WILL INVESTIGATE WOMAN'S DEATH

(National News Association)

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Mrs. Etta Johnson, wife of John Arthur Johnson, negro champion heavyweight prizefighter of the world, died today in the Provident hospital as a result of a self-inflicted bullet wound. Mrs. Johnson, a white woman, former wife of Clarence Duryea and a conspicuous figure in New York and Long Island society, has been suffering from a nervous attack for some time. Last night after retiring to her room in the apartment above her husband's new Cafe de Champion, she dismissed her two negro maids. Five minutes later they heard a shot. Rushing into the room they found the woman lying across the bed, a revolver by her side. Police were summoned and the woman removed to the hospital.

A few minutes later Johnson reached his home. He was told of the affair and jumping into one of his racing automobiles, rushed to the hospital. He arrived just as his wife was laid on the operating slab where a vain effort was made to save her life. She died shortly after 3 o'clock this morning.

For six years Mrs. Johnson was the wife of Clarence Duryea. She obtained a divorce in Chicago in 1910 and married Johnson. She is a cousin of Floretta Whaley, the girl who five years ago eloped with Rev. Jere Cook from Hempstead, N. Y.

Friends of the woman say that the real cause of her nervous breakdown was the realization that she had cut herself off forever from old friends and associations. She was treated as an outcast by Johnson's negro friends who resented his having married a woman outside his own race.

Mrs. Johnson was to have left last night for Las Vegas, N. M., in the home that a change of climate would benefit her health. She broke down shortly before train time and was unable to depart. Johnson was at the station explaining the situation to friends with whom she was to make the trip when the woman shot herself.

Rev. John S. Morris, of St. Monica's Roman Catholic church, administered extreme unction to the dying woman. Johnson was at the bedside and wept like a child while the priest was reading the service.

An inquest into Mrs. Johnson's death was set for 2 o'clock this afternoon. Stories that the pugilist and his wife had quarreled had reached the ears of the coroner and these were to be investigated. The black champion was grief stricken today and denied the reports of any quarrel between his wife and himself.

NEW YEAR FOR JEWS COMPARES TAFT WITH LOUIS XIV

Local Members of Race Did Not Celebrate.

The Jewish New Year, or Rosh Hashanah, as it is called in Hebrew, was observed today. Local Jews did not celebrate the day with the festivities that mark its observance in the larger cities where there are many Jews. Local Jews mailed New Year cards to their friends and were the recipients of similar missives.

While, owing to the variance between the solar and lunar system of calculation, it may appear to occur irregularly, the new year is definitely set in the Jewish calendar as the first day of the seventh lunar month, Tishri. It does not commemorate any historical incident. Its appeal is entirely to the present and to the individual conscience.

The biblical title of the day is the "Memorial day," from which the Israelites infer that he is held in merciful remembrance by God, and it is therefore incumbent upon him to be mindful of his higher responsibilities to the merciful Father, and to his fellowman. The solemnity and sanctity of the day, may also be attributed to the change of the season. It forms the transition from summer to winter, which is suggestive of the perishableness of all natural products, and thus making it appropriate for man to reflect on his frailty and the instability of his earthly existence.

The Israelite, therefore, is reminded of his duty to examine his past record, rectify his errors and to firmly resolve to live up to his highest ideals in the future. It is therefore a solemn, though not a mournful occasion. It is a day of chastened memories, a day of reflecting on man's frailty of character, but beneath this sombre sense of weakness, both physical and moral, there lies in the worshipper's heart the serene certitude of God's justice and mercy.

In an address before the Progressive congressional convention of the Eleventh district held at Peru, Wednesday, William Dudley Foulke, of this city, compared present conditions here with those preceding the outbreak of the French Revolution.

Mr. Foulke declared that he did not want to be an alarmist, but he thought that unless something was done to prevent the impending crisis, there might be an occurrence in this country something similar to the French revolution. He reviewed the history of political parties of the past and declared that many had not survived because they were not founded on the proper principles and issues. He declared that conditions are such now that socialism is rapidly growing and from this fact he drew the conclusion that people were dissatisfied with conditions.

He declared that Taft was a good man, but could be led by the nose by schemers, and compared him to Louis XIV of France. "We want a man that no one can lead around," he said. Taft was not an issue in Indiana, but the battle is between the Democrats and Progressives. He asked for popular government and not misrule of convention committees. He declared against the bosses and the trusts.

National defense, states rights, the courts, the third term question and social and industrial justice were taken up by the speaker and the attitude of the Progressive party on these issues was compared with that of the Democratic and Republican parties. He paid a compliment to William R. Hearst and took a slap at William J. Bryan, builder of the Democratic platform, because the latter stated that there was something wrong but did not tell how it should be remedied and how the power should be brought back to the people.

Mr. Foulke favored the initiative and referendum and the recall as the best means of giving the people the power to rule. He cited Switzerland, which has used these means for fifty years with the greatest of success. He stated that he did not wish to do away with representative government but wished to make the government truly representative.

In speaking of the trusts Mr. Foulke said that he thought this question was greater than tariff. He stated that the Standard Oil company and the beef trust, which he declared were the two largest trusts in the United States had nothing to do with the tariff. He declared that it was impossible to legislate to "bust the trusts" as the Democrats argued and cited a few recent cases of "reasonable" and "unreasonable" legislation and trials, but argued that the government could control them. He cited the railway as an instance of this and showed how the interstate commerce commission had been so successful.
