The Oleomargarine Tax

There is a saying to the effect that the best way to get a bad law repealed is to enforce it. Secretary McAdoo's statement with regard to the oleomargarine tax evasions is interesting, but not surprising. He says that the government has been defrauded out of $27,000,000. The department has records extending back as far as 1902, immediately after the oleomargarine tax law was passed. Violations have multiplied, and although the department, by the most vigorous exercise of its powers, has increased its collections during the last two years, "moonshining" continues. No fewer than 6,000 frauds have been detected. There have been numerous prosecutions and not a few convictions. Recoveries by the government amount to about $1,000,000.

There is prospect, says Mr. McAdoo, for an increase in the amount.

The oleomargarine law imposes a tax of 10 cents a pound on the colored product, and 4 of a cent a pound on the uncolored. Frauds have included both kinds, and it is the belief of the revenue collectors that most of the "moonshine" oleomargarine reaches the consumer as "butter." Possibly the most striking sentence in the statement is the following: "Whether the tax on colored oleomargarine is too high is no concern of the treasury in connection with its duty to enforce the law." This is quite true. It is generally believed—though not by the dairy interests—that the tax on colored oleomargarine is too high, and thus the law defeats its own ends. It has now been on the books for about a dozen years, and in that time millions of dollars in taxes have escaped the collectors. Numbers of manufacturers have been sent to prison or fined heavily. But disregard for the law continues.

The theory on which this legislation was based concerned protection of both butter producer and consumer. It was contended—and with much truth—that oleomargarine was often colored and sold as butter, the public being thereby cheated. But the butter supporters went too far. In their zeal to protect the public, and likewise the dairy business, they placed the tax too high. Its very size has encouraged evasion. It has increased the profits of illicit manufacture. It may be that failure to collect the oleomargarine tax will influence congress to revise the law. The statute has failed, and it ought to be corrected.—Indianapolis News.

"I really feel that it is hardly possible to say too much in favor of Grape-Nuts as a health food," writes a Chicago lady.

"For 9 or 10 years I had suffered from indigestion and chronic constipation, caused by the continued use of coffee and rich, heavy foods. My ailments made my life so wretched that I was eager to try anything that held out a promise of help. And that is how I happened to buy a package of Grape-Nuts food last spring.

"That ended my experiments. For in Grape-Nuts I found exactly what I wanted and needed. From the day I began to use it I noticed an improvement and in a few weeks I found my health was being restored.

"My digestive apparatus now works perfectly and chronic constipation has been entirely relieved. I have gained in weight materially, and life is a very pleasant thing to me so long as I use Grape-Nuts once or twice a day. I have found by experiment that if I leave it off for a few days my health suffers.

"A physician in our town has great success in treating stomach troubles, and the secret of it is that he puts his patient on Grape-Nuts food—it always brings back the power of digestion."

YPRES GAS FUMES MOWS DOWN REGIMENT

HENRY LA PIERRE

Henry La Pierre of Chazy, N. Y., who served in the Thirteenth Battalion of Royal Highlanders of Canada, is back at his home, after surviving the gas fumes at the battle of Ypres, where the Germans turned loose, the latest war device, poisonous gases. La Pierre arrived in this country on the liner St. Paul, after being discharged from the British army at the request of Ambassador Page.

Practically the entire regiment, La Pierre said, was mowed down by the deadly gas bombs of the Germans. He said he crawled for 150 yards under the heavy double clouds of yellow gas to the French trenches.

Those of his comrades who perished from the gas lingered for three or four days in dreadful agony before succumbing. Of his battalion of 1,000 men only 150 were left after ten minutes of fighting.

His sympathies being with the Allies, La Pierre ran away on August 23 to Montreal and joined the Canadian contingent. After training at Valcartier, near Quebec, his battalion was sent to England, and on February 14, started for France.

Clicquot Club

Made in America Pronounced Klee-ko GINGER ALE Best in the World

OPEN an hour and still sparkling

The two long, joy drinks in a bottle of Clicquot may be taken an hour, or even a day, apart. The last will be as good as the first. Its Jamaica ginger, sparkling spring-water, lime- and lemon-juice, cane sugar, are all pure and fresh.

It is about the only drink safe to take ice-cold when you are overheated, as its mild ginger stimulus overcomes the "ice" shock to the stomach. The deep-spring water from which it is made is slightly laxative.

Try Clicquot Club Ginger Ale mixed with grape and other fruit juices. It mixes admirably with most anything drinkable.
