

COUNTY FARMERS HOLD A MEETING

Conditions of the Crops Are Discussed by the Wayne
Horticulturalists

CORN CROP WILL BE FAIR

ENOUGH APPLES IN THE SOUTH-ERN SECTION OF THE STATE TO SUPPLY THE DEMAND IN THIS LOCALITY.

The crop outlook for Wayne county was viewed with optimism at the meeting of the Wayne County Horticultural Society at the home of J. C. Stevens, two miles and a half north of Centerville, yesterday afternoon. About 75 members of the society were present and the condition of wheat, corn, fruit and live stock was discussed and each speaker spoke of the good conditions prevailing generally over the county.

Several members of the society spoke about the corn and apple crop, and said that although the conditions were not the best at the first of the season that there would be a good supply of corn and that there were enough apples in the southern part of the state to ward against an apple famine in this locality.

Mr. Stevens had several exhibits which he explained to the society. Among them were some ears of corn raised from seed of the corn that took first prize at the Omaha fair last year. This corn had a remarkable clear color and the ears were good size, measuring over a foot.

The stock, too, grows high, reaching fourteen feet and the first ear comes out on the stock, eight feet from the ground. Mr. Stevens found one fault with the corn and that was that it was hard to be acclimated.

Another exhibit was the mixed corn which he planted this year and which yielded 125 bushels per acre. Mr. Stevens also spoke of the good condition of his wheat, which would yield about 35 bushels to the acre.

Caleb King gave a report from the agricultural committee, speaking mostly of the corn crop. One reason, Mr. King said that the crop outlook was good, was because, as he traveled over the county, he found men selling their old corn. This is said to be an indication that the new corn was plentiful.

In speaking of the condition of the hogs, Mr. King said that they were fat, Mr. King said that they were fat but he did not view the situation with alarm.

Mr. Stevens urged those present not to plant their wheat until after September 20. He based his appeal on the government bulletin which was recently issued, stating that the Hessian fly which has been damaging the wheat over the country did not deposit their eggs until September 20, and if the planting of wheat was delayed until that time there would be no danger from the fly.

Flowers, dairy and poultry were also considered by the society. Mrs. Edna Pike spoke on "The Future of Poultry Business in Wayne County," saying that the thoroughbred stock was more profitable than the mixed stock. To prevent cholera among chickens she advised the use of lime in the drinking water of the flock.

FIGHT ON RULES IN CONGRESS IS TO BE CONTINUED

Interest on the public debt: demand treasury notes of 1861 and 1862, one and two years notes of 1863, compound interest notes, which were issued many years ago; treasury notes of 1890, Columbian half dollars in amounts of ten dollars, and Columbian quarters in amounts of ten dollars.

"It may surprise you to know that gold certificates, which are as good as any other class of government currency, are not legal tender, neither are silver certificates, nor national bank notes, but they are receivable at par in all parts of the United States in payment of taxes, excises, public lands, and all other dues to the United States except duties on imports. Trade dollars, which were issued for the trade with China, are not legal tender. I hope that at the coming session of congress the question of currency may be simplified."

A large number of these so-called "pioneer" clerks were living their former an association and through subscription had a bronze statue of their champion—General Spinner—cast. Although the figure was looked upon as a work of art and cost the women more than $15,000 they have never succeeded in obtaining the permission of the government to place it in a conspicuous place. As a result it is hidden away in a store room in the Corcoran Art Gallery.

FIVE ARE IN RACE

The Contest for Joint Senator Promises to Be an Interesting One.

NO SUCCESSOR TO HARVEY

Five men are reported as candidates for Joint Senator from Wayne and Fayette counties on the Republican ticket to take the place made vacant by the resignation of John Harvey. They are: Walter McConaha, Walter Ratliff, Ray K. Shiveley, Ellwood Morris and J. C. Stevens.

Several of these men have not decided whether they will enter the race or not. Some have spoken to Colonel C. E. Wiley, chairman of the Wayne County Central committee stating that their friends had been urging them to enter the race.

