Some Thoughts About the Buick 1917 Six

More Nineteen-Sixteen Buick Valve-in-Head Sixes have been bought than any other six-cylinder car ever built—More people today are demanding this particular Buick model than ever demanded any single model in automobile history—In this car is found the development of the best thoughts and ideas of leading American and foreign automobile engineers, extending over a period of almost a quarter of a century—Every sound theory of mechanics during this period has been investigated, and when consistent with Buick Valve-in-Head basic principles, has been adopted.

The lines of this latest Buick Model D-6-45 are so pleasing that they cannot help but satisfy the most exacting purchaser. Long, low-hung, following the best American and foreign style, the very appearance of this car is symbolic of power and speed.

Combined with the recognized excellence of the Buick chassis, a 5-passenger body of exceptional grace, the Buick Six Touring Car offers a wonderful value.

It is a big car, yet not bulky. It is roomy and comfortable—beautiful to look at, elegantly finished and finely upholstered.

Equipped with the famous Buick Valve-in-Head Six-Cylinder motor this car leaves nothing to be desired in dauntless power for hills or for speed, in smoothness, quietness and flexibility.

Users of this car will enthusiastically tell you that we are not over presumptuous when we guarantee, that regardless of the car you buy or the price you pay, nowhere can you get greater value than in this Six-cylinder Buick Touring Car.

This car was not built to meet a price, but to satisfy the demand for the best.
