

ISSUES ORDERS COVERING AREA HIT BY PLAGUE

Bureau of Animal Industry Designates Closed, Exposed and Free District in Several States.

A division of the quarantined areas of the different states where the foot and mouth disease has been prevalent, into districts by the bureau of animal industry, was reported by Dr. C. O. Wagner, federal veterinary inspector, today. These districts are known as closed, exposed, modified and free districts. A closed district is defined in the order as that portion of a quarantined area from and to which any movements of live stock are prohibited. An exposed district is that portion of a quarantined area from which stock can be shipped for immediate slaughter upon inspection. Stock from an exposed district must be shipped from a point where it is inspected and certified by a representative of the bureau of animal industry, and must be killed at an establishment where federal, state or municipal veterinarians are maintained for the purpose of making ante-mortem and post-mortem examinations. A modified district is that portion of a quarantined area where interstate shipments are permitted for immediate slaughter without inspection, and where stock may be shipped in for any purpose. A free district is one in which there are no restrictions. Wayne county is in the modified district, because it is located in a quarantined state. Local shippers and butchers are interested in the restrictions in the state of Ohio, and all portions of these counties within three miles of the infected area are included in the closed area, while the remainder of that territory is in the exposed section. Cattle, sheep, swine and other ruminants from any part of the quarantined area can be shipped to any state when a written permit has been obtained from the secretary of agriculture.

BOARD REVOLTS

the improvements suggested necessary ones. Mr. Davis was not in the city today. He went with Mayor Robbins and City Attorney Bond to Indianapolis to appear before the public utilities commission.

McMinn Fears Tax Increase.

Mr. McMinn said that in his opinion the method suggested by Mr. Davis for meeting interest on the bonds and retiring them when they fall due, all out of the moneys in the sinking fund, was impractical and that such a bond issue could not be floated without an increase in taxes. He said that he was opposed to any tax increase at this time because of industrial conditions. Mr. Marlatt expressed the same opinion.

"This city will be out of debt in November next year," said Mr. McMinn, "then we can start on a more comprehensive policy of permanent improvements and without having to float another bond issue. The $11,000 paid in annually to the sinking fund by the 7 per cent bond could then be used to make permanent improvements, it being legal to use sinking fund moneys for such purposes when the city has no bonded indebtedness."

Mr. Marlatt said that in his opinion any effort to make a large number of improvements at this time would be vigorously opposed by affected property owners, and that he felt confident all of them would have to be ordered made by council, because they would be successfully remonstrated against before the board.

"If council would order all the contemplated improvements made it would impoverish a number of affected property owners," he declared.

Both Marlatt and McMinn declared that the improvement the city stood most in need of at this time was an auto ladder truck for the fire department, and that the only kind of a bond issue they would approve of would be one to secure money to purchase such a truck. The cost of this would be about ten thousand dollars.

GOV. RALSTON PLEADS

organization were over and each of the new officers had been installed, the senate moved over to the house chamber to hear the governor's message. The employment committee of the house was ready with a report containing a recommendation that the employees of the house be limited to sixty-four.

Economy in the expenditure of state funds is the keynote of the message which Governor Samuel M. Ralston read to the general assembly. The governor called attention to instances of extravagance which had been charged to both branches of the legislature in past sessions of the legislature. He recommended the enactment of a law amending the present statute to provide for the purchase of all legislative supplies through the state bureau of public printing.

Generally speaking, the New England states have the largest death rate, but in recent years great improvement has been shown in this section.

WHEAT HITS $1.38 HIGH TOP PRICE

Mill Centers Develop Panic Stricken Buying Spirit Over Night.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—May wheat today, after a weak opening, touched $1.38 and closed at $1.38, the highest prices on the crop. The close was 2 1/2 above yesterday's final trades. July wheat gained 1 1/2.

Practically all news today was bullish, but the chief factor in the advance was the fact that Minneapolis and other milling centers over night developed a panic stricken buying spirit, paying as much as 3 cents a bushel terminal prices for the best grades of cash wheat.

Export sales were about normal for war times, about two million bushels—the most of it sold here, but a report credited that the Rockefeller foundation, buying to feed Belgium, had planned into the May wheat market and would demand grain next spring.

The bear arguments that there were 30,000,000 bushels of wheat in Chicago soon be in the war and open the door for Russian supplies for western Europe, were the early factors forcing May and July wheat a cent under yesterday, but they could not stand against the milling news. The best cash wheat sold today at $1.36 1/2, and sales were large.

