Reducing Corsets

Improve Stout and Medium Figures

Rengo Belt Reducing Corsets are built on scientific principles and are thus sure to improve stout and medium figures.

The first consideration in tailoring these famous corsets is that their strength shall be multiplied by two; that they may withstand every strain demanded of them under the most trying circumstances; and that their beautiful original lines shall remain unbroken through a long season's wear.

The famous Rengo Belt system of tailoring insures these features, but there is added steelastic webbing in several of the models to take away strain where needed. Examine the new models and if you demand in service and strength more than ordinary corsets can give—if your previous selections have not held their shape—you will find lasting satisfaction in a proper Rengo Belt model.

There are models with and without steelastic webbing—all are boned with double watch-spring steels guaranteed not to break or rust.
