that with a little consistent preaching and a good still statute passed by the next legislature that incompatibility, the subtle insinuations of "mother-in-law," and other little "things" will be checked.

Nature Fakers of Fame. Fancy and imagination are at a discount, and our young Gradgrinds want strict facts. It was different years ago, when boys delighted in "The Island Home," even though the author of that desert island story made the albatross come up from the depths of the sea, a beautiful glittering creature with fins and scales, and described a battle royal between a sperm whale and a thrashing shark and swordfish. Again, how popular was "The Swiss Family Robinson," in spite of the fact that in their wonderful island were found a lion, a polar bear and a kangaroo, and the whole family, though armed with guns, were blockaded for days by a box constrictor.—London Outlook.

Pictorial Wash Lists. Pretty old inventions are our modern wash lists. The old German housewife had an odd way of keeping track of the garments she gave out to be washed. She had a picture of each article and wrote down the number of everything opposite to it with a piece of chalk, which was rubbed out when the article was returned, to be used again the next week. It was really a pictorial and perpetual wash list.

Little Countess Cornelia Szechenyi

The first photograph ever taken of the little Countess Cornelia Szechenyi, the granddaughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt and the daughter of Gladys Vanderbilt whose marriage to the Count Lazo Szechenyi two years ago was one of the great society events in New York. The little Countess will inherit all kinds of millions and she already knows how to talk about money in both the English and Hungarian languages.

CHARLIE HASTY MAKES BIG HIT AT MURRAY

CHARLEY HASTY.

Tom Linton and his Cannibal Maids are presenting a pleasing condensed musical comedy at the Murray this evening. The songs are made the more impressive by the changes in costumes. "Domestic Trouble" is a sketch presented by Wagner and Gray, the subject being indicative of the lines. Charlie Hasty, the little fat boy, who gives a fine portrayal of the rural youth, can justly claim his title as the original Hoosier boy. His comedy is fine in both song and monologue. His humor is infectious and always wins his audiences. Lola Milton as "That Girl" introduces a character that is popular because of its eccentricities. The musical number with which this act closes makes a fitting close. The motion pictures are new and full of interest. Look for the announcement of a big bill for next week.

Attack the German Chancellor

National Liberal Party, Angry Over Recent Ministerial Appointments, Make War on Cabinet Leader.

(Special Cable from the International News Service.)
BY STEVEN BURNETT.

Berlin, July 20.—Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, who is not only the longest but undoubtedly the unhappiest of German chancellors, received what the Teuton language expressively describes as a "mule-kick" from the National Liberal party.

Prince von Buelow's successor has endeavored to maintain the fiction that Liberalism still finds a place in his political lexicon. The National Liberal party considers his latest ministerial appointments—Herr von Dallwitz as Prussian minister of the interior and Herr von Schorlemer as minister of agriculture—such conclusive evidence of his slavish allegiance to the Catholic-Conservative oligarchy that they will have no more of him, and have told him so in a party communique of refreshing directness.

From day to day signs multiply that next year's Reichstag elections will be a battle royal between the allied Liberal-Radical-Democratic forces and Ultramontan and Agrarianism.

"Hello, I am Crown Prince Frederick William," was the surprising telephone call which reached the ear of the desk clerk at one of our principal hotels a day or two ago. "I am sending you a young man whose reliability I wish to test. Give him 200 marks. If he does not prove trustworthy, the court marshal's office will make good the sum." Sure enough, a little later, a seedy-looking young man appeared saying that he was "sent to fetch something." It is hardly necessary to say that all he got was a policeman's invitation to accompany him to the nearest police station, for in the meantime the hotel management had telephoned to the court marshal's office and learned that an unusually barefaced swindle was being attempted. The seedy-looking young man turned out to be a grocer's clerk out of employment.

The science of dirigibles is far more advanced in the Kaiser's empire than in any other country. Government ships of the three known systems are stationed in Cologne and Metz, though the recent accident to Zeppelin II, has deprived the former fortress of its largest dirigible.

In Berlin it is a daily occurrence to see either a Gross or a Farsall sail over the streets, veer in the wind, battle against air currents, and then disappear above the housetops. Nor is the activity of the balloon brigade limited to flight alone.

Radio-telegraphy, and even radio-telephony—still in its infancy—are the objects of special study. Wireless communications have been established between dirigibles in Berlin and Frankfurt; the messages between two airships have been intercepted, and "tapped" by a third.

The more aggressive qualities of airships are also carefully examined and improved; sand bags in lieu of bombs are thrown from a considerable height on the Tegel Military Park grounds; targets are aimed at, experiments made with new cannon.

What the net result of all these experiments has been is, of course, not known. They are state secrets, locked up in Tegel, Cologne and Metz but the fact that Germany is in possession of a ten-to-one standard as regards dirigibles, that it is able to organize airship maneuvers and to provide each of the fighting corps in the annual military maneuvers with one of these engines of war, speaks volumes for the progress of lighter-than-air aviation.

That the results have been satisfactory—however, minimized they may have been by the Press, which patriotically serves the interests of the Fatherland—is proved by the recent decision of the authorities to subsidize private dirigibles likely to be of use in warfare.

