HAY PRICE HIGH
QUALITY IS POOR

Fields Are Full of Weeds Because of the Damp Weather of Spring.

LOCAL MARKET IS SMALL

FARMERS THINK THAT THE PRICE OF HAY WILL CONTINUE AT THE PRESENT FIGURE UNTIL NEXT YEAR.

Farmers say that the present high price of hay will continue throughout next year. Timothy haying begins next week but because of the damp spring the fields are full of weeds and it will be of very poor quality. The market for Wayne county timothy will be small. The present price is from $10 to $15 per ton. During the various harvests of the last few weeks there has been found a noticeable scarcity of bumble bees. This means, according to farmers, that little clover seed will be produced in the fall. Bumble bees are essential in pollinating the clover blossom. Prices on clover seed, and consequently clover hay, will rise accordingly.

Entomologists say a small parasite is working on the young bees in the nests and that many are dying. Many thousands of young bees have been sent to the United States island possessions to pollinate the American clover being grown there. These bees were placed in cold storage boxes being previously slightly numbed with the cold, in order to kill any microbes which might be on them. The method was found extremely successful. Oats have not been better in many years. The crop is now being harvested and will average more than fifty bushels to the acre. The quality is good.
