

TUBERCULOSIS OFTEN ATTACKS THE UNWARY IN INSIDIOUS FORMS

Several of many forms that tuberculosis or consumption may take in attacking the human family are pointed out in a circular issued by the Indiana Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

"Don't wait for a cough to develop before you admit that you have tuberculosis," says the society. "The disease often develops beyond the stage where it can be controlled before a regular or intermittent cough is noticed."

"Pulmonary tuberculosis, though the most common form of the white plague is only one of the many forms of the disease which may, and does attack nearly every organ and part of the body. For instance, white swelling is tuberculosis of the bones or joints. Summer complaint in infants is often tuberculosis of the digestive organs. Chronic diarrhoea is frequently tuberculosis of the intestines. Frequent clearing of the throat indicates tuberculosis of the larynx. Hunchbacks often are so deformed because of tuberculosis of the spine. A cold that lasts the usual treatment for colds may indicate pulmonary tuberculosis."

"If you would avoid tuberculosis," the society's warning continues, "see that fresh air has unlimited admission to your home, to your sleeping room, your workshop, your playground; keep the body well nourished with substantial and well prepared food; get a sufficient amount of rest to refresh both body and mind; brush your teeth every day; remember that worry is useless, more than that, it actually kills. Bear in mind that cleanliness is not only one of the essentials of good health, but to happiness as well; it might be well to remember that in all probabilities you were infected long ago with the tuberculosis germ. If your system has, up to this time, succeeded in blocking the advance of the disease, keep its reserve power up to the standard. The rules are given above. They are simple but imperative. You should never permit yourself to forget that, inasmuch as you depend upon your fellow humans for the important things of life, so do your fellows depend upon you for encouragement, enlightenment, stimulation, and a material degree of happiness. A healthy mind and a healthy body are essential to happiness."

S-P-A-S-M-S

BY L. A. HANDLEY.

Ever notice when you're fishin' an' the water's cold as sin, how you're all the time a-thinkin', as you cast your tackle in; how the place that seems most pleasin'—an' it has you mystified—is the hole that seems a teasin' over 'on the other side'?

Ever notice how you're thinkin', as you tramp along the way, how your spirit's often singin', as you worry day by day, cause the nicest part of livin' to the other fellows slide, an' it seems you're always driven to be 'on the other side'?

Ever notice when you're lookin' just to find the reason why, all the troubles you're-cookin' pass the other fellow by, that he'll all the time fishin', an' is never satisfied, standin' still, a wishin' he was 'on the other side'?

Ever try to look within you for the troubles that you see? Ever see that naught's agin you, but to win you have to be always tryin' 'stead of sighin', like the other fellow tried. Keep a pluggin' 'stead of m'gging to be 'on the other side'.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.

Did you ever get to thinking
How the people take delight
In doubting all a fisherman may say,
How they question every statement
He may make about his fight,
Though he walk the narrow path
Day by day?

They will damn him if he gets them,
And they'll damn him if he can't,
But he needn't stop to worry or to buck;
It's addition to his pleasure
Just to hear them kick and rant,
Tho he only got the fisher-fellow's luck.

THE ICE MAN.

You've bidden the coal man a fond Adieu—
He probably has your last cent—
Don't figure that all your troubles are thru.
Except for the payment of rent,
For swift on the heels of the coal man,
With smile so pleasant and nice—
There drops at your door with booties galore,
The fellow who sells you your ice.

NO CONFLICT HERE

A clearing house for war relief funds has been established in New York. Postmaster Beck received a letter from the war relief clearing house for France and her allies today. The matter was referred to Secretary Melpolder of the Central Charity Bureau. Secretary Melpolder said there is no occasion for communication with the clearing house, as there is no movement here for war territory relief.

GET RID OF HUMORS

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the Medicine to Take—Makes Pure Blood.

Dry, moist, scaly, itchy, pimples, boils and other eruptions come from humors, which may be either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with dry, itchy medicines is dangerous.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old reliable medicine, helps the system to discharge the humors, and improves the digestion and assimilation.

Get Hood's Sarsaparilla from your druggist. It may be confidently relied upon to do its work. It purifies the blood, tones the stomach, and builds up the whole system. It goes to the roots of the diseases, and its beneficial results are permanent. It sets things right in the system.

Remember to ask for Hood's Sarsaparilla, because nothing else acts like it and nothing else can take its place. —Adv.

Figures in Drink Situation Now Perplexing Great Britain

LONDON, April 24.—In no country in the world is strong drink so strongly entrenched among the leading class as Great Britain. The House of Lords has been called the "Beerage." Many of the nobles owe their elevation to money made in the liquor traffic, while almost to a man they are financially interested in distilleries, breweries or liquor trading.