The adjourned meeting of the Central committee will be called next Saturday at the committee rooms and the committee will decide whether the successor to Mr. Harvey is to be chosen by the committee or at a primary.

Before the Central committee adjourned at the Court House yesterday afternoon two committees were appointed to draft resolutions; the one in reply to the resignation of Mr. Harvey, and the other on the death of R. A. Howard, former county surveyor.

PRESIDENT TAFT AND NEW STATES

He Will See that They Adopt
Constitutions that Are Satisfactory.

THEY MUST BE FAIR ONES

HE WILL NEVER STAND FOR THE RECKLESS KIND ADOPTED BY
OKLAHOMA UNDER HASKELL'S
LEADERSHIP.

(American News Service.)

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 10.—When the proper time comes President Taft will have something to say about the constitution of Arizona and New Mexico, two new states, which his insistence has made full members of the union. Advice was recently given by Colonel Roosevelt to the people of new states to leave a loophole for amendments to their constitutions. Whether President Taft agrees with this sentiment is not known. He had adopted a policy of silence regarding declarations of the former president.

It can be said positively, however, that as the law authorizing Arizona and New Mexico to prepare for statehood gives the president a veto on the constitutions which they adopt, he will bring all his legal judgment and experience to bear in insuring for the new states forms of government which they will not be ashamed of generations hence. Specifically it may be asserted on the best authority that the president will never give his approval to a sort of constitution that was adopted by Oklahoma under the reckless leadership of Governor Haskell.

This joint statehood bill which was passed by the last session of congress after a tariff fight led by the president, provides that after the new states shall have adopted constitutions and before they are put into operation, they shall be improved by president and congress or by the president alone if congress shall fail to act on them at the session at which they are submitted. This provision was inserted in the act of congress because the president made it of highest importance that there should be some check upon the constitution conventions, after the experience in Oklahoma.

The president does not believe in throttling free expression of public sentiment, but in the younger communities there is grave danger that the people, whether the new constitutions be made difficult or easy of amendment, will commit acts which later they will wish to rescind.

Generally speaking, the president believes in a constitution of the fewest possible words that is expressive of the fundamentals of government alone. Such a constitution, he believes, neither ties the hands of future generations nor calls for special amendment.

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 10.—Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt will speak at Evansville the same day he does at Indianapolis if Senator Albert J. Beveridge will consent to an afternoon speech in Indianapolis. He will then take a special train and come to Evansville for a night speech in the interest of both Senator Beveridge and Colonel F. B. Posey, republican candidate for congress in the first district. Posey talked with him at Cincinnati Friday.

Liberal English Government Having Very Difficult Time

(Special Cable from the International News Service.)

By HERBERT TEMPLE.
London, Sept. 9.—The Liberal government has more trouble on its hands and Mr. Asquith will have to use all his diplomacy to get out of it without splitting his already rather uncertain majority in the house of commons.

By what is generally known here as the "Osborne judgment," the courts of Great Britain have forbidden the labor unions to use their funds to pay the expenses of the representatives of labor in the house of commons, and if this decision is allowed to stand it will mean that practically none of the present representatives of labor will be able to hold their seats, for they are all men of small means who cannot afford to live in London and do nothing but attend meetings of the house for which they receive no pay.

The labor party are naturally looking to the present government assistance, and the question is one which will have to be solved quickly, but so far nobody knows what the government will do, although Colonel Seeley, union secretary for the colonies, at a meeting of mine workers the other day stated that something would be done and that the government would be no party to allowing the matter to drift on in its present position which places men of standing in the house of commons in an embarrassing situation which could not be tolerated.

The British laborers are having their first taste of government by injunction, and they do not like to any better than do their brethren in America, so all labor unions are considering some definite plan of campaign and a proposal, which is winning general approval, is that the union should openly defy the law and continue the use of their funds for political purposes regardless of the injunctions.

As a preliminary to this extreme step, it is suggested that the officials should arm themselves with the authority of a majority vote of their members which, it is said, will be given in nine cases out of ten.

What actions the courts would take in the face of such open defiance it is difficult to say, but the general opinion is that wholesale commitments for contempt of court would follow.

