PEASANTS OF RUSSIA.

They Can't Read and Have to Be Aided by Signs and Symbols.

All Russian shops have signs indicating the business carried on within them. Most of them have paintings describing the articles sold. For example, outside the fishmonger's is a large picture of fish; outside the butcher's, of meat; outside the poultryer's, of chicken and game; outside the tea-shop, of teapots, glasses and saucers.

Houses are painted red, green, yellow, blue, so that the peasants may easily differentiate them or explain the way. Trains are sent off by bells at the station because the peasants cannot read the time tables. The first bell, one chime, is a quarter of an hour before the train starts; the second, two chimes, is five minutes before, and the third, three chimes, means the train is starting.

At postoffices men are employed to write letters for peasants or read them at a fixed tariff. For addressing an envelope, one farthing; for writing a postcard or a short letter, penny farthing; for writing a long letter, twopenny halfpenny, and for reading a letter aloud, one penny. Every pillar box has a picture of a letter on it, so that the peasant may know it is the place in which to drop his postcard or his envelope. Russia is, as a rule, free from billboards, because the peasant cannot read—London Family Herald.

ENGLISH INN NAMES.

Some of Them Are as Quaint as Their Origins Are Queer.

Many explanations have been given of curious signboards for inns. The Goat and Compasses is supposed to be a corruption of a motto set over inns during the Puritan period, "Good inn compasses us." Bag of Nails of "Bacchanalia." Why Not and Dewdrop inn are described as invitations to the wayfarer; Bird in Hand and Last House, or Final, suggestions that he should not waste his opportunities to imbibe.

The Bull and Mouth is said to be a corruption of Boulogne Mouth, captured by Henry VIII. Bull and Gate, it is suggested, may possibly be a similar vulgarism for Boulogne Gate.

Great battles fought and fortresses taken are commemorated by Gibraltar, Waterloo, Battle of the Nile, and Trafalgar. Admirals range from Blake to Napier, generals from Marlborough to Wolsley, Wellington, Nelson and Keppel being the most common.

It is surprising how many of the Nelson inns are buildings three or four centuries old, "showing that the innkeeper was prepared to sacrifice the sign under which he had hitherto done business and trusted to make a new reputation under the aegis of the popular hero."—Westminster Gazette.

Italy's Tricolor.

Napoleon gave Italy her tricolor (red, white and green) in 1805, and it is the flag of United Italy.

A LOAD OF DAINTIES.

The Prize His Feast of Daring Won For the Hungry Soldiers.

While a large Cuban force, before the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, was besieging a town held by the Spaniards the officers found it difficult to get any variety in their daily bill of fare. General Frederick Funston, at that time in the Cuban service along with other young Americans, describes in his book, "Memories of Two Wars," some of the "diversions" by which delicacies were obtained—or not, as the case might be.

Time hung heavily on our hands, but we had some diversions.

One night Huntington made a lone hand raid on the town. He crawled through the Spanish lines, roamed unchallenged through the streets and came back with a fine turkey.

Inspired by this feat, Colonel Carlos Garcia's negro servant, who had known the town well in times of peace, begged his chief for permission to enter and try to get a supply of Spanish delicacies from the abandoned stores. Permission was reluctantly given, and the plucky fellow set out on his perilous errand.

He wormed his way through the grass, crawled under the barb wire entanglements, reached the center of the town and effected entrance into a general store. Inside it was pitch dark, and he dared not strike a light, but by feeling about he found a lot of promising cans and put them in a sugar sack that he had with him.

Handicapped by his heavy load, he found returning slow and painful, as well as dangerous, but finally, after an absence of five hours, the esultant negro placed his load on Colonel Garcia's feet, whose friends promptly gathered to see the result of the raid and mayhap to partake thereof.

By the light of a campfire the sack was quickly emptied of its contents—eighteen cans of house paint! If there was any one thing that nobody had any use for in those days it was house paint. The subsequent proceedings were appropriate to the occasion.

The Missing Brogue.

In his book of reminiscences George Chirgwin, the English comedian, tells a story that illustrates two of his strong points on the stage—his quickness of repartee and his trick of entering into confidential relations with his audience.

He was singing an Irish song in an Irish town once, but he had some difficulty with the brogue.

A typical Pat in the audience stood up and called out indignantly, "Och, ye spalpeen, an' where's yer brogue intirely?"

Chirgwin grinned cheerfully. "You've got it," he said, and the audience screamed themselves hoarse with delight.

A Tub of Rosewater.

The small son of Victor Rosewater, editor of the Omaha Bee and recently Republican national committeeman for Nebraska, was desirous of sailing boats in the bathtub of the Rosewater home.

"You cannot," said Mrs. Rosewater. "Father is taking a bath just now."

"Why is father taking a bath?" demanded the boy.

"Why do you take a bath?" countered Mrs. Rosewater.

"Because I have to," replied the son. —Saturday Evening Post.

Kept Him in His Place.

He was a bonehead pugilist, and we will call him Kid Scott. He was fighting in a town in the west one night. He put the other fellow down for a count, but as the referee said "nine" the other fellow started to get up.

"You can't get up," said the referee. "Why is father taking a bath?" demanded the boy.

"Why do you take a bath?" countered Mrs. Rosewater.

"Because I have to," replied the son. —Saturday Evening Post.

KICKED HIM IN THE NECK.

Scott walked over and kicked him in the neck.

"Great Scott, man!" said his manager, growing as Scott was disquised.

"Whatever made you kick him in the neck? You had him kicked!"

"Sure I had him kicked!" yelled Scott. "The slob didn't have no business tryin' to get up!"—Cincinnati Times-Star.

More Suitable.

A very stout young woman asked advice about her costume for a fancy dress ball. "I think of going as Helen of Troy," she ended. "Do you think it would suit me?" Her companion, surveying the young woman's swelling contours with a faint smile, answered, "Helen of Troy—or, perhaps, don't you think Helen of Avoirdupois would be better?"

Fish For the Brain.

Replying to a "Young Author," Mark Twain wrote: "Yes, Agassiz does recommend authors to eat fish because the phosphorus in it makes brains. So far you are correct. But I cannot help you to a decision about the amount you need to eat—at least, not with certainty. If the specimen composition you sent is about your fair usual average I should judge that a couple of whales would be all you would want for the present—not the largest kind, but simply good, middle sized whales."
