

ATTEMPT TO FRAME NEW "BIRD LAWS"

Meeting of Hunters Will Be Held in Indianapolis or St. Louis.

(National News Association) WASHINGTON, March 26.—Within a few months a meeting of hunters, as well as those who are interested in affording protection to migratory birds such as wild ducks and wild geese, will be held either in Indianapolis or St. Louis for a thorough airing of views on the new Federal law which is designed for the protection of migratory game.

It is intended to call four meetings of this character under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture, one to be held in the South, one in the East, one in the far West and the other at Indianapolis or St. Louis for the north central states.

Views on the new legislation, both pro and con, will be invited and among those who will receive special invitations are the authorities who are charged with the enforcement of the game laws in the various states.

The Department of Agriculture is aiming first of all to harmonize the various views on the subject and to bring about the fullest possible measure of co-operation between the general government and the states, and it is striving to obtain a general consensus of views before it promulgates the new migratory game regulations.

The provision of Federal legislation referred to, which promises to put a quietus on duck hunting except under stringent Federal regulations, is contained in the agricultural appropriation bill, to which former President Taft affixed his signature not longer than an hour before the recent Congress expired.—It is as follows:

"All wild geese, wild swans, brant, wild ducks, snipe, plover, woodcock, quail, wild pigeons and all other migratory game and insectivorous birds which in their Northern and Southern migrations pass through or do not remain permanently the entire year within the border of any state or territory, shall hereafter be deemed to be within the custody and protection of the government of the United States and shall not be destroyed or taken contrary to regulations hereinafter provided."

END LIVER TROUBLE WITHOUT CALOMEL

Untrustworthy Drug, Thought to Loosen the Teeth, Now Made Absolutely Unnecessary.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are the mildest, but surest laxative known, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. Dr. Edwards has been calomel's uncompromising foe. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets, a rare combination of vegetable compounds mixed with olive oil. These pleasant, harmless little tablets do all the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel at all, but to let Olive Tablets take their place.

Most headache, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" the clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits.

At 10c and 25c a box. "Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own."

WOULD-BE-RESCUER MET HEROIC DEATH

(National News Association)

LAFAYETTE, Ind., March 26.—L. P. Woolery, a special student at Purdue, lost his life in the raging water of the Wabash river between the Main and Brown street bridges yesterday afternoon when the torrent upset a canoe in which he and G. B. Ely, a junior at Purdue, were trying to get to the Brown street levee to rescue Paul Wangerin and Charles Burhouse, who were marooned there.

Wangerin and Burhouse were standing on the west pier of the Brown street bridge when two of the spans collapsed. Woolery and Ely were warned against venturing out but persevered.

About thirty feet from the shore, a wave struck the frail craft and upset it. Woolery tried to swim but could not and he sank in about sixteen feet of water. His body has not been recovered.

Swims to Safety.

Ely swam through the rough water until he came to the roof of a barn. The water was sweeping around the barn at a terrific rate when Capt. John Kluth of the Police Department arranged a pulley which Ely hung to and he was carried to the Main street levee. His frantic mother was on the shore watching him.

Woolery, who lost his life, is a son of F. P. Woolery of 1962 Broadway, Indianapolis.

MOTORCYCLE NOTES

It is impossible for the naval officers to take a spin over the "restless deep," but with a keen anticipation of motorcycling, possibilities while in port, several of the officers of the U. S. "Wyoming" carrying "two-wheelers" aboard ship.

When they are in port, the officers have the motorcycles taken from the special compartment in which they are stored, swung to a lighter by means of an electric crane, and thence ashore. The motorcycle thus gives them an opportunity to get a more intimate view of the many countries where they touch.