This finds more favor than other suggestions that the leaders should order a general stoppage of work throughout the country or that the labor members should vote against the government when important measures come up after the opening of parliament in November.

The recently-passed act of parliament for giving one day's rest in seven to the members of the London police force is being put into operation as rapidly as possible, but the process must necessarily be a slow one. From the first it was estimated that four years must elapse before the new system could become a fact, and the men, recognizing the difficulties in the way, are, on the whole, satisfied with the rate of progress.

The force, which originally was 16,000 strong, has already been increased to about 18,500, and another 1,500 new constables will have to join before each man can have one day's rest in seven without lowering the efficiency of the force. Each new man, after being accepted, has to pass through a protracted period of school training before passing out upon his duties, and thus, even if the men were available, they could not commence their duties right away.

Recruits have been passing fairly well, but in addition to the special augmentation there are the usual annual resignations, numbering some thousands, to be made good. Harvesting has practically stopped the supply of men from the country for the time being, but recruits just now. At present the men are getting two days off a month—one Sunday and one week-day. To any American who has lived in England for any length of time it is a puzzle why Americans should come over here in ever increasing numbers, but the fact remains that London has this year been visited by a record rush of Americans, whose reckless expenditure of money in English eyes is being made the most of by the tariff reform papers, which say that these wealthy visitors prove the blessings of protection and that every man in England would be able to go to the continent every summer and to Monte Carlo every winter, if England would only place a high tariff on anything her people buy from abroad.

But enough about politics, the Americans come here and they do spend their money freely. The general manager of the leading tourist agency here, said to me yesterday: "Although, of course, we have not yet had time to compile the exact figures I am tolerably convinced that more Americans have visited Europe this summer than any other time since the Paris exhibition of 1900."

"I can give no better idea of the great number of visiting Americans this summer than by mentioning that we must have booked about 10,000 Americans for the Passion play at Oberammergau alone."

In view of the fact that the average American who comes to Europe for the Passion play must spend at least $250. Oberammergau will, indirectly, at least account for an expenditure of not less than $2,500,000 of American money—probably a great deal more.

Certainly more than 100,000 have visited London and spent between seven and eight million dollars, and at present, when they all want to go back at once, there are not ships enough to carry them.

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 10.—Col. Henry Watterson created a sensation among the distinguished guests assembled to celebrate the ninety-seventh anniversary of Commodore Perry's victory today, by giving out a statement that Theodore Roosevelt resembled Bryan in all points and that the former president intends to save the Republican party by Bryanizing it and that Roosevelt is trying his best to beat out President Taft.

THE STARR PIANO

Mission Model

A type of architecture that has won much favor in art circles by reason of its admirable quaintness, possessing an appearance of elegant solidity that greatly enhances its adaptation to piano architecture. Special attention is given to the finish of these cases when a sample is furnished for us to match.

Proof of Merit

If proof is needed, Starr Pianos may be found in every section of the union and almost every country of the civilized world. Over eighty thousand instruments are owned by musicians, many of the second generation who know and demand the best in piano construction. A list of over three hundred schools, many the largest and best, attest to their extraordinary wearing qualities, for no harder use is possible. In private homes, in conservatories, in concert work, in fact wherever music is found there are Starr Pianos giving perfect satisfaction.

Concert Grand Model

The success of the Starr Concert Grand has been phenomenal. As an instrument designed to meet every requirement of the most exacting use, it has been unequalled. The volume and quality of tone is truly wonderful. Architecturally, it is one of the most beautiful Grand cases ever designed.

Music in Education

With the coming of autumn parents turn once more to the education of their children. Music should be a part, and an important part of every child's schooling. What acquirement is more satisfying than that of being able to play well? The Starr piano is especially adapted to the uses of the child pupil as well as to the performances of the most finished artist.

Starr Player

Even with the extreme simplicity of design in the Starr Playerpiano, it is an intricate and delicate piece of mechanism, the successful performance of which must depend entirely upon the quality and durability of materials entering into its construction. Every material entering into the Starr Player is selected in view of its special fitness for the services required.
