Woman's World

Rich Society Women
Bofriend Poor Babies.

MRS. J. BORDEN HARRIMAN.

There are fads in philanthropy, just as in everything else where the fashionable woman is concerned. Last year and the year before it was woman suffrage, but this season it seems to be babies. In New York city a coterie of the exclusive society women have banded together to help the mothers of the poor save their babies' lives during the summer. Milk stations are to be established, and the $300,000 which these rich women have collected will be devoted to the work. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who has been identified with many of the philanthropic movements of the smart set, is at the head of this project. Over sixty depots are to be opened, where milk will be distributed to the poor and whence doctors and nurses will be sent to instruct tenement mothers how to bring up their children. The secretary of the milk committee, Mrs. Ida White Parker, said: "Women of foreign lands in New York do not understand caring for children here under totally different climatic conditions. 'Out of 125,000 babies born in New York city annually 16,000 die under one year of age. Of these more than 8,000 waste away for lack of proper food and care. During a two weeks' heated period last summer 1,000 babies died. It has been proved that this waste of life could be much reduced if mothers were taught how to feed and care for babies and if pure and properly prepared milk were supplied at prices which they could afford to pay."

Italian Breads.

A girl who has just come back from Italy wore around her neck over a dark blouse a necklace of rope-gold-fish tied loosely at the front and fastened with two long tassels. Every one who saw this chain spoke of its beauty, thinking it an heirloom. The chain was nothing but a rope of tiny gilt glass beads bought in Venice for about 40 cents. "I am sorry now," she said, "that I did not get more of them. I brought one for a friend, and we have both had the same experience. Every one thinks it one of the old gold chains of colonial days. Over there they are so plentiful that they cheapened the chain to my own mind." The friend, who was up in bed with a straightaway cold, copied this chain for herself. She strung twelve strands of coarse yellow silk with the thickest of beads to be found in this country, twisted them into a tightly coiled rope and fastened the end with a big gold bead, from which hung tassels of the small ones. The effect was not so good as the Venetian chain, for the same delicate beads could not be found, but a showy and unusual ornament was achieved to brighten a dark blouse.

Fashion's Fads.

The long seamless shoulder remains in excellent vogue. Handkerchiefs of the finest linen are edged with black chintilly lace. Exceedingly handsome are the ribbons of metal set, edged with an inch band of satin or Persian silk. The true empire suit has yet to be evolved, and it is doubtful if it would prove worth while should it ever be represented among fashionable models. Cut ostrich feathers are now being made into braids for trimming hats and dresses. These come in all colors that are adapted for street and house wear. Many overskirts come within a few inches of the bottom of the skirt and are edged with a trimming which does not catch in the skirt, but merely gives a finish to the tunic. The touch of red so dominant in the winter's fashions has spread to the artificial flower, and the deep tone of the old fashioned fuchsia now adds warmth to a corsage bouquet of violets. Beautiful bags with ornate frames, heavy with repousse work, are seen in silk, satin, velvet, suede or other fine leather. The frames are often oval or pointed at the top, and the bags more often than not are rounded at the bottom.