Corn was strong and higher, gaining 1/4 on the day's trades, and oats were up 1/4 to 1c. The latter was due to exports, also held nearly 3,000,000 bushels. Provisions showed practically no change.

HORSE PRICES SOAR; WAR AGENTS ACTIVE

Demand From Abroad May Drive Figures to Record Height in Spring.

Local horse buyers and dealers are predicting the prices on all grades of horses will rise materially during January. It is customary for horse prices to take a strong turn for the better about the first of the year, and this year the fact that foreign agents are snapping up every good horse that giving the market a strong upward swing. Prospects are for a higher horse market this spring than has been known in the last twenty-five years.

Since the opening of the new year, good heavy draft horses have been selling on the local market for $200 to $225. Lighter horses, some of which come under the army class, have brought $150 to $175. The same plugs that brought $30 and $40 last fall are now bringing $60 and $70. It looks as though the farmer who expects to buy a team for spring work, had better begin to look around.

SPRAY ADVISES CITY TO START TREE NURSERY

Park Superintendent Ford and City Forester Spray today suggested to the board of public works the establishment of a tree nursery at Glen Miller park for the purpose of raising shade trees. Mr. Spray said that an acre of park and could be set out in young shade trees at a cost of between $800 and $400 and that in five or six years time the nursery would be a municipal asset. Trees could be sold property owners for much less than what they would pay nursery companies for them and at the same time they would yield a profit to the city. Young trees for replacing the old ones in the parks could also be raised in this nursery.

To Consider Plan.
"Trees in this municipal nursery would receive special care and would within a few years be in great demand by the property owners," Mr. Spray said. "Richmond's shade trees, for which it was once famous, are now in a deplorable condition and are dying rapidly because they have never been properly cared for, as a whole. With a municipal nursery these old trees could be replaced within a few years by healthy young ones. I would advise planting in the nursery Norway maples, European sycamores, pin oaks and red oaks."

John Bunny's Face at Gennett

John Bunny, the famous comedian, with the $50,000 face, who will personally appear at the Gennett theatre Saturday matinee and night, is literally the funmaker with a billion friends. Those who know him in person like him even better than the countless thousands who know him on the screen.

There has never been an incident in Bunny's whole career to bring unpleasant notoriety to him. He has been married but once, and his home life is ideal. Mrs. Bunny usually travels with him. They have two children, both of whom are boys. The Bunny home in Flatbush, a suburb of Brooklyn, is one of the most magnificent in the burrough. It is almost within walking distance of the Vitaphone studios, where the Bunny movies are posed and photographed. Mr. Bunny is one of the founders of the screen club, and is vice president of that exclusive New York organization, which is to the film world what the Players club is to the theatrical profession. Bunny has a personal as well as a professional following. He is a clever actor long before he began to be pictured in the movies.

Swayne-Robinson Company Re-elects Officers, Anticipating Business Expansion

Officers of the Swayne-Robinson company were re-elected at the annual stockholders' meeting. S. E. Swayne will continue as president and treasurer, H. R. Robinson, vice president and superintendent, and W. P. Robinson, secretary.

Officials of the company said that they were expecting general business conditions to improve soon, and that they were hiring a few new men. Their orders are for machines for later delivery, and the type of machinery built by them does not come into use until late summer and fall. And for this reason they do not expect their business to increase materially for several months, but look for a general trade expansion.

LIBBY HOME BURNS

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Fire early today destroyed the old home of Arthur A. Libby, packer at 34th street and Michigan Avenue. The building, one of the landmarks of Chicago, was occupied by the manufacturers and distillers association of America. The loss was $10,000.

BRIDGE BORING

formerly the course of the present Whitewater river continues north and south irregularly in a manner similar to the course of the present channel. "I do not know of any one ever having bored to the bottom of this old channel," Mr. Peacock said. "I believe it is seventy-five to 100 feet under the surface. It contains the finest water which can be obtained. The ice company bored into it and is now getting part of its water supply from that source."

Beaver Channel Deeper.
"Mr. Mueller, Mr. Charles and I will be on the ground constantly while the borings are being made below. We expect to find some interesting things. No one has ever found out the exact nature of the soil there or the depth. It may be only a few feet to rock and we may have to bore from fifty to 100 feet but I do not expect this. There is evidence that the present river channel was much deeper than it is now, perhaps fifty feet or more. We may learn some things about this beaver channel."

The borings will determine the nature of the proposed south side bridge, the kind of foundation, the number of spans and other engineering matters. Every five feet some earth from the borings will be placed in a test tube and labeled for future possible use in making further investigations. The work will take about a week.
