

FRANCE CELEBRATES "FALL OF BASTILE" THROUGH NATION

Soldiers in Trenches and Women at Home Recall of Founding of Present Republic.

PARIS, July 14.—Today is the national holiday, "Jouillet quatorze," the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille, which is also the anniversary of the inauguration of the third (or present) republic.

On account of the war the military features of other Bastille days are lacking, but at the same time the nation has taken the occasion to express its loyalty and patriotism with its whole heart.

In every city there will be public addresses by prominent men and celebrations by the women and children, and by the convalescent soldiers and few other men who are not now absorbed in the work of the great war.

England Celebrates.
LONDON, July 14.—All England is celebrating French flag day today, as the anniversary of the capture of the Bastille by the people in the French revolution. The French relief fund organization has appointed local committees to have charge of the celebration in every town.

London has already had a Belgian flag day and a Russian flag day, and is shortly to have a Serbian flag day, but as England's closest ally is France the day set aside for the service of France is being celebrated with great enthusiasm.

Young Girls Swim Hell Gate

STARTS CRUSADE TO PUT GASOLINE UNDERGROUND

A general crusade has been undertaken by the State Fire Marshal department, to put gasoline underground in Indiana. Hundreds of orders have been issued already and the enforcement will be undertaken at once on the expiration of forty days time allowed to obey. The penalty provided for each day's neglect to obey the order is a fine of from $10 to $50. The files in the State Fire Marshal department are eloquent in argument in favor of the underground gasoline storage tank. Accidents often fatal in their results are of almost daily occurrence in the State. In the great majority of these cases accidental and destructive fires would have been entirely eliminated had the explosive been properly stored. Warnings against efforts at concealment of improper storage tanks have been given by deputies in making inspections. One of the greatest menaces to firemen in fighting incipient blazes is found in gasoline stored in cleaning and tailoring establishments above ground. This class of risks has received special attention.

CANADIANS CUT WAY TO GLORY HOW HEROES FACE DEATH HAIL

BY FREDERICK PALMER.
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

British Headquarters in France, June 25. — (By mail to New York, July 14.)—Some details may now be given of the brilliant chapter in the recent British operations in support of the French offensive movement around Arras: That of the Canadian divisions' struggle for gains around Festubert and Givenchy, in which grim work was required before any progress could be made in the trench warfare.

At Festubert the objective of the Canadians was a small orchard. The Third Company of the Sixteenth Battalion Highlanders, commanded by Captain Morrison was given the task. These men were recruited in British Columbia, many of them living in Vancouver.

A rush for the orchard was started at 7:45 o'clock in the evening, each platoon having a definite object to accomplish. In front of the orchard the men found a deep creek hedge, having only two openings in front. Morrison started to go through the hedge, but Private Appleton, a bomb-thrower, sprang ahead of him, saying:

"Bomb throwers go ahead of officers sir."

Meet Machine Gun Fire.
Once in the orchard the men met with heavy rifle fire and machine gun fire, but swept on to the edge. Owing to the unforeseen delay one platoon whose presence was the most essential to the plan of attack, was unable to get up in time to support the attack.

The men who reached the edge of the orchard where the dead and wounded had been left, dug themselves in with the ready industry of western beavers, and stuck against all odds until help came, making the orchard secure for them.

Many stories are told of the coolness of the men. Amidst the din of fire, Sergeant Cochran called to his men to keep their line straight, and Private Ridley, upon seeing a rabbit scurrying past, sang out:

"Look at bunny, will you?"

Elsewhere on the front, the first party belonging to the First Company of Canadians, who went over the parapet, were in such an exposed position as to be nearly annihilated without even reaching the German trenches. But a portion survived from the advance on the other flank, and got a foothold in a German trench where they bombed out the enemy.

Every counter effort of the Germans to oust them failed. Though their position was torn into craters by German shell fire, they stuck, and the British line on this part of the front remains where the determined heroes of that sanguinary action put it. In the face of murderous machines of war and modern fire, which dropped men right and left, they had won a mighty struggle, no less glorious because it was only a part of a big whole.

"If soldiers ever fought their way to admiration," said a British general, "certainly these Canadians who, less than a year ago, were raw recruits, did so."

At Givenchy, they deserved success no less, but there they failed. Here, in front of the first battalion, the Germans had two strongly fortified points which the Canadians sought to take. They successfully mined one and coincident with the explosion opened up a concentrated fire with their guns against both positions.

Number four company then rushed through the opening space between the two positions made by the explosion to the German trench, reaching it with only a few casualties. So completely had they surprised the enemy that on entering the trench the Canadians found that some of the Germans who had fled had left their accoutrements hanging upon the walls.

Rear Position Held.
The German fortified position to the rear, which had not been mined was still able to work the machine guns, enfilading any movement of the Canadians to support the troops that had gained the German trench. The Germans, being reinforced and being plentifully supplied with bombs, closed in upon their hostile visitors and forced a retirement. Every step of the way back was made under the enfilading fire from the fortified position. The next morning soldiers in the German trenches called out in excellent English:

"Hello, Canadians."

The answer was shouted back:

"Hello Germans. Did you have many losses?"

Trooper Denies Loss.
A German soldier called out:

"A good many. How about you?"

To this a Canadian answered:

"None at all."

There was a moment's silence, and then a German shouted:

"You are a damned liar."

One would recognize gallant Canadians in their billets in French villages, these warm summer days, by the way they have their sleeves rolled up and their shirts open at the throat as they would at home.

"I guess they are finding we can do out bit," is the sentiment of the Canadians, and it looks as if they are going to miss the green corn season in Canada, too.

A New York state farmer has a deer farm from which he expects soon to be realizing from $1,500 to $2,000 a year. The carcass of a three-year-old deer is worth from $50 to $50 in New York.
