

"YOU ARE A LIAR" ANSWERS JOHNSON

Disclaims Opposing Attorney's Charge of Covering up Testimony.

CO. 13 AN UPROAR

Judge Fox Orders Jury to Retire While Lawyers

In a heated word battle between attorneys this afternoon in the Wayne circuit court during the cross-examination of Mrs. Anna Circle, wife of the Winchester man accused of the murder of Mrs. May Brown, the lie was passed. Confusion reigned, and Judge Fox was compelled to dismiss the jury until order could be restored.

The trouble started when Attorney Henry V. Johnson, counsel for the defense, objected to a question asked by Theodore Shockney, state's attorney, of Mrs. Circle. Upon Johnson's objection Shockney arose and accused the former of attempting to cover up testimony which should be presented to the jury.

"You're a liar!" cried Johnson, advancing toward Shockney. "No man can say that about me and get off unscathed."

Court in Uproar.
At this point the court rapped for order, and the entire court room was in an uproar. Seeing that he was unable to quiet the attorneys, the judge ordered the jury to retire to its room. He then called the court bailiffs.

"When it comes to the point where I can not control this court and can not maintain order, I will get off the bench," said Judge Fox, when the court room was again quiet. "Attorneys on both sides of this case have been carrying personalities too far. I should fine you for contempt of court. I will see that no more disorder is seen in this case."

Explains Discrepancies.

She testified that her husband had been asked to come to her home that night and she said she was able to give the exact times by the clock when she and her son, Wilbert spoke of asking Circle home. Her memory of many of the incidents had faded, but discrepancies in her testimony as to certain other times, was explained later by the fact that the clock at the home was ten minutes fast. She said she was able to establish exact times because of two kinds of medicine she was taking, for which she had to look at the clock every few minutes.

Shockney questioned her closely as to her greeting to her husband when he came home on the night of the murder. She emphatically stated that she did not embrace her husband and that Shockney read her testimony before the grand jury to the effect that she had thrown her arms around Circle and kissed him, she said, "I forgot what I testified before the grand jury."

The fact that the testimony of Mrs. Circle differed in so many places and that she cannot remember many things which were important at that time, but is able to testify to things which were trivial then, but are now essential to the defense, will count against Circle when the jury weighs the evidence. Her son, Wilbert, made a good witness however and his testimony agreed at all points.

RUSSIAN ORCHESTRA HERE NEXT SUNDAY

One of the big numbers of the program to be given by the Russian Symphony Orchestra which appears at the Coliseum on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 16, will be the "1812" Overture from the great Russian composer, Tchaikowsky, which commemorates Napoleon's retreat from Moscow. This is a brilliant and spectacular composition and is interesting because of its historic significance and its military symbolism. The plot will be upon Friday morning at nine o'clock at the Starr Piano company and there is no extra charge for reserved seats.

DEMOCRATS SOUND CALL FOR CURRENCY CAUCUS TOMORROW

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Senator Kern, Democratic leader, today sent a formal call to Democratic senators to meet at 2 o'clock tomorrow, to "consult and advise" on the currency bill. Senator Kern said the caucus probably would not be public.

Resolutions adopted will not be binding, the senator said. "It is a question," he said, "of whether something shall be done or not. We can not go into the senate in this bill like an unorganized mob, like men fighting in the dark. If we are to pass a bill we must be organized like when we passed the tariff bill."

The Republicans today threatened to frame a bill themselves and support it in the senate.

POST OFFICE HELPS XMAS BUSINESS

Bitter Words Passed And Warfare Waged Over Court Location

After forty years have elapsed, the old feeling of antagonism between the western and eastern part of Wayne county has not entirely been erased. It was called to mind again today by the finding of an old receipt for money which was paid to a committee to purchase the grounds on which the Wayne county court house now stands.

The receipt, dated July 14, 1873, was given to Jeremy Mansur for $150, his contribution to the fund. The total amount of the fund which purchased the grounds has been forgotten by many, but the stress of the times is still remembered.

The committee which was appointed to take charge of the money consisted of A. Ernst, a retired merchant, George W. Barnes and Thomas Nestor, then retired farmers.

The residents of Centerville objected strongly to the suggestions of her bigger neighbor, Richmond that the county seat be moved. That was prior to 1870. Then, according to old residents of Centerville, Richmond looked to bullying and threatening and finally the matter became almost a man to man fight for the possession of the county seat.

Centerville was then considered one of the best places for residence purposes in the county. But it lacked the business aspect of Richmond and Richmond had grown from a village smaller than Centerville to exceed it in population until it became the gathering place and trading center of the county. Those in the eastern part thought that Richmond should be the county seat. West of Centerville, all the citizens backed that town.

Finally the desire for the removal of the county seat to Richmond reached the climax and after all demands of public sentiment had failed, the community took the matter in hand and appointed the committee of three to raise funds and secure an option on the property between Third and Fourth streets and extending one square south of Main street.

When the date was set for the transfer of the county seat there was a hitch in proceedings. A mob went to Centerville to investigate. They found the Centerville citizens loathe to part with the court house without a struggle.

There were a number of shots fired, but finally the residents of eastern Wayne county mastered the situation and the records of the county were transferred to Richmond.

The same feeling was evident between the residents of Salisbury, Wayne county's first incorporated town and first county seat, and the residents of Centerville. Salisbury was the county seat before Richmond was a village, and as early as 1813 there was strife between Salisbury and Centerville for the removal of the county seat. Some time later the state legislature passed an act making Centerville the county seat, if certain provisions were carried out.

