A NEW CLUB.

The excellent plan of a Housekeeping club was started once upon a time in a town of several prospective brides, and became so popular that before long nearly all the girls had joined.

Two skilled housekeepers took charge of the practical side of the club and gave the ambitious beginners the benefit of their own long experience. The club always met on market day. Each meeting began with a market trip to buy dainties to be prepared during the afternoon. These market trips were most valuable, the girls learning the prices of foodstuffs, cuts of meat, conditions of vegetables, fruits, etc.

Each member entertained the club in turn and the first half hour of each meeting was devoted to household suggestions from each member, it being understood that each girl should hunt up a valuable household suggestion each week.

The dainties were prepared in the kitchen by all of the girls, each armed with her notebook to write down all the good suggestions received during the afternoon.

After the club had met at each member's home the girls proudly gave a social to show off their culinary attainments. For this social slips of paper were made out containing different recipes for which the girls drew. The recipe drawn was prepared and donated by the "cook" to whose lot it had fallen.

CUMMINS HANDED REGULARS A FEW

Iowa Senator Says Men Like Cannon Are Driving People to Socialism.

IGNORE PARTY PLEDGES

IS THE CHARGE CUMMINS MAKES AGAINST THE CZARS OF CONGRESS, WHEN THE TARIFF BILL WAS FRAMED.

Council Grove, Kan., July 23.—Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, in a speech before a Chautauqua audience here last night asserted that the pledges of the republican national platform for a revision of the tariff was not fulfilled, and that Senator Aldrich and Speaker Cannon and the others who took the lead in framing the tariff bill, had never attempted and never intended to keep the pledges of the party.

Senator Cummins came into the home of one of the Kansas regular congressmen—Representative James M. Miller—to give this message. The speaker was cheered for a minute when he started his speech.

"I am an exponent of the progressive republican idea," he said. "I believe that the republican party can be made the most progressive party on earth, the one that does things for the good of the whole country, but the special interest man must be eliminated."

"That is my sermon. That is what I talk, and if it helps or hurts any one where I may be talking, it does not bother me. For ten years I fought for progress in Iowa and we have won and are winning."

"This is not a local matter at all, but one covering all this country and affecting other countries, so that any local matter is of small consideration."

"Speaker Cannon and Senator Aldrich are driving the country into a socialistic form of government, and industry because of their interest in promoting the cause of monopolies."

"They are unwilling to take measures to prevent the rapidly growing tendency toward monopoly or to disintegrate and destroy the monopolies already in existence, whereby the prices of commodities are fixed not by the usual law of trade, but by the will of a single man or group of men."

"Monopoly does not mean a single factory with absolute control of one article, but a combination of factories making the same article, whereby the prices are the same in all, whether or not the factories are owned by one company or are controlled through a trust agreement."

"It is only within the last few years that the lack of competition between American and foreign goods has become so marked that the people began to talk about the tariff duties being too high."

"Prices in Trust's Hands." "People have found that the absence of foreign competition has made it possible for the American manufacturer to increase his price at his own sweet will and without regard to the actual market conditions."

"In the republican platform there was no technical promise to revise the tariff downward or upward. The party simply pledged itself to make such revision of the tariff as would equalize the cost of production here and abroad and make competition possible in this country in many lines."

"It was the duty of congress to make this revision. Congress did not do it. Under the leadership of Cannon and Aldrich the tariff was revised without the slightest heed to the cost of production anywhere."

"In many cases the charges were left so high that the price on many articles was increased in the face of a reduced tariff, and because the domestic manufacturers were not afraid of foreign competition."

"During all the long debate on the tariff bill Senator Aldrich never attempted to apply the standard of the republican platform pledge. He and his followers openly and contemptuously repudiated every word of that platform pledge. In all the evidence taken by the house ways and means committee there were not a dozen

Who Wants Hair?

Who Wants to Get Rid of Dandruff? Read These Letters

On March 25, 1910, E. A. Widman, 8 Norfolk St., Newark, N. J., wrote: "My hair was falling out and my head was full of dandruff. Since using Parisian Sage the dandruff has disappeared and now have quite a growth of new hair."

On April 2, 1910, Mrs. R. M. Worden 5 St. James Ave., Holyoke, Mass., wrote: "Parisian Sage is the best hair dressing I ever used. It gave my hair life and a gloss which no other dressing ever did, besides stopping it from falling out. It is the only dressing for up-to-date women."

March 24, 1910, Mrs. J. C. Ketcham, 4 Chestnut place Bangor Me., wrote: "My husband, J. G. Ketcham, was troubled with dandruff which caused his hair to fall out and your Parisian Sage has freed the scalp from dandruff and given a natural gloss to the hair. No money could persuade him to be without it."