This is the rock upon which the prohibition bark of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George and War Secretary Kitchener crashed and may yet be wrecked.

Patriotism vs. the Nobles' incomes—this is the issue put in its plainest terms.

Famous Distillers.

The greatest distiller of gin in Great Britain is the Duke of Leeds. The Gladstone family distills the famous Scotch whiskey known as Flet-tertain at Fasque, in Kincardineshire. Many other prominent nobles might be named who are actual heads of liquor enterprises, while it would be hard to pick a member of the House of Lords who is not some way interested in the production and sales of spirits, beer and wines.

The depression caused by the war has already cut deeply into the revenues of these gentry. Total prohibition, unless the government bought their properties, would mean their ruin.

It is preposterous to imagine that the House of Lords would ever assent to a measure of total prohibition, even if the Germans were hammering at the gates of London.

Parliament Has Problem.

It is this which caused the British cabinet the other day to pass the question of liquor regulation to the Parliament. The House of Commons is now able to overrule the House of Lords. It is a tedious process to do so. But Britain is essentially democratic, and an issue of drink between the two Houses of Parliament might easily result in another great slice being cut off the power of the upper chamber.

In this emergency—caused by the fact that battles are now won by shrapnel shells rapidly enough, and that drink is showing up the rate of output—reinforcements have come to Kitchener and Lloyd-George from an unexpected quarter, the Crown.

(To the left) David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Welsh strong man who with Lord Kitchener is leading the fight to have the production of war munitions increased by abolishing drunkenness. (Below, to the right) a whiskey bottle modelled to resemble the Chancellor, closely. These bottles have amused Great Britain greatly and are to be found all over the islands. What Lloyd-George thinks about them he hasn't said.

(To the right, above) The Duke of Leeds, the greatest gin distiller in Great Britain, talking to Lady Londonderry, who is at the head of the women organized to assist the government even to fighting in the trenches if necessary. This picture was taken before the outbreak of the war. The British Lords owning liquor interests are the great force combating Lloyd-George's efforts to keep drink from the workingmen.

When King George abolished liquor from his households, and asked all to follow his example, he cut deeply into his revenues, for he owns the celebrated Lochnagar whiskey distilleries, situated on his Balmoral estates in Scotland.

Brand is Popular.

These were started by Queen Victoria and her husband and supply many royal cellars, including those of the Czar, Kings Alfonso and Haaron and until the present war those of the Kaiser. The brand is also on the list of many leading clubs here and in other cities.

The King derives sufficient money from the sale of Lochnagar whiskey to pay all the expense connected with the Balmoral Castle and estates and leave a large profit. Queen Victoria reaped again and again an amount equivalent to all she paid for the Balmoral property in the early years of her marriage.

In producing drink, King George has as companions most other European monarchs. Francis Joseph of Austria, has several brandy distilleries, and extensive vineyards from the grapes of which Tokay wine is pressed. The Kaiser brews beer and produces Rhine wine, much of which is sold publicly, while the late King Oscar of Sweden, often recommended his own beer to those who dined with him.

King George has now put himself at the head of the war time prohibition forces. The nobles are slow in following.

When the question was put squarely before the people by Lloyd-George with his famous "England is fighting Germany, Austria and Drink, and the greatest of these is Drink," a prominent prelate of the Church of England advocated that the churchmen set a good example to the rest of the country by taking vows of total abstinence for the duration of the war. The response was curious. "Why should we, the most temperate class in the United Kingdom, give up using the contents of our cellars?" asked the bishops. We have been setting a good example of moderation, they declared, let us continue to do so.

This was discouraging. It scarcely helped the leaders in the war. Lloyd-George and Kitchener were distinctly disappointed.

But Great Britain is essentially democratic in government, as remarked before. The people—that is, the House of Commons representing accurately the people's will—may save the country from the nobles and the bishops.

Strong Sentiment.

The English nation will have to get away, however, from its memorial conviction that the right to drink hard and personal liberty are synonymous. The Englishman is jealous of his "liberties." He resents intensely any attempt to regulate his conduct. This pervading sentiment has been a great factor in barring drink reform.

It probably will prevent total prohibition ever becoming a fact, but it may relax sufficiently to allow drink to be controlled until the present war crisis is passed.

To show how dangerous it is to tamper with the Britisher's drink it is only necessary to recall the fate of Lord Gladstone's government in 1885. The Grand Old Man was thrown out of office for attempting to increase by an amount that seems small today, the duties on spirits and especially beer.

Remembering this, Prime Minister Asquith believes that more can be accomplished in decreasing drunkenness by good example than by legislation and that, if legislation must come, it should originate among the representatives of the people, the House of Commons.

