

EDUCATION TOOK UP TIME OF CATHOLICS

Resolution to Condemn National Association Rejected on Debate.

(National News Association) COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 23.—The convention of the American Federation of Catholic societies entered upon its fourth day this morning with a program including a business session in the morning, a trolley ride through the city in the afternoon and a banquet in the evening at which addresses will be made by prominent churchmen.

Contrary to its action a year ago, and in one of the most animated sessions in its history, the convention rejected resolutions to condemn the national educational association as an organization "to set up in this country an educational trust as a menace to individual liberty and to the primary rights which every American citizen enjoys of choosing the kind of education which he may wish to give his child."

Soon after the resolution had been adopted by consent, numerous delegates arose and demanded that the resolution be considered as they were ignorant of the reason why the N. E. A. should be condemned in a general way.

Thomas H. Cannon, of Chicago, head of the Catholic Order of Foresters, started the excitement when he declared that the resolution had been changed since it left the resolutions committee, and that the resolution when he voted for it, did not condemn the N. E. A.

After much wrangling the resolution was rejected finally.

ASK ASSISTANCE OF TRUST ORGANIZERS

Senate Committee Wants Advice on Proposed Business Legislation.

(National News Association) WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The great trust organizers of the country are to be invited by Senate committee on interstate commerce to assist in framing a law to meet the business conditions of the present day. They are to meet with the leaders of labor and suggest to the committee ideas that may lead to the framing of a law that is to supplement the Sherman anti-trust law and the interstate commerce laws.

The question to be determined is whether it is better for the commercial health of the country that the combinations now in restraint of trade be legalized or whether they shall be dissolved making unrestricted competition.

John D. Rockefeller, J. Pierpont Morgan, George W. Perkins, Elbert H. Gary representing the capitalists; Samuel Gompers, and other labor leaders to be brought together in a friendly way to give their views as to needed changes in existing law.

The senate committee has turned the details of preparation of the investigation over to a special subcommittee, of which Senator Cummins is chairman. The Iowa senator is arranging for hearings which will begin in Washington, Nov. 15. "Shall combinations or trusts, said to be in restraint of trade be legalized and permitted to remain intact, or shall competition among all industries be placed on its feet in the interest of ultimate consumers? These are the great questions our committee will endeavor to settle," Senator Cummins said today.

VETERANS HEARD GOV. DIX AND PRES. TAFT

25,000 Men in Encampment Parade at Rochester—G. A. R. Politics.

(National News Association)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 23.—With over 25,000 veterans here, the 45th annual encampment of the G. A. R. has broken all former records for attendance. Today will add thousands more to the number of old soldiers in town.

The real work of the encampment opened at convention hall last night when a big campfire was held, the principal speaker being Governor Dix. President Taft arrived in Rochester this morning at 9 o'clock. He was met at the station by an escort of the 29th infantry, United States regulars and immediately was driven over the line of march of the big parade. His progress through the lines of people on the streets was acclaimed with thunderous cheers and many of the old veterans were in danger of prostration with their enthusiasm.

The annual parade of veterans moved at 9:30 a. m. The line was so long that only portions of it could be sent over the short route at a time. The veterans occupied nearly five hours in passing the reviewing stand. The politics of encampment are beginning to assume a definite shape. The G. A. R. is going through one of the worst storms in its existence in endeavoring to select a commander-in-chief. His progress through the lines of people on the streets was acclaimed with thunderous cheers and many of the old veterans were in danger of prostration with their enthusiasm.

John McElroy, of Washington, the other candidate has had his chances injured by the letter made public yesterday, in which the veterans alleged he tried to drag Republican politics into the G. A. R. business. This letter was written to William J. Patterson of Pittsburg, and it is the Washington aspirant averred that he was the choice of national administration for the post of commander-in-chief.

McElroy made a statement this morning in which he admitted having written the letter, but said it was marked "confidential."

"There is a rule of the Grand Army which prohibits the discussion of politics in its posts or encampments, but this letter was a confidential communication from one comrade to another."

Corporal Tanner this morning says that Judge Trimble has a safe majority of 250 or more. All day yesterday the various state departments held caucuses, and it is from the results of these that the prediction is made that Judge Trimble will be the next commander-in-chief.

