

HOLD PURTELLE FOR BILLS DUE CHICAGO HOTEL

Lawyer Also Files Charge Alleged Traction Promoter Operated Confidence Game as Road's President.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Engene Purteile, traction line promoter, must appear Friday before Judge Mahoney to answer a charge of failing to pay a hotel bill of $60. His arrest was caused by the Hotel Sherman management. Just a few minutes before this charge was brought against him, Purteile was arrested for operating an alleged confidence game.

In the confidence game charge W. A. Miller, a lawyer, appears as complainant. Miller caused the arrest of Purteile April 8 last. Purteile, he asserted, passed himself as president of the Tipton-Frankfort Traction company, and had sold him stock on the representation that money was to be used for buying equipment. The lawyer said he traveled between Tipton, Ind., and Frankfort, Ind., without finding any trace of the supposed connecting line, before he swore out a warrant.

Purtelle indicted. Judge Prindle held Purteile to the grand jury in $2,000 bail. He was indicted a week ago, and the grand jury ordered the bond raised to $3,000. It was on this order Purteile was taken into custody yesterday.

Purtelle, now in his early thirties, has lived a life full of thrills, not only for himself but for others. In 1902 he was Milwaukee manager of Red Letter Sullivan, then operating a string of bucket-shops stretching from coast to coast. The next year, after serving as general manager in Chicago for the Sullivan organization, which let him out of a job by failing, he returned to Milwaukee as representative of the E. E. Jones company, another Chicago firm patterned after Sullivan's.

In 1909 Purteile was president of Purteile & Co., stock and bond brokers at 222 South LaSalle street. One year later his box in the Chicago Safe Deposit company's vault was forced and $5,000 was taken to satisfy a judgment obtained by John C. Keith, an insurance broker. Purteile subsequently filed the preliminary of a $5,000 damage suit against Keith.

Not long afterward Purteile exploited the Northwestern Indiana Traction company, a $5,000,000 paper interurban line, supposed to link Monticello and Hammond. The line has not been completed and Purteile is defendant in many suits alleging he did not pay labor and hotel bills.

This old and reliable alternative blood purifier, acts upon the secretions, stimulating the inner organs to activity, thus assisting nature to cleanse the system of its (cold weather) accumulation of impurities. For forty years Simpson's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for blood trouble, even in its worst forms, therefore much less is required of it, as a "spring cleanser" than of any other "whitening" or "body builder" medicine. "A Man and His Wife"

Isabel Finds Mrs. Simmons Is the One Who Has Called Up John

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water, CHAPTER XXIII.

Isabel Hamilton did not analyze the impulse that had led her to return to her maid the telephone number of the person who had called up. The wife did not even inquire if the unknown was a man or a woman. Something, possibly a subtle sense of honor, prevented her from asking a simple question. She could not inquire of a domestic about things that concerned her husband. Even jealousy and suspicion could not make her do that, she told herself.

Yet was she jealous or suspicious? Was it not entirely natural that some business acquaintance should call John up at his home? Such things had happened before. But some how she shrank from handing the telephone number to John. She would rather have Cynthia do this. Of course John would mention the matter to his wife, and perhaps she wanted to feel that she would do this without any actual necessity for his doing so. If she gave him the paper he might feel that she expected an explanation. Was she, unconsciously to herself, putting him to a test?

Soon she heard the front door open and John's voice calling her name. When she answered he came to her and kissed her affectionately. Cynthia, busy in the kitchen, would doubtless mention the telephone matter to him later. Isabel wished she would do so soon and get it over with. She was ridiculously nervous about it. After a moment's chat John went into the hall, leaving the door of her room open behind him. Thus it came about that she overheard the mail speak to him as she emerged from the dining room on her way to tell her mistress that dinner was ready.

"Good evening, sir," Cynthia said in reply to her employer's perfunctory "Good evening." Somebody called you up on de phone a little while ago, jes' befo' Mrs. Hamilton come in."

"Ah, who was it?"

"Dunno, sir. She say please to call her up when you come home. I got de number on a paper in de kitchen. I'll go fetch it."

So it was a woman after all! The wife felt her heart sink, then she waited herself together angrily. How dare she suspect such a good husband as hers? The person who telephoned probably was the secretary or stenographer of some one of John's business acquaintances. Surely that was it. Yet she still stood motionless in the center of the room until Cynthia came out of the kitchen again, bearing the paper with her.

John seems to be especially merry.

Here it is, sir," Isabel heard her say.

"Thank you," John murmured. That was all. Even when Cynthia remarked, "Dinner served, sir," he said no more. Probably he was reading and re-reading that number. Isabel had not known that she remembered it, but now she recalled the figures clearly—"Riverside 10076."

Riverside! That was the same center there! Then this person must live in this neighborhood—at least not far away.

"Dinner's served, ma'am."

Cynthia was in the doorway and Isabel started violently.

"Very well," she said, "I'll be right in."

Arkansaw

There are many Indiana men. Who in some units saw. A great financial dealing. Way down in Arkansaw.

Some knockers thought them foolish; They made a bad mistake; But if we are muleish. There some more would partake.

But units in this deal are past. No more can get a chance. To buy a unit in Mackinaw. So don't kick of your pants.

Mr. Denison is a gentleman. And so is Mr. Hardy. You knockers that are knocking them. Consider yourself tardy.

The land is in the cotton belt. Which everybody knows. And takes you down to Mackinaw. Where hogs and cattle grow.

Let's all us unit holders. Now form a happy band; Go down there to Mackinaw. And occupy this land.

Some of our friends will follow soon. To buy themselves a home; To settle down in Mackinaw. And help keep up the boom.

We will all go there with good intent. And help each other out. And have a town upon the map. That all can read about.

This writer is a carpenter. And has been on the ground. And after June the twentieth. In Mackinaw can be found.

To figure on your bungalow. If built in the town of Mackinaw. Or on some near-by farm.
