

FAT AND LEAN ELKS TO LOCK HORNS ON LOT

General Eggemeyer and Field Marshal Peltz Mobilize Volunteers—Coe Receives Iron Cross Before Game.

The general staffs of both the Lean and the Fat Elks have completed the organization of their respective field forces and the most sanguinary diamond battle of the year will be pulled off at Beallview park Wednesday afternoon. General Elmer Eggemeyer commanding the heavies, the human string beans being under the command of Field Marshal Joe Peltz.

By merely volunteering their services as umpires Demas S. Coe and Tom Nicholson have already been decorated with the Victorian Cross, the Iron Cross and the Congressional Medal for conspicuous bravery. "We are confident of victory," General Eggemeyer said today. The Old Soldiers Home had kindly loaned us it batter, Pitcher Linus Meredith and Catcher Clarence Jessup. Need I say more?"

Peltz Warms Up. "We should worry," remarked Field Marshal Peltz, warming up by pitching mail sacks into his jitney bus. "We haven't a left-hander on the team. The Fats, on the other hand, will enter the game gaily handicapped. In the first place they have a left-handed first baseman, Joe Hill; in the second place Howard Kamp, their fastest and heaviest hitting outfielder is in bad shape, a fly ball hitting him in the head the other day while practicing."

CENTERVILLE, Ind., June 4.—The meeting at the Christian church here closed last night, after nearly three weeks. The meeting grew in interest right from the start, and the building was not large enough to hold the crowds. Rev. Mr. McCormick preached forceful, inspiring sermons. His helper Mrs. McVey, from Richmond, is a fine director and leader, and her beautiful contralto solos pleased. She was also helped by a good choir, orchestra and pianist, who have been faithful. There were 33 additions.

UNION LAUNDRY

very dull," Cranor said. "When we took a half hour off the working day it was with the consent of our employees. We had told them that we would either have to do that or let off two or three people."

Cranor said that a new force would be secured and work resumed without any delay. He informed the Trades Council committee that under no circumstances would he consider the new contract offered to the company.

Commenting on the refusal of the Richmond Union Laundry to enter into a new contract with the Laundry Workers' Union, the Richmond Labor Herald in its issue today says:

"The majority of the female employees under the old contract, owing to the reduction of hours from 9 to 8½ hours per day are now receiving less than six dollars per week which they say is not sufficient income to provide the ordinary living necessities, with absolutely nothing remaining to provide recreation.

"Many of these workers have others depending on their meager earnings and for this reason were easily coerced into accepting the shorter hours.

which were never just or satisfactory.

They claim that they have been required to produce the maximum 9 hours output in the allotted time and that this is detrimental to their health, many of them being so fatigued at closing hours that they were scarcely able to stand up or walk to their homes.

"The old contract also allowed a reduction of wages of fireman, washer-man and other male employees. The new agreement only restores the terms of this old agreement as to wages which they claim are not excessive for the work required, and they say they are agreeable to this part of the old contract which is practically copied from the old agreement. However, they realize the dire necessity of their female co-workers and will stand by the new contract as presented."