Judge Trimble has expressed himself upon the question of pensions, the absorbing topic of the encampment, as follows:

"I favor any good pension bill that will bring the old soldiers the reward which they have so justly earned. I presume the best bill will be the one endorsed by this present encampment."

President Taft will address the veterans this evening at 7 o'clock.

Before it is completed the search will cover every square foot of Paris, as the priceless treasure is believed to be still in this city. Customs authorities at all French ports and at all frontier railroad stations were ordered to make strict search not only of the baggage but of the persons of all travelers leaving France.

One theory persistently pursued is that a wealthy American patron of art who has long coveted the masterpiece of Leonardo Da Vinci employed a daring agent to perpetrate the theft, hoping to keep the art work concealed for years before revealing it.

The great collection of Franz Hals paintings, now the principal pride of Harlem, lay rolled up for about a century in an attic as worthless rags.

Comments on Anonymous Letter Were Made Today by Judge Fox

Commenting upon an anonymous letter, critical of the methods pursued by the authorities in detecting juvenile crime and the handling of the juvenile delinquents, Judge H. C. Fox of the Wayne circuit court, who by virtue of his office is likewise the head of the juvenile court, declared it was "all bosh."

Judge Fox believes there should be a juvenile court judge who could devote his entire attention to the work and not have to divide his time with other affairs, as he is required to do.

The chief complaint made by the anonymous writer is that the authorities "hound" children who have done something wrong.

Judge Fox says that if he was familiar with the identity of the author of anonymous letters he would start an investigation to ascertain the truth of the charges.

But, according to his understanding of the operations of the police, probation officer Mrs. Elizabeth Candler and others interested in this work he does not believe the complaint is a just one. The anonymous writer says in part:

"I wonder how many people in Richmond have kept account of the boys who have been sent to the Plainfield reformatory from this city within the past eighteen months. Do they know the reason for this? Simply because a boy gets into trouble he is taken up to police headquarters and told that he will be sent to the reform school, is probably locked up in that dreadful place all night, perhaps longer, and then released with the warning that if he gets in mischief again, he will receive severe treatment."

"He is then constantly under the watch of the probation officer and police and his parents are questioned about his habits and behavior at home. His teachers are questioned about his behavior at school, and in fact everything bad that can be found out about him is put down in black and white so that all his misdeeds may be brought up against the poor lad in the juvenile court."

"The boy is constantly waited for by officers of the city who will take him at the first opportunity. The second time he is arrested, he is taken to the 'Home for Friendless' and locked up awaiting a hearing in the juvenile court. When he is sentenced, he is taken to the county jail and locked in a cell like a common thief or criminal I know of one case where a child, eleven years of age, was locked in the county jail five days in place of being permitted to be with his widowed mother until he should be taken to Plainfield.

"Is there a law in Indiana permitting such an outrage? No! indeed not. When a boy is sent to Plainfield he is supposed to be taken there and not locked up in jail as if he were a murderer.

"That boy is fatherless, or rest asured such a thing would never have happened. He has a good home and a good mother and everything to have done something wrong."

Judge Fox says that if he was familiar with the identity of the author of anonymous letters he would start an investigation to ascertain the truth of the charges.

"But, according to his understanding of the operations of the police, probation officer Mrs. Elizabeth Candler and others interested in this work he does not believe the complaint is a just one. The anonymous writer says in part:

"Why not search out the boys who have drunken parents and homes of dissipation and who are being reared in dives of dishonesty, instead of boys with better parents who are trying to do right and rear their boys into upright, manly citizens?"

Representative Finly H. Gray of the Sixth Indiana district, was one of the first of the congressmen to leave Washington when the extraordinary session of congress, called by President Taft, adjourned on Tuesday. He will return to Connersville where he will devote his time to business matters.

UNCLE SAM HUNTS BOGUS MONEY MEN

(National News Association)

GALVESTON, Tex., Aug. 23.—Shopmen on the Hariman lines numbering from 4,000 to 6,000 men are expected to strike as a result of the refusal of officials to agree to their demands for increased wages, shorter hours, a scale of promotion and a vacation system in times of reduction of force. The railroads say the men's demands are unreasonable and unjust. The shopmen expect to be called out in 48 hours.