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by Leo H. Fife to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back. It makes hair grow lustrous and luxuriant. It is a delightfully refreshing hair dressing, cooling the scalp, and will immediately banish all odors. Large bottle 50 cents at drug-gists everywhere and at L. H. Fife's.

"POTATO JAGS"

Pittsburg, Penn., July 23.—Under the belief that soaking one's feet in water in which potatoes in large quantities have been crushed will give one a delightful sense of intoxication, many residents of the "Poor Woods Run" District, North-side, have been acting queerly of late, but it was not until today that the secret of the "potato jags" was made known to the police.

Several were arrested last night while "under the influence," and this morning Joseph Griner, one of those arrested, explained to Magistrate Christopher Seam how these cheap drinks were accumulated. "Twenty days to jail for you and for all 'potato jags' that come after. We've got to draw the line somewhere," said the Magistrate.

Items of the 6,000 in which a showing was made as to the cost of production at home and abroad.

Insuring Against Czars.

"It was an open and explicit repudiation of our platform and a perversion of the protective theory. I am not an insurgent republican if it is said that I am insuring against the republican national platform. I am insuring against men of the Cannon and Aldrich stripe, men who are openly violating the pledges of the party and are advancing the cause of monopolistic control of industry."

"The insurgents or progressives, a better term, offer two remedies. 'First, knowledge of the cost of production. No one knows what the different items of cost are now. What we need is the constant work of an intelligent, independent, impartial and non-partisan tariff commission that can get the information and then tell congress just what it wants to know.'

"The second remedy is to make a rule whereby any schedule of the tariff bill may be revised at will without going through the whole of the tariff schedule."

Good Form

Procrastination in expressing sympathy to a bereaved family is the height of bad form. Therefore the instant a death is known the bereavement should be acknowledged. To send flowers is always desirable and may be done even in the case of a formal acquaintance, but it is an expense that is not necessary. If flowers are sent they may accompany the note of sympathy, but no reference must be made to them in the note. If the box is sent without a letter a visiting card accompanies it. When the recipient is a formal acquaintance a note may be omitted, "Sincere sympathy" being written on the card.

When the person bereaved is known only slightly and flowers are omitted a visiting card may be either mailed or left at the door. In either case "Sympathy" or something similar should be written on the card. When it is left in person the individual for whom it is intended is not asked for, it being understood that those in deep mourning are not able to receive any but the immediate family.

To intimate friends flowers may be sent as soon as news of death in the family is known, and more may go on the day of the funeral unless the family expresses a wish that they shall be omitted for the week. When the latter is the case it is the height of bad form to send flowers. A note alone is sufficient.

Marking Bridal Silver.

There is a fancy just now in certain families to have wedding silver marked with the initials of the bridegroom rather than the bride. This is an English custom which has never found favor over here, and the innovation arouses much discussion.

As the silver is given to the bride often by her own family, the American form of marking is more appropriate and is much more used.

A rather new marking that is a revival from colonial days is a compromise. Plain block letters are used. A single one at the top is the initial of the bridegroom's family name, while directly under it is the initial of the first name of the bridegroom to the left and that of the bride to the right.

Where there is a crest in the family of the bride it is often used in marking the silver above the monogram or initials. Though sometimes done, it is not good taste to mark the wedding silver with the crest of the bridegroom's family, especially when the silver is given by the bride's people and friends.

It is equally bad taste when a girl has been given old family silver that has come down through generations in her father's family to mark it with her own initials. Should there be no children such heirlooms naturally should go back to the man's family, though the bride may have a life interest in them.

What the Limit.

One night as Inspector McCafferty, then one of Byrne's detectives, was entering Lyons' old eating house in the Bowery he was accosted by a hungry-eyed tramp, who exclaimed: "For God's sake, mister, put me against the trough. I ain't eat nuthin' for 'ree days."

He looked it, so McCafferty took him in and told a waiter to give him a full dinner. When McCafferty had finished his dinner and walked out he found the tramp on the sidewalk as was the recipient of profuse thanks. "Well," remarked the detective, "I'm glad you got all the dinner you want."

"I didn't, boss," corrected the hobo, "but I had all I could eat."—New York Herald.

PRINCESS TELLS SECRET OF LIFE

Princess Helene von Racowitza Urges All to Live With the Roses.

HAD A ROMANTIC CAREER

AND LIKE THE GRECIAN HELEN IN THE NOONDAY OF HER LIFE FIRED ALL HEARTS WITH HER BEAUTY.

(Special Cable from the International News Service.)

London, July 23.—Herein lies the great art of life, to enjoy to the full the scent of the roses and other gifts of nature, while carefully avoiding the thorns.

Such is the frank philosophy of life of Princess Helene von Racowitza, who like another Helen, fired all hearts in the noonday of her brilliant beauty some forty years ago, and now, in the evening of her days, has taken the world into her confidence in a better term, offer two remedies. The Princess has a career romantic and stormy.