Herr Maximilian Harden whom his publishers rightly describe as "Germany's greatest publicist," has written a book called "Heads."

As a favored protégé of Bismarck, Harden devotes the greater part of his work to an apothecial of the Iron Chancellor, who never had a more sympathetic or perhaps a better informed interpreter than the virile editor of the "Zukunft."

Kaiser Wilhelm I., Bismarck's wife, the late autocrat of German diplomacy, Herr von Holstein; Field Marshal von Waldersee; Eugen Richter the great parliamentarian and "Watch-dog of the German Treasury"; the actor Mathowsky, the French General Gallifot, Ibsen, Zola, Menzel, Leubach, Ricklin and a score of other international personalities of the "Bismarckian era" are some of the "heads" whom Herr Harden dissects and analyses in the trenchant style of which he is so recognized a master.

The Bismarckian point of view is of course, pronounced throughout, and Harden portrays the First Chancellor as a political "phenomenon" sans pareil.

The fate of Berlin's historic opera house has been scaled.

The Kaiser agrees to sell the property to the municipality. The price is not yet fixed, but it is supposed to be in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. Thus passes out of Hohenzollern hands a building which has been in their possession since the days of Frederick the Great. The house is not to be pulled down, but altered. Under municipal management it is to serve no longer as a theater or opera house, but as a concert hall and a place of civic entertainment. The ugly emergency staircase outside, hurriedly run up after the Iroquois theater disaster in Chicago, will be removed and the existing narrow stairs broadened. The structural alterations have begun and next year's visitors to Berlin will look in vain for one of the German capital's best known historic sights.

If you intend to go to Berlin in the future, you may become the guest of the Kaiser if you have the necessary money to pay for the privilege, for Emperor William not satisfied with his recent increase of salary as King of Prussia, has gone into the hotel business, and is now the principal owner of Hotel Adlon, one of the swellest hotels in the city on the Spree.

At Local Theaters

Mae La Porte Stock Co.

"One Girl in a Thousand" is the play that Mae La Porte and her clever company will appear in at the Gennett next Monday evening, July 25, when they open their week engagement in this city, and it is safe to say that every seat in the house will be filled as Miss La Porte and her entire company have many friends in this city who will be glad to welcome her back for a week.

During the week several of the best plays ever seen by a stock company will be presented, as well as a number of high class vaudeville acts which will be presented between the acts, which will include several new acts by Miss La Porte and Joe McEnroe. This season Mr. McEnroe claims that he has given Miss La Porte the very best acting company ever seen at popular prices and with the many new plays the engagement here is sure to be a successful one.

Cambridge Man Aids Teamster: Will Inherit A Big Fortune

(Palladium Special)
Cambridge City, Ind., July 20.—Friends in this city have been apprised of the good fortune coming to Mr. and Mrs. Boyce Rankin, former residents of Cambridge City. Mr. Rankin, it appears, was several years ago engaged as a clerk in a feed store in McDonald, Penn., and in that capacity had rendered Jack Ennis, a poor teamster, a service by allowing him credit on a quantity of horse feed on his own responsibility. At that time Ennis had neither money nor credit. Afterward Ennis went to Texas where he amassed a fortune in the Beaumont oil field. It was through his instrumentality that Rankin left Cambridge City two years ago to go to Corpus Christi where he was given a good position with an increase in salary.

A telegram recently received by friends of Mr. and Mrs. Rankin told of the death of Ennis and a letter of later date announced the fact that he had "made good" his promise that Mrs. Ennis should have the benefit of the Ennis fortune during her life, but that at her death it should go to Mr. and Mrs. Rankin.

The HOOVER SWEEPER

Costs

But the Hoover Isn't Expensive

The only real way to judge the expense of any article is to determine what it will do and what it will save. If it doesn't do what is claimed, if it isn't satisfactory, if it doesn't bring definite returns, then it is expensive at any price.

The Hoover Does More Than Any Other Cleaner

A mere vacuum cleaner just reaches the surface and takes the dirt from the top, the deep-lying, filth-bearing, disease-laden dirt is not removed. The Hoover is a real sweeper as well as a vacuum cleaner. A brush revolving at lightning speed raises the nap of the carpet and strikes thousands of light blows each minute that loosens all the hard-and-fast dirt. The powerful suction draws every particle of this up into the dust chamber and you have your carpet, your rug, your floor perfectly and thoroughly cleansed.

The Hoosier Saves More Than Money

The Hoover will prolong the life of your carpets and your draperies; it will keep them fresher and brighter looking; it will save money by so doing. But it will do more than that. It will save your health, it will save your energy, it will protect the health of your children.

You will have no more carpet beatings, no more rug sweepings, no more curtain cleanings with their worry and work. You will not be stirring up old dirt and dangerous germs every week to contaminate the air you breathe and endanger the health of your whole family.

So the Hoover at $125 is a money saving, health protecting investment that you will ultimately make. Why shouldn't you be getting returns from it now? We'll be glad to show it and if you're thinking of buying we'll be glad to let you try it in your home.