HEADS POULTRY BODY

AUTHORITIES STOP EPIDEMIC'S SPREAD

EATON, O., April 24.—No additional cases of diphtheria have developed here and health authorities believe their precautionary measures have prevented a threatened epidemic. Improvement is noted in the condition of patients in the three homes now under quarantine and early recovery of each is expected. The illness of Mrs. Earle Young, who was thought to have developed diphtheria, has been diagnosed as a severe attack of tonsillitis.

BIG CIRCUS COMES TO VISIT RICHMOND WITH NEW FEATURES

When most of Richmond's citizens are in slumberland and the few that are awake and rubbing their eyes, there will have sprung up a complete city at the usual show ground on May 14. The first Richmond will know of the arrival of this wonder city is when the long show train comes puffing in, and afterward the cars are placed, and then begins the unloading of the many wagons, tableaux and animals of the Robinson Famous shows. In the meantime there will be noticed a bunch of men on the first arrival of the show trains starting toward the show grounds with a leader, who to the new city is a boss canvasser; he will lay out the way the different tents will set in the tented city, at the same time placing an iron pin here and there, afterward where will set either a tent pole or else a stake which will be driven in the ground.

In the meantime wagons will arrive at the show grounds, the first of which is the cook house wagon, containing the cooking utensils and the mammoth steel range. On the arrival of this wagon at the show grounds some of the men proceed to put up the cook tent, while others are putting up the other tents that constitute the tented city.

Hustle Everywhere.

Everywhere hustle and bustle is to be seen, but no confusion. Amid all this can be heard the sounding of a bell, and at once activity ceases, as the bell will call the working men to breakfast. The working men sit down in one big, long dining tent, while in another tent the bosses and heads of the different departments are being served their breakfast. After breakfast is over once more the tented city takes on activity.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the bell will sound again. It is then calling the performers, musicians and other people to breakfast in a separate dining tent. At 9 o'clock the owner of the tented city will be found breakfasting with his family in a separate tent, especially made for that purpose. The city is now taking on activity, and here and there can be seen men leading horses and animals, others shining harness, and still others washing wagons, and preparing for the street parade which takes place on the public streets at 11 o'clock a. m.

On the parade returning to the show grounds, after traversing the principal streets of the city, there is a free outdoor exhibition, and while this is going on the performers are having dinner, and promptly at 1 o'clock the doors are thrown open to the public, and at 2:15 o'clock the performance of the Robinson Famous shows begins. Again at 7 o'clock the doors are thrown open to the public, the night performance beginning promptly at 8 o'clock.

High School News Items

Father Cronin of St. May's church gave a short talk to the high school students Friday morning at chapel exercises. Rev. Cronin showed how truth and honesty were the two great cardinal principles of success, and how people belonging to church are much better citizens. He told the students that if they were not affiliated with a church they should by all means become members. He told how he had noticed some of the visitation cards which showed that children from 12 to 18 years of age had not attended a Sunday school or any other religious institution. "Be seen going to church and not go to church to be seen," were Father Cronin's closing remarks.

The second six weeks grade cards were given out Thursday. There are five more weeks of school before the semester closes.

Work on the Pierian, the year book, is progressing nicely. Cuts and other material are in the hands of the printer. The book will appear May 15.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush this Through Faded Lifeless Locks and They Become Dark, Glossy, Youthful.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small stand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

6,000 TRAINED DOGS HELP GERMAN ARMY

LONDON, April 24.—Major C. H. Richardson, who is with the British forces at the front, says that there are 6,000 trained dogs helping the German armies in Russia and France. The Germans for many years have recognized the value that dogs would be in battle and have trained them as aids to their ambulance corps and as auxiliaries to their sentries and patrols. At the outbreak of the war they mobilized large numbers of highly trained dogs, which accompanied their masters to the battlefields and along the lines of communication.

The French, before the war began, had virtually ignored the dogs insofar as their value as sentries was concerned, although not a little attention had been paid to training dogs for ambulance work.

A WEAK WOMAN AND HER STORY

In Floral, Ark., Lives a Lady Who Feels That Her Strength Was Restored by Cardui.

Floral, Ark.—"I must speak a good word for Cardui," writes Mrs. Viola Baker, of this place.

"About a month ago I was in very bad health. I was so weak and nervous that I was not able to do my housework."

"My husband bought me one bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic. I took it according to directions and now I am in good health."

"I think Cardui is a fine tonic for weak women."

And you are not the only lady who thinks so, Mrs. Baker.

Thousands, like you, have written to tell of the wonderful benefit Cardui has been to them.

Cardui contains no minerals, or other powerful drugs. It contains no glycerin or other unwholesome ingredients. It is just a pure, natural extract of natural vegetable herbs, that have been found to regulate the womanly functions and strengthen the female system.

All druggists sell Cardui. See yours about it.