From her father, a brilliant Bavarian diplomat at the court of Max I, she inherited the blood of the Vikings; her mother, a beautiful and fascinating woman, belonged to one of the highly cultured Jewish families of Berlin, a family of poets and philosophers, while the temperament of Helene herself was pure Greek in its adoration of beauty. Her father's house in Munich was the rendezvous of politicians and men famous in literature, art and philosophy, and when but a child she was admitted to this wonderful circle.

One of her earliest playmates was the Crown Prince Louis of Bavaria, who afterwards became King Louis II. Her parents belonged to the intimate circle of King Max I, and Helene was chosen as the most fitting comrade for the young Prince.

The childish friendship was broken by a quarrel in which the Crown Prince and Little Helene fought like wild cats. When her father heard of the episode, in spite of the complete forgiveness of the royal parents the intimate intercourse of the children was broken off. Years after, when the Crown Prince was a king and the Little Racowitza, he sent his former playmate some bonbons, with the words: "Greeting to my once wild little playmate."

The Princess gives us another pleasing glimpse of her childhood days in her account of long, delightful hours spent with Hans Andersen, who was a guest at her father's house in Munich.

"Quite early in the mornings, while mamma was still asleep, I could torment him at my ease, and he told stories after story. He turned everything into a fairy tale. It was even more fascinating when he revealed himself as the 'Student of Little Ida's Flowers,' that is to say, while he was telling stories he cut out the most fascinating things with scissors—castles, gardens, flowers and butterflies, elves, gnomes—in fact, all kinds of wonders."

From Munich to Berlin, from Berlin to Turin, where her father was minister King Victor Emmanuel, and from Turin to Nice went Helene, now a beautiful debutante in her early teens. Dainty and winsome as a fairy, with sharply cut profile, glorious golden hair, and wonderful eyes which were blue, grey and green by turns, is the description Baron Voldendorff gives of her beauty at this time. Celebrities from all over the world were gathered at Nice, and the future Princess von Racowitza met many notable people—the Empress of Nicholas I of Russia, the Grand Duchess Helene, Princess of Wurtemberg, Bulwer Lytton, Lord Brougham, Charles Dickens and Meyerbeer, to mention a few among them.

While at Nice, the town gave a ball in honor of Napoleon III, and the Empress Eugenie and Helene was privileged to dance in the same quadrille as the Empress Eugenie, then at the zenith of her glory.

Back again in Berlin in 1902, the Princess devotes many chapters to what is known as the Lassalle episode. It is a fervent chapter from the book of love, this tragic love story of Ferdinand Lassalle, the brilliant and romantic father of German socialism, and the beautiful Helene von Donners, which furnished George Meredith with the motive for his novel, "The Tragic Comedians." For her part in that romance of half a century ago and its unfortunate ending the Princess has been alternately hailed as an unhappy heroine and condemned as a heartless jilt. Lassalle was fatally wounded in a duel with another of her lovers, a young Roumanian prince, Yanko von Racowitza.

Helene, who never regarded the Prince as the murderer of her lover, became the Princess von Racowitza, her husband dying a year later from consumption.

Soon the glittering lights of Bohemia, which had always had a fascination for the Princess, called her, and she began to study for the stage. She was in St. Petersburg when Serge von Schewitch, a Russian revolutionary of good family, came into her life, and there sprang up between them a "mighty love, one that has defied every obstacle and has risen victorious over every sacrifice, which even today, after more than thirty years, is proof against dangers, storms, shipwrecks and struggles and which every misfortune only serves to rivet more firmly."

BOMB CAUSES SCARE

(American News Service)

New York, July 23.—More than 1,000 men, women and children were imperiled today by a bomb which destroyed the fruit store of Quinden Raffael at 614 Second avenue. Two years ago, while working for another man, Raffael received a black-hand letter, but today said he had got none since. The police are working on the theory of revenge, as he recently discharged two employes, and furthermore has taken much business from neighboring dealers.

Raffael with his wife and two children escaped by a narrow margin. The family lived above the fruit store.

The explosion, which did several thousands of dollars damage, created a panic in the neighborhood, breaking windows and shaking tenements.

The Original Wedding Cake.

Our wedding cake is the remains of a custom whereby a Roman bride held in her left hand three wheat ears, and many centuries later an English bride wore on her head a chaplet of wheat. The attendant girls threw corn, either in grains or in small bits of biscuit or cake, upon the heads of the newly married couple, and the guests picked up the pieces and ate them. Such was the beginning of the wedding cake, which did not come into general use until the eighteenth century and was then composed of solid blocks laid together and fed all over with sugar so that when the outer crust was broken over the bride's head the cakes inside fell on the floor and they were then distributed among the company.

The dragon fly can speed through the air at the rate of sixty miles an hour, and more wonderful still, can stop instantaneously in its flight or move backward or sideways without changing the position of its body.
