GERMAN FIGHT ON VERDUM BRINGS FEAR TO FRENCH

BY HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—That the desperate attack of the Germans on the line of French fortifications between Verdun and Toul on the river Meuse is bearing fruit is indicated by the official admission at Paris that the Germans succeeded in crossing the Meuse.

Though the official statement says that the greater part of the attacking forces were driven back across the river it does not account for those remaining on the west bank of the strong force remains there. It may prove highly dangerous to the allies. The fortress of Verdun is the key-stone of the French defense. If the Germans succeed in capturing it, they will be able to align their armies on almost a straight front from the Oise to Metz. This would give them a line of communication through Luxembourg and Metz and permit them to regain the ground lost when the Crown Prince's army was forced to retreat from Ste. Menhoud to Montfacon.

Many experts believe the attack on the German right wing in an attempt to sever the German lines of communication into Belgium is the crisis of the battle of the Aisne. The indications today are that they were mistaken and the crisis of the conflict is along the Meuse.

VOTERS DECIDE

the Indiana people as to whether a convention shall be called for the purpose of revising the state constitution which has had no revision since 1851, when a convention was called to revise the original constitution of 1816.

There is, of course, a clashing of interests on this question and when the campaign warms up it promises to be one of the vital issues. The question of calling a constitutional convention, for instance, to revise the liquor question, which in this state always an exceedingly live issue.

"This election also involves many other important state matters; it will decide the fate of the Democratic party in Indiana—whether the mutiny of the anti-Taft element against the organization is to spell utter defeat for the party, or victory for the machine and the absolute crushing of the opposition faction; it will decide whether the Republican party in Indiana has the ability to 'come back' and, to a great degree, will decide the fate of the Progressive party."

To Vote on Subsidy.

"Also this election is to determine whether the next legislature is to be again controlled by reactionaries or whether the majorities in both branches of the legislature will be composed of men who will respond to the public demand for modern legislation, both economic, governmental and social.

"In Wayne county as well as every other county the coming election also involves affairs of purely county interest, notably the selection of new incumbents for the majority of county offices, including the judge of the county court.

"And in Wayne and Boston towns of this county it will also be decided whether the former township shall authorize a $100,000 bond issue and the latter township a $10,000 bond issue as a subsidy for a proposed traction line connecting Richmond and Hamilton, O.

"If the issues at stake at this election fail to impress any voter with the importance of qualifying himself to vote at the October registration, then he is a very poor citizen and undeserving of his citizenship."
