Helping the Troopers

The other day the Seventh regiment of New York infantry passed through Richmond. The troopers were transported in ordinary day coaches, some of them an old type. The men left New Jersey last Tuesday and are expected to reach Brownsville, Texas, Saturday. Why the government could not provide sleeping cars is a matter we are wondering about.

The troopers are the pick of the country. They left their families behind, they sacrificed salary and advancement. They are courting wounds and death. They have brought a big sacrifice on the altar of national patriotism.

We are at home, surrounded by our friends and families. We have sacrificed nothing, neither have we jeopardized our positions or our lives. Should we desire to go to Brownsville, we would not need to travel in day coaches, but could get sleepers and chair cars.

In times of stress and danger, the rights and privileges of the traveling public ought to be disregarded for the military. The railroad companies and the government should have requisitioned sufficient sleeping cars to transport the Seventh to its destination. The troopers need to arrive at Brownsville in fighting trim. Five days and nights spent on some of the antiquated day coaches that were in the troop trains that passed through Richmond will take the edge off the best seasoned soldier that America ever produced.

We believe the traveling public would not object at all if it had to dispense with sleepers for a few days. And if some disgruntled traveler did kick, he ought to be drafted for service on the border. In times of war, give the soldier who is doing the nation's work all the conveniences and comforts you can afford.

Latent Patriotism

Every American would seriously object to the accusation that he is not patriotic. And yet, he will not wear the colors, he will hesitate about buying a flag for his home or his business house. Contrast the cold and indifferent feeling of most of us with the warm patriotism of some of the European countries. The flag and the national song are second nature with him. Love and respect for the colors have been so drilled into him at home and in school that he will forget everything when a patriotic display is taking place.

No great national war confronts America. There is no doubt at all that in case of war with Carranza, American troops will make short shift with the Mexicans. It may take a year, but Mexico is no match with the United States.

But even if we are not confronted with a war that might tax our resources to the very end, the occasion calls for an outburst of enthusiasm and patriotism that ought to be so marked that none of us will ever forget it. The passing of troops through our city, the sense of consecration which these men have shown for the colors, their high appreciation of loyalty and all that it means and involves—all these things ought to kindle a love for country and flag that will stay for life.

Thousands of flags ought to be flying in Richmond today. Thousands of men ought to be wearing the national colors. Thousands of residences and hundreds of business houses ought to wear the badge of American citizenship. The national colors ought to be seen everywhere.

GRANDSON, DO YOUR BEST

LIEUT. FRANK BUSCHMANN.

Among the many visitors to Lieut. Frank Buschmann's tent at Camp Ralston was one who wore the bronze button of '96 in his coat lapel, Col. Frank W. Erdelmeyer, grandfather of Lieut. Buschmann of Battery A. Standing beside the flag for which the old veteran fought in the Civil war and laying his hand on the shoulder of his stalwart grandson, the white-bearded man emphasized the importance of one doing his duty. "Remember, Frank, there are other flags, but none like the Stars and Stripes. Do your best." There were tears in Col. Erdelmeyer's eyes as he bade his grandson goodbye.

You will find, in all probability, an accumulation of tartar on the enamel and bits of food deposit hiding between the crevices. YOUR DENTIFRICE does not FULLY CLEAN! Loss of teeth is caused usually by one of two conditions—Pyorrhea or decay, both of which develop, as a rule, only in the mouth where germ-laden tartar is present.
SENRECO, the recently discovered formula of a dental specialist, is two-fold in its action. First, it REALLY CLEANS, embodying specially prepared, soluble granules unusually effective in cleaning away food deposits. Second, it is particularly destructive to the germ of Pyorrhea. Yet it is perfectly safe, containing neither injurious chemicals nor hard grit.
Avoid Pyorrhea and decay. Get Senreco from your dealer today. In large tubes, 25c. Send 4c to Senreco, 304 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, for liberal-sized trial package.

NEW MADISON, O., July 1.—Sylvester Hedrick, prominent stock dealer, residing southeast of here, near Castine, who was seriously injured ten days ago when he was struck on the head by Albert McFaddin, postmaster at Castine, is reported to be out of danger. BECK NEEDS SPACE TO HANDLE BUSINESS

Increasing business at the post-office has made additional shelves in the large vault necessary and a request was made to the department at Washington today by Postmaster Beck for permission to increase the capacity of the vault. The large number of blank stamped envelopes and postcards has necessitated the additional space.
