Women and the Ballot.

One of the important issues of this campaign is suffrage for women. The reactionary element is, of course, opposed to it, though they find no objection to the voting of foreigners after they have lived in the state six months and have applied for citizenship, the meaning of which they are totally ignorant of in most instances.

W. D. Boyce, publisher of the Indiana Times, Indianapolis, recently returned from a trip around the world. This pilgrimage served to convince Mr. Boyce of the importance of giving the American women the ballot.

"You will find," says Mr. Boyce, "where women are restricted in their activities the national influence and progress is also restricted. In some of these countries women are no better than the dogs; there is no hereafter for them in the religious creeds there prevailing; they are withdrawn from the world, separated from all broadening influences; their mental development is discouraged and even forbidden. They are placed on the plane of the animal, their one service is the propagation of the race. And yet these women have the care of the future citizen for at least the third of his life, the very period in which character is formed. If the mother had an equal chance with the men the history of India would be altogether changed. The fact is too obvious to be ignored. Whatever tends to broaden a woman's mind and stimulate her interest in the world about her must have an incalculable effect on the children she mothers until they are ready to go out in the world and battle for themselves. If woman knows nothing about politics how is she to instill high political ideals in her son? It is secondary whether the mother votes or not, if she is given the right to vote she will take a new interest in our political situation and by that, shall we say intuition, which guides her so unerringly in things which affect the morals of her children, she will undoubtedly come to a proper understanding of the right and wrong in our political problems."

Eaton Merchants Enjoy Good Business.

EATON, O., Oct. 19.—Despite the unfavorable weather which prevailed last week, the annual fall opening of Eaton merchants was a successful affair. Crowds thronged the streets until late Saturday night, and large receipts are reported by storekeepers.

A balloon ascension, scheduled to take place Saturday afternoon, was a failure. Just as the big smoke bag left the ground a rope broke and Aerona Kellher suffered a hard fall. He fell backward, his head striking the ground and rendering him unconscious for a short time.

About 9 o'clock in the evening the balloon was again filled and Kellher made one of the most novel flights ever witnessed in Preble county. He carried with him a big display of fireworks. He landed at a point two miles southeast of the city.

BOARD ASKS PROOF OF BRIDGE TRUST

Charges purported to have been made by F. E. Osborne of the Indiana Bridge company that a bridge trust exists in Indiana and the alleged investigation of the county commissioners, were denounced by the board of county commissioners Saturday as groundless and entirely from the imagination of a trouble maker who wished to cause ill feeling between the county officials and contractors.

An investigation was made by the board of commissioners, Mr. Osborn and Bridge Engineer Mueller since the report came out a week ago. Mr. Osborn denied making the statement and the commissioners say that if he made such a statement it was not before them as reported.

Engineer Mueller was indignant over the report and said he will run it to the ground and if possible force a proof. The writer of the story could not be located Saturday after the officials and contractors compared notes on what he had told them this morning.
