

WATSON IN SPEECH TO GRAIN DEALERS

He Lingers Fondly on the "Ancient Institutions of the Country."

(Palladium Special.)

CINCINNATI, June 18.—At the closing session of the Council of Grain Exchanges, the Ohio Grain Dealers' Association and the Indiana Grain Dealers' association, the address of the day was made by James E. Watson, one of congressional fame, who so oft had waved the American flag, called upon the constitution and soared with the eagle in wonderful flights of oratory during the years that Cannon perched upon the throne in the House. Mr. Watson stood in the fore of the hall and orated with clenched fist and dripping brow.

"If conditions were only a little more favorable, by gum, I'd make you a regular speech," he commented as he wiped the beads of perspiration from his face at a moment when there was a lull in the noise from the streets and a cool wave seemed to sweep the hall.

The former congressman was reminiscent of the past and critical of the present and future.

Meeting Is Unusual.

It was an unusual gathering of grain men. For the first time in history three organizations of this nature were holding their annual meetings at one time and place, and for the first time the members were assembled in joint session. Watson was the headliner on the program and was speaking on the theme, "The Relation of Business To Government."

Watson went back to the old order of things. He lingered fondly upon "the ancient institutions of our country, the principles of our forefathers and the truths that have been proved over and over only to be doubted again." He hurried back to the beginning of the country and traced the problems that were met and the success and prosperity that ensued. Then he glanced at the present.

"We are living at a time when everybody is willing to reform every one else and yet give scant attention to reforming himself; we are living at a time when everybody wants to buy at the lowest figure and sell at the highest price; we are living at a time when every manufacturer wants his raw materials on the free list and his finished product walled sky high with protection. And we are seeking to remedy all evils by legislation."

"About the only truth that goes unchallenged nowadays is the multiplication table, and I believe there are even some persons who are inclined to doubt it. It would seem that all the truths that have been agitated and proved time and again in the past has been thrashed out again."

"When our forefathers wrote into the constitution that all men are equal they saw that the coming problem would be whether the individual was of too big or too little importance. You have seen the rule of the majority. That rule can be far more despotic, far more tyrannical and far more disastrous in its effects than the rule of an individual. For who can withstand its force? who can thwart its progress?"

"All government must be worked out through institutions. We must apply the human equality to the rule of the majority to meet the exigencies of advancing civilization. Stability in a nation is essential to peace, to prosperity, to commercial progress, to intellectual and moral advancement. And the best policy to secure stability is to keep our institutions preserved untainted and unchanged."

"Many of the problems that confront us must be settled by law, and yet the sentiment of the American people for the rights of their fellow men must play a prominent part. You can't legislate morality or intellectuality. Men are like trees. They grow from the inside out, and instead of enacting laws you must change the character of the men. But that does not mean that we must do away with the institutions under which we have made such wonderful advancement and try experiments of which we know nothing."

Cling to Principles.
"We must cling to our ancient principles. In these alone is our safety. Nations have tottered and fallen because they were not built upon the rock. The tendency of the time is to restrict business; to put a bridle upon its head and a bit in its mouth and to hold it in check. And we have come to a time when we must give business a chance. You are witnessing a time when a business man cannot go before the lawmakers of his country in the interest of his business without being charged as being a part of an insidious lobby."

CHARGES HUSBAND WITH ABANDONMENT

Belle Huff filed suit for a divorce from Woodard Huff this morning. She alleged that on June 13, 1911, her husband abandoned her without cause and since that time has failed and neglected to make provisions for her support.

APPOINT NORDQUIST

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. last evening, Physical Director F. A. Nordquist, of the Lima Y. M. C. A., was offered the same position here to succeed Roy Horton, who leaves in August for Indianapolis. Mr. Nordquist was notified of his selection this morning and has not stated as yet whether he would accept the offer.

ASKS $11 DAMAGES.

Suit was filed by Lillian Moelk against James Crafton for real estate and $11 dollars damages for the retention by the defendant. The case was appealed from the court of a justice of the peace.

A BABY INCUBATOR FOR THE HOSPITAL

The trustees of Reid Memorial hospital, on the recommendation of the physicians, will purchase a baby incubator for the institution early next winter.

This, physicians declare is a great need at the hospital to properly care for prematurely born infants. Such babies could be placed in the incubator and receive the benefit of evenly regulated temperature until they attain normal strength.

At least five prematurely born babies have died from the lack of such treatment, it is said.

Reid hospital now has for the first time in many years a waiting list for private rooms. There is room for charity patients in the wards but the physicians have been urged by the superintendent, Miss Frances Marsh, to bring all such cases to the institution as can be accommodated.

"Dull" Season No Longer.

That the institution is so well filled at the present time, which generally is the "dull" season of the year, speaks well for the management of the new administration, physicians declare.

At the present time the operating room is being given a thorough overhauling and a lecture room for nurses in the basement is being equipped.

Monday, Miss Marsh distributed 1,000 cans and jars to a large number of Richmond women for the purpose of having them filled with jellies, fruit and preserves for use at the hospital.

MISSIONARY WORK SHOULD BE TAUGHT

The evening session of the White-water Quarterly Bible school conference of Friends churches was addressed by Rev. Edgar Williams of Carthage whose talk was directed to the Sunday school teachers. The conference was held at the South Eighth Street Friends church yesterday afternoon and evening. Rev. Charles E. Tebbetts delivered the principal address of the afternoon, speaking on "How to Teach Missionary Work in the Sunday Schools."

Rev. Williams instructed the teachers as to how to impress the pupils with the Sunday school teachings. He outlined their duties and the qualifications necessary in a teacher. He also gave the teachers who were there examples of how to conduct classes in Sunday school work.

Rev. Tebbetts who returned recently from a tour of the Pacific coast on Missionary work, stated that this work should be taught Sunday school pupils. He said that the younger members of the churches and Sunday schools of the city should be instructed in the work so that it can be taken up by those who wish to enter it when they are needed.

After his address a general discussion of the different phases of Sunday school work was held. Fred Teas of Centerville talked on "The Grand Work in the Sunday Schools" and Mrs. Hershel Coffin read a paper on "The Organized Class." Mrs. W. O. Wendenhall, quarterly meeting superintendent, presided at the afternoon session.

CLERKS WANT DAY
OFF FOR A PICNIC

A mammoth all-day clerks' picnic is being planned by several clerks of this city. No date has been set as yet, but if the employers will co-operate with the clerks to give them a day's outing, the picnic probably will be held during the middle of July. There are more than one thousand clerks in the city.

Several merchants have already signified their willingness to close their stores for one day so that the clerks may attend the picnic, if other merchants in the city will do likewise. The merchants will be solicited, and if they respond to the wishes of the clerks, the affair probably will be instituted as an annual clerks' holiday.

The clerks plan to leave the city early in the morning on special cars. Those attending the picnic would take basket lunches with them and remain at the park until evening. Dancing during the day would be one of the features.

charge of this committee. The chapel period tomorrow will be in charge of Dr. Harry N. Holmes, who is in charge of the parade. The path of the procession will be announced tomorrow.

The lunch committee in charge of Miss Elsie Marshall, is preparing for many more lunches than at first planned, and probably three thousand lunches will be served on the lawn at the noon hour.
