AT BARGAIN COUNTERS.

Bits of fine embroidery and little motifs of fine lace which are sold at this time of the year as remnants are just the things to work up in lingerie shirt waists. They may be cleverly used with insertion or between tucks and are often the beauty of the waist. In one waist, a three-inch piece of fine embroidery is lengthened by a piece of insertion to equal the length of the waist front. A length of lace insertion is placed on each side and the pattern thus formed makes a strip for the front of a very pretty shirt waist.

PITTSBURG FAST SET ON RAMPAGE

Principals in a "Souse" Party Stirs Pennsylvania Society to Depths.

ARRESTS FOLLOW AN ORGY

THREE MEN AND TWO WOMEN MAKE WILD DASH IN AN AUTO—MOBILE AND THREE PEOPLE ARE BADLY INJURED.

Pittsburg, July 26.—After eighteen months, in which the fast set of Butler county set a new high mark for didos in fashionable Pennsylvania society, the end came yesterday when warrants were issued for the arrest of a quintet of society leaders who in a drunken orgy, followed by a joy ride, seriously—possibly fatally—injured three persons.

There were three men and two women who in their mad plunge for pleasure, ran down and cast aside all who opposed them in their merry dash. One of the crowd is a daughter of a prominent minister of that section. The last escapade participated in by the five leaders surpassed the notorious "Spencer dinner," when novelties not thought of in Paris were introduced in what was then considered "stad Butler."

During the absence of Mrs. Spencer the house and furnishings were wrecked, as well as the reputations of some prior to that time considered beyond reproach.

A Woman May Die.

As a result of this last orgy one woman, daughter of the prosecutor may die and two others are seriously injured. Those held under bond are Dr. W. C. Bradley charged with driving an automobile while he was intoxicated, and disorderly conduct, $800; and W. H. Bradley, Jr., Harry Reihing, proprietor of the principal hotel in Butler; Miss Laura Jennings and Miss Clara Jennings of Butler, daughters of millionaire Henry Jennings, who died a month ago, held under bond of $300 on a charge of disorderly conduct.

To this will be added several suits for monetary damages because of physical injuries to L. L. McCandless, a wealthy farmer and his daughter, Miss Katherine who were run down by the automobile and insulted and laughed at as they were stretched out on the road side with broken bones and Joseph Coulter, who was the third victim of the mad ride down the pike. The vehicles occupied by Coulter and McCandless and his daughter were demolished.

In addition there will be divorce suits and Attorney William H. Martin is preparing additional papers in this case.

The Bradleys had been in the Adirondacks on an automobile tour and stopped at Butler. Mrs. Bradley accompanied her husband. She was left at the hotel Willard.

Accompanied by Reihing the three drove to the Jennings home where death was still a memory, and the two daughters, beautiful, accomplished, European travelers and leaders of home society, joined the party.

Just two nights prior Butler police were asked to investigate an abandoned house, and after forcing the door, found two men and two women of the social set there. The police satisfactory explanations were made, but the story became public property, and the ministers of Butler Sunday from pulpits spoke of the immorality of leaders of society there and an investigation which promises even more startling developments has been begun by a committee of five men, all husbands of women whose names have been used in these cases and who intend to expose all who are parties to the spicy celebrations.

Servant Problem 3,000 Years Old.

It is rather comforting for distraught housewives who have difficulties with their domestics to know the servant problem is nothing modern and not, as has been surmised, an effect of a perpetual war between capital and labor. Mistress and maid, man and master, have always been in antagonism to each other. Reverse the situation and it would be the same, as it has been ever since the world began. A Philadelphia authority rejoices because at Fordham university it has come to light that nearly 3,000 years B. C. the Egyptians were having as poor a time with servants as some people in the United States are experiencing this very day. It was not all rapture and roses in the best families of Egypt owing to this branch of domestic life not bearing proper fruit. From some ancient papyrus which have recently been unearthed in a tomb near Memphis maxims have been deciphered that are eye openers. The Egyptians must have had a terrible time in their households when such sentiments as these survive the centuries: "In sooth thou shalt find it hard to satisfy thy servants despite thy earnest desires, for if thou be harsh with them they shall say: 'He is a cruel master. Lo, we shall go.'" Solomon knew what he was talking about when he said there is nothing new under the sun, for it made no difference to Pharaoh's servant, "even though thou give princely gifts of gold [tips, of course] and precious stones to thy higher servants, content is not in them, for they shall say: 'Lo, the master is suddenly grown gracious! We shall go.'" If any more of these manuscripts dealing with this subject are found it is hoped they may be deciphered for the consolation of the world. Misery always loves company, and even these musty maxims of 3,000 years ago are as fresh as daisies.

Doubly secure is claimed to be a new safety pin patented by an Illinois man, which has two points, one each side of a central bar.

After three years of experiments two English opticians have perfected a lens which, mounted on the top of a submarine periscope tube, enables those within the vessel to see on all sides for a distance of eight miles.

There are about 26,800 worms to an acre of cultivated land.
