ATHLETICS BLAME UMP'S FOR YESTERDAY'S DEFEAT

Claim Darkness in Twelfth Should Have Caused Umpires to Call Game—Believe Batting Eyes Have Been Found and Hopeful of Downing Braves in Today's Contest—Stallings Says Boston Shows Its Class and Claim to Hold Premier Honors of World.

EARLY DOPE.

BOSTON, Oct. 13.—Weather: Sunshiny, but somewhat cold and windy. Betting, 6 to 1 that the Braves win the series; 5 to 4 that they win today's game.

Ticket speculators today sold $3 seats for $20 each, the $2 seats for $15 each, and they could not supply the demand.

BY FRANK G. MENKE, Sporting Editor of the International News Service.

BOSTON, Oct. 13.—"Four straight" is the Boston slogan today, and Manager Stallings, in an effort to accomplish what never has been accomplished in a world's series, this morning said he would send Dick Rudolph, his slow-ball curve pitcher to the mound in the afternoon's battle against the Athletics.

Connie Mack is expected to pitch Chief Bender, his great Indian twirler, who was batted from the mound in the opening game Friday. Upon the frail shoulders of Bender rests the final hope of the Athletics in their present desperate situation. Backed against the wall closer than they ever have been in all the years of their gold series in which the Mackmen today rallied their scattered forces and prepared to fight as they never had fought before. The Philadelphiaans are out for blood, and they are out for that game. And they mean to get them both.

Blame Poor Luck.
Facing the seemingly hopeless task of winning four straight games to win the big share of the world's series spoils, the Athletics are not discouraged. They still have faith in themselves, still believe they are superior to their foemen and that they ultimately will triumph. The Athletics feel as they long have felt, that they are invincible, and they feel, too, that they lost Saturday's game and yesterday's game not because they were outplayed, but because they were outlucked.

The Athletics yesterday hit at a better clip than they have hit since the world's series opened, and they hit harder and oftener than they hit for several weeks before the American league season ended. That is one of their reasons for confidence and hope today when all seems hopeless.

Finding Batting Eyes.
"We found our batting eyes yesterday," said Eddie Collins. "Can we not meet the ball today as we did yesterday, I believe we will win. Bender will be back in oldtime form today, and he will hold the Braves in check." The confidence of the Mackmen, great as it is, does not compare, however with the Braves today. Their three straight victories over a team that for many years has been regarded as the greatest welded together, make the Braves feel that only a miracle can rob them of the honor of winning the baseball championship of the world. They have hit at a tremendous clip, they have fielded in great style throughout, they have run wild on the bases against Schang, the greatest throwing backstop in the land, and their pitchers have outpitched the Athletics in every one of the three games.

Stallings Confident.
"Why shouldn't we feel confident and happy?" asked Manager Stallings this morning. "The whole country seemed to have an idea before this series began that my team was a joke outfit—that it simply won because it was lucky. I guess we have convinced them to the contrary this time, and convinced that the Boston team, in all-around ability is the superior of the so-called peerless Athletics."

Mack may send Lapp behind the bat for the Athletics in today's game. Lapp is a far better hitter than Schang, who was chosen for world's series duty because of his throwing. However Schang's throwing to date has been miserable, and he may do bench duty today. It is likely that Gowdy will be back in center field for the Athletics. Walsh, who played yesterday, did not please the Athletics' chief by the way he played. Walsh played fairly well. Gowdy's drive went over his head and bounded into the bleachers for a home run. Had Walsh played deep for the home hitting Gowdy, as he should have done, he probably would have grabbed the drive before it landed, and killed the Braves' chances for a victory right there.

Blame Umpires.
However, the Athletics today are more inclined to blame the umpires for the loss of that game yesterday than themselves and their several errors of brain and hand. They declare that the twelfth inning of that game never should have been ordered to be played because of the darkness. And there is considerable weight in the argument of the Mackmen.

When the eleventh inning ended twilight had settled over the field. When the last of the two batters it was so dark that the forms of the outfielders were hardly visible, the bleachers loomed up as a black mass, and even the infielders were a blur. When Moran bunted in the twelfth no one in the near stands knew where the ball went until they saw three Athletics running to a spot near third base.

Rush, Baker and Barry ran for the ball. One picked it up and another ran back to third. From the stands it looked as if the form that threw the ball was that of Baker's and that Barry was the man who stood on the bag waiting to take the throw to catch the man running from second. But after a debate the official scorers decided that it was Bush who threw the ball and made the wild throw that gave the Braves the game. This was found to be true after the game was over, and Bush was coming in.

NOTRE DAME'S HOPE RESTS ON ATTACK

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 13.—Full-back Eichenlaub of Notre Dame has gone to Youngstown to see Bonsetter Reese. At the advent of the game with Yale next Saturday, the fans are dismayed at the news that the big full-back who was expected to bear the brunt of the Eli battle, probably will not be able to make the eastern trip.

Notre Dame plans to use the same attack as it did in the Army game last season. Forward pass plays of the most open variety will be employed, and this offense will be varied by old style offensive tactics of line plunges or end-runs.

Notre Dame students sincerely believe their eleven can whip Yale. And Notre Dames does have as good a tea mas there is in the west. All the men have been planning only for this one game with Yale.

The team which will represent Notre Dame will be practically a veteran aggregation. Only two players are missing from last year's team, which was one of the strongest football machines in the country.
