

SOAP MOUTH WASH FOR NAUGHTY TOTS

Alleged Punishments in Inquiry of Detention Home Administration.

Chicago, March 23.—That inmates of the juvenile detention home are compelled to eat laundry soap to clean their mouths after bad language, that sulphur and quinine are poured upon their tongues for punishment and that "squats," "stretchers" and "muscle grinders" are used in penalizing misbehavior are some of the charges made by William H. Dunn against heads of the institution at the opening of the investigation before the county civil service commission.

Mr. Dunn told the commission that the charges could be verified and sworn to by children who had been punished and policemen and others who had witnessed it.

Judge Merritt W. Pinckney demanded that specific charges with names and dates be filed in justice to the persons whose honor and integrity might be brought into question.

During the hearing a dispute arose between Judge Pinckney and Timothy D. Hurley, formerly chief probation officer. The clash came when Mr. Hurley sold the commission that a degrading physical examination had been made on many children who were not delinquents. Mr. Hurley read statistics from the annual reports to corroborate his statement.

Ballard Dunn, chairman, ruled that the commission would follow the precedents established in other investigations and avoid the technicalities of legal objections and obstacles to the bringing out of the facts. "Mr. Dunn was asked to file his charges 'upon information and belief.' The charges in detail will be submitted to the commission."

Mr. Dunn's View of It. "The investigators who take the children away from their parents file affidavits upon information and belief. In this way make serious charges, sometimes unjustly, against mothers and fathers," Mr. Dunn said. "But when they are the defendants instead of the complainants they insist that the charges be sworn to."

"I have no animosity toward any individual. I have been trying for years to call attention to abuses which should be corrected. To prevent the ill treatment of these little children is my only object and their safety can be affected only by amendments to the juvenile court law."

The investigation will be continued next Monday.

NEW ORLEANS MEN MAY HAVE A DUEL

(American News Service)
New Orleans, March 23.—Armand Capdeville, editor of the Bee, a French daily newspaper, published a formal challenge to M. De Baronecelli, editor of the Wasp, a weekly publication, today to fight a duel. The Wasp offended Capdeville by running the French language as used by the editor of the Bee. Both are prominent socially. The latter is a brother of the Mayor. The police may prohibit the spilling of blood in this affair of honor.

The Noontide of Life.
Married people should learn what to do for one another's little ills, and for the ills of the children that may come. They are sure sooner or later to have occasion to treat constipation or indigestion. When the opportunity comes remember that the quickest way to obtain relief, and finally a permanent cure, is with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great herb laxative compound. A bottle should always be in the house. It costs only 50 cents or $1 at drug stores.

Well Pleased With Opening

The Dr. Emmons Throat and Lung Healer Co., of Indianapolis, opened their Dispensary in the Comstock Block, east of Westcott Hotel this week. They advertised that they would sell Dr. Emmons' Throat and Lung remedy and Dr. Emmons' Tissue Builder, the great flesh and strength making tonic, at one-half the regular price for 90 days to introduce same. The sale has been so large that another shipment has been ordered. This special offer will be a great advertisement for the company as it will show the people the merit of these two great remedies. They are selling the dollar size of the Tissue Builder, the Great Flesh and Strength-making Tonic at 50c.

MONKEY MADE MERRY

Ocean Voyagers Had Time of Lives of Trip.

New York, March 23.—When a mischievous little monkey about a foot high, named Saki, was carried from the Royal Mail steam packet liner, Avon on her arrival here elderly women who had been hiding in their staterooms emerged with sighs of relief, while the men passengers gazed after him, regretting the liveliest hours they ever saw on shipboard.

Saki was bought in Kingston, Jamaica, by Edgar Kauffman of Pittsburgh. He was in a cage until Mabel Riley wanted to see him on St. Patrick's day, when the Avon was at sea. The little animal resented it when Miss Riley attempted to tie a green ribbon on his neck, bit his owner, jumped on Miss Riley's shoulder, tore her hair down, fled up the guy wire supporting the smokestack and perched on the whistle.

Rejecting all offers of food and dodging missiles, Saki clung there till the passengers gave up, but when they went to supper came down, jumped on the back of a nervous woman who was dozing in a steamer chair on deck and nearly scared her to death.

Then he fled back to his perch on the whistle. Late at night he came down long enough to invade the smoking room and smash some of the glasses on the bar while the owner and others vainly tried to capture him. Back to the whistle again he went.

The next morning Captain Hope discovered him asleep on the bridge, chased him into the chartroom, closed the door and Saki's freedom was ended.

BANKS TO AVOID

Widow Certain of No Reconciliation in Heaven.

Cincinnati, March 23.—"I believe my husband is in hell, and that's why I am exerting every effort to get into heaven," was the startling statement made to Rev. Herbert Yewell by a member of the Evanston Christian church shortly before the time for his evening address at that church. The remark set the evangelist to thinking, resulting in an interesting talk on "Will We Know Each Other in Heaven?" His views were in the affirmative and have no doubt caused the worried widow to redouble her resolve to avoid meeting her husband in the next world by gaining admission to heaven.

Rev. Yewell, of London, England, is said to be one of the best known evangelists of the Christian church, having made numerous accessions during the past week at revival services in the Evanston church. The subjects of his sermons are unusual. "His Majesty, the Devil," being the topic of Wednesday evening, while "Was Your Grandmother a Monkey?" will be asked of the men attending a meeting for their sex only to be held later in the week.

HUSBAND IN BED 40 YEARS

Disappointed Lover Resolved on Hard Task.

Boston, March 23.—Never was there a stranger vow taken, not even by the knights in the god old days of chivalry, than the one which for 40 years—since he was 31—has kept Joseph Plummer, of Milton, New Hampshire, confined to his bed. Mr. Plummer is now in a critical condition and cannot live.

A paternal decree forbade him to marry the girl of his choice. The edict blighted his life, and heart broken, he forswore the world, and vowed to pass the remainder of his life in bed.

The girl he loved is dead. Many stories about her are rife in the quaint New Hampshire village. Some say she pined away for love of him, others that she forgot him and married. But from the windows of the room he occupies in the old homestead Joseph may see the house she was born in, fast falling and crumbling in decay. Two bachelor brothers, Ephraim and Samuel, occupy the homestead with him and care for him. In the little town the gaunt, emaciated lover is an institution—famous for miles about, and his name and life are expected to go down in its history rivaling even the strangest legends.