In its three locations the county seat has traveled only nine miles, and the two latest locations are within three miles of the original county seat at Salisbury.

CAPTAIN STANFORD APPOINTED HERE

Capt. and Mrs. Leo Stanford, of Frankfort, Ind., have been appointed to the local Salvation Army post to succeed Ensign and Mrs. Vendeville, who have resigned to enter the work at Traverse City, Mich.

Ensign and Mrs. Vendeville will leave tomorrow for Traverse City. On their way to their new location the Vendevilles will stop over in Chicago for a general meeting of Salvation Army officers.

The change in the leadership of the local post came at the request of Ensign Vendeville, who asked to be assigned to some place of duty in his native state of Michigan. The finances of the Richmond post are in the best condition in their history.

STREET STORIES

The frisky young goat, which nibbled reflectively at shin guards and head harness under the grandstand during the Earlham-Wabash football game has been removed from denominational surroundings and is again subsisting on its former diet of tin cans and old shoes picked up in West Side alleys.

Had the Quakers beaten Wabash the boat was to have been wrapped in a scarlet blanket and paraded over the gridiron at the head of a student snake dance. But the Quakers couldn't get past the Little Giant's defense and so had no chance to use the goat.

It is rumored that the members of the Wabash team learned of the location of the boat and for a time considered using him in a parade of their own but feared to make the attempt owing to the preponderance of Earlham adherents in the field.

But back in the familiar alley of his childhood the goat forages for a meager livelihood and ponders pensively on how the inefficient Quaker line robbed him of the enjoyment of the red letter day of his life.

FARMS BEAR SIGNS "NO HUNTING HERE"

More Than 200 Sportsmen Secure Licenses From County Clerk.

AMOS BEAR OLDEST

More than two hundred hunters, ranging in ages from 16 to 74 years, have taken out licenses to hunt since the first day of November. Yesterday, with the opening of the quail season, the greatest number of licenses were issued, seventy-six being taken out during the day.

Statistics of the licenses sold this month show that the average hunter has blue eyes, brown hair, is 5 feet 8 1/2 inches tall, and weighs 159.9 pounds. The description of every hunter taking out a license is placed on the license, and on the record which remains in the clerk's office.

There are only two red-haired hunters in the county, which signifies that red-haired persons are either too busy to hunt or the particular color of hair is not conducive to attracting rabbits and other game from their lairs.

Two Have Red Hair.

Of the last fifty who purchased licenses, thirty-eight are light complexioned, nine are dark. Three are colored. In the matter of the color of their hair only six have gray hair, although fourteen of the last fifty taking licenses are past the age of fifty years. There are twenty-two brown-haired hunters, five with dark hair, nine with light hair and seven with black hair.

It is estimated that about ninety-five per cent of the farms in Wayne county bear signs on the fence corners, warning hunters to "Keep out" and making a further statement: "No hunting on these premises." Many farmers and far owners have used the newspapers to warn hunters to keep on the road when passing their farms.

Still there are many woods and farms on which sportsmen may try to scare out a few rabbit or flush out a covey of quail.

Then there are many who will add the expense of their day's outing by donating one farmer something which will for the time change his views on the matter.

Regular Customer.

Of this army of hunters there is only one who is more than 70 years old. It is Amos Bear of East Germantown. He is 74 years old, and has taken out a hunting and fishing license every year since the law made it compulsory. The youngest to have taken out a license during this month are both 16-year-old boys. One is Rufus Kuster of Cambridge City, and the other is George Weaver of this city.

The question has arisen as to whether or not a person can hunt on the farm of a friend at the invitation of the owner of the farm, without a license. This is contrary to the 1913 statute. Only the owner of a farm can hunt on his own farm without a license.

The state issued summaries and copies of hunting laws recently and several hundred of these have been given out by County Clerk Mathews. There is a short summary on the back of each license.

More than fifty thousand potters are employed in Staffordshire, England.

MASS MEETING AT Y. M. C. A. TONIGHT

Rev. D. B. Johnson to Give Outline of Needed Legislation in State.

The Citizens' Mass Meeting tonight at the high school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock will be of unusual importance. The address will be by Rev. D. B. Johnson, state superintendent of the Indiana Civic Union. The subject is "The Causes and Cure of Lawlessness." Some definite recommendations will be made for Richmond, and the program for needed legislation will be outlined.

"NAME YOUR FARMS" ADVICE OF PARSONS

County Recorder Parsons is anxious to secure more applications to register farm names in the county under the new 1913 law. Only one application has been received in the office as yet, that being from Otto Rettig who named his property east of Richmond, "Pleasant View."

The county recorder believes that a number of stock farms in the county which have not registered the names are making a mistake in waiting so long as any other farm can be given the same name until the application is in.

The registration book for which Mr. Parsons composed a form which is now in the hands of the printer, will not be ready until November 25. However, all applications will be kept and copied in the register in the order in which they were brought in. The fee to insure an exclusive name is $1.

Money Saved
by Making Your Cough Syrup at Home
Takes But a Few Moments, and Stops a Hard Cough
in a Hurry.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain large quantities of plain syrup. If you take one pint of granulated sugar, add a pint of warm water and stir about ten minutes, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with the sugar syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready made for 25c. Take a teaspoonful every two or three hours. It keeps perfectly. You will find it one of the best cough syrups you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold. Usually conquers an ordinary cough in a few hours. It is just laxative enough as a good tonic effect, and the taste is pleasant.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup, soreness and bronchial asthma. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gualacal and other healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This plan for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used in more homes than any other remedy. The plan has often been imitated but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.
