

The True Revival.

Psalm 85:6 "O Lord, wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee."

THIS is a clarion call for a revival of religion and a revival of the right kind of religion. There are religions which it would be a real calamity to have revived.

A religion that rejoices in God and that God rejoices in, a religion that the individual who has it enjoys for himself and makes all about him enjoy his religion, that is the kind that we want to be revived.

Revivals and declensions make up the history of the church. As in nature, so in Grace, one extreme follows another. This analogy is not of necessity, but of fact. As a fact, few Christian lives are changeless, in most there are wanderings and returnings. "Ye did run well; who did hinder you?"

During five hundred years from Moses to Solomon there were revivals and declensions. From Christ to Constantine a revival continued for over three hundred years. A declension of more than one thousand years followed, when Luther, the greatest of revivalists, was called. But in less than two hundred years thereafter the fires of the Reformation were well-nigh extinguished, and Wesley found that formalism had taken the place of spiritual devotion. Whether or not the church should have made history like it has, we are not now considering, the fact that such is the history of the church, is before us.

A genuine revival of religion is a gracious work of the Holy Spirit unto righteousness, in human souls, characterized by unusual intensity, and breadth of operation and commonly limited as to time. This we think is an exact and exhaustive definition of a genuine revival of religion.

A genuine revival of religion is not worked up from below but it comes from on high. A genuine revival of religion is sent from the heights, and comes down to us from God. God is ready to send us a revival and will send a revival to our churches and our city, if we really want a revival, but if we are indifferent, the revival will not come.

Let the people of God rally and earnestly seek after God in prayer and earnest consecration and a revival will come that will change the individual and the community, all of us will have a religion that will please God and make us who have it a delight to ourselves and all folks about us.
