What are the Duties of the Superintendent of County Schools?

Should the county superintendent of schools be a judge, a sheriff, a political officer, or just an educator who knows his business and gives his whole attention to the schools? He is or has been all of these in different parts of the United States. In Texas it is the county judge who serves in many of the counties as ex-officio superintendent of schools, and in at least one state the sheriff used to hold the office. But Texas expects soon to have real county superintendents in all the counties that are still without them, according to information received at the United States Bureau of Education.

Not only does Texas desire to have regular county superintendents in place of county judges, but she aims to make sure that the superintendents will not be political nominees. The proposed plan puts the selection of the county superintendent in the hands of the county board of education to the end that this officer, like his city colleague, may be chosen for educational fitness rather than for political expediency. The whole idea is to make the county superintendent, as he is in many states and as he ought to be wherever the office exists, a professionally trained school expert.

The Exact Situation in Dayton By President John H. Patterson

President John Patterson, chairman of the Relief Committee, Relief Divisions, Sanitary Officers, Military Officials, Military Officials and representatives of the press, who have been scattered through the entire city, met Sunday. At the end of the meeting President Patterson gave out the following statement:

"The entire situation is now completely in hand, thanks to the prompt action of President Wilson in co-operating with us in sending Secretary of War Garrison, General Leonard Wood, Colonel Rupert Blue and his associates to us.

"The work of cleaning up the city is now proceeding satisfactorily. Immediately upon the arrival of the secretary of war, Governor Cox promptly advised him by telephone to use his own judgment in appointing a chief sanitary officer. Major Thomas L. Rhoades, who was appointed chief sanitary officer, has divided the city into sixteen districts, each in charge of a district sanitary officer, and each sanitary officer has his own staff selected from among local physicians and volunteer physicians from other cities. His instructions in brief form have been sent broadcast over the city, giving definite direction to the inhabitants for the safeguarding of health.

"The sewer and water system is rapidly being re-opened and will probably be in complete working order Monday.

"The telegraph and telephone companies have been rushing operations into the city, but so far, have been utterly unable to answer all the telegrams asking for information.

"This has been particularly hard on relatives of Dayton people, but to relieve the anxiety as far as possible, a conservative estimate of the dead indicates that the number will not total over 200.

er food should be sent, should be imperishable.

"The suffering throughout the city is very much relieved, and with the organization we now have, every one will soon be properly clothed and housed.

"There are enough doctors in the city to take care of all medical work.

"We are also fairly well supplied with nurses, although nurses, competent to act as instructors would be welcome.

"The city has suffered a greater financial loss by the flood than it would have, had a fire swept the same area, as there was practically no insurance carried in the city against floods.

"Perfect order is being maintained and the city will remain under martial law indefinitely. Train service is improving, although it will be some time before there will be any regular train schedule.

"Dayton does not need sight-seers. The militia are impressing sight-seers as well as citizens, in the service, any one who comes as a sight-seer may have to assist in cleaning the streets and aiding in sanitary relief work.
