CORONER NARRATES DETAILS OF RECENT TRAGEDIES IN CITY

Coroner's verdicts reciting the incidents of the death of Nathan Hilling, 43, and his wife, Martha Jennie, were filed today.

The shooting took place March 9, at 300 Richmond avenue. The verdict of Mr. Hilling's death said, "Death due to a revolver wound in brain, suicidal intent" and of Mrs. Hilling, "Death due to a revolver wound in brain, homicidal intent."

Rose E. Temple, Mrs. Hilling's sister, Leah Eales, a daughter of Mrs. Hilling, Nellie Hilling and others described the incidents of the day, starting with the visit of Mrs. Temple to the Hilling home, 34 Laurel street, where Mrs. Hilling informed her sister that Nate was angry with them, and she had better return home; the two visits of Hilling to the Temple home, and the final trip when he shot his wife, tried to jump out of a window after standing dazed with the smoking revolver in his hand, and then left by a door which he did not close.

A number of police officers and Chief Goodwin told of the search made for Hilling, the entrance of Cully in the barn in the rear of the house where the shooting occurred.

Samuel Sell, 30, died as the result of a fracture of the skull and other injuries he received when he stepped in front of a C. & O. train at third and North D street, March 18. Sidney Sivits, the fireman, said he did not see Mr. Sell until after the train had struck him, and Engineer George L. Bradford said he did not see the man until the pilot of the engine was a foot or two from him. Both said the engine bell had been ringing for a mile and other witnesses said every effort had been made to warn the aged man of his peril.

John C. Fulghum, 65, of Fountain City, died March 16 of natural causes, according to the verdict. Fulghum was staying alone while his wife visited relatives, and after telling friends he did not feel well, retired and was found dead in bed two days later.

OLD PETITIONS FOR ORNAMENTAL LIGHTS VOID UNDER NEW LAW

Under the recent ornamental street lighting act, now operative, the petitions filed last fall for the installation of such a system on Main street and parts of North E street and Ft. Wayne Avenue, become null and void, and if such lights are to be installed in Richmond's business districts new proceedings will be inaugurated.

"I hope that ornamental lights can be installed in certain sections of the city and I would be greatly pleased if the Commercial club would arrange for the circulation of petitions as soon as possible. The city will meet such a proposition more than half way," Mayor Robbins said today.

Under the new law, a copy of which Mayor Robbins has just received, at least seventy-five percent of property owners on a block or blocks of a paved street can initiate proceedings.
