

FRIENDS TO AID OF M'MAHON DENY HE DRINKS UNWISELY

William McMahon, a son of John McMahon, the "cracker king," is an enthusiast about exercise. That is why, according to witnesses who testified in his defense in Judge Gridley's court in Chicago, Saturday, he spent so much time away from Mrs. McMahon during their four years of married life. He was not drinking to excess, as Mrs. McMahon charges in her divorce bill, but was exercising—playing pool and bowling—the witnesses declared.

THE SANDMAN STORY FOR TO-NIGHT

Copyright 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York.

It was the day after Christmas and every house in the fort was still bright with greens and holly. And very lovely it all seemed to the little Indian maid, Snow-Bird, as she came into Colonel Campbell's cosy hall with her basket of winter berries.

"Come in, Snow-Bird," said Mrs. Campbell kindly. The little Indian ventured in, still gazing bewildered at the gleaming tree whose fruit was such strange shining things. Mrs. Campbell gave her a doll, a box of candy, a warm one night as the fort was about to put out the lights. Mrs. Campbell heard a sound at the window, and on opening it found Snow-Bird crouching outside.

"Let me in the back way," she whispered. In a few moments she was in the kitchen telling her kind friend that she had overheard her father and several other Indian warriors telling of an attack they had planned to make on the fort that very night.

"They are to come at you from the north," said Snow-Bird. "There will be 600 men, and they know that most of the soldiers here are camping away from the fort for a few days. What can you do against 600? They will attack at moon-rise, which is in three hours from now."

In a moment the fort was in a state of excitement. No man could be sent to call the troops, for the Indians were coming from that direction.

"I will carry a message," said Snow-Bird. "Every man is needed here. No one could ride in that direction without meeting death, but I can push a canoe swift, and reach the camp within two hours."

Without waiting for reply, the girl sped toward the river bank, leaped into a canoe as she pushed it from the beach, and with two blows of her paddle, sent it spinning out into the wild stream. So swift was the water that it seemed but a leaf on its surface, and in a second it was rushing down the river like an arrow. Like the wind, it skimmed over the water, hood, then made her sit by the fire and eat a plate of turkey, bread and cake. When she arose to go, Mrs. Campbell found a violent snowstorm had risen, and she would not let the girl start home in the cold and darkness.

"You must stay till morning, then the Colonel will have you taken home in a sleigh," said Mrs. Campbell. So the girl was put into a warm bed in the children's room. The next morning she was ill with a raging fever.

Woman Wants Others To Give Tanlac Trial; "It's Great," She Says

Among the many people of the vicinity of Richmond who are deriving great benefit through use of Tanlac, none is more earnest in praise of the Master Medicine, than Mrs. Margaret Collins, a well known resident of Liberty, south of this city.

"For two years I suffered from stomach, liver and nervous trouble and although I tried several different kinds of medicines I found nothing that would help me until I tried Tanlac." Mrs. Collins said on October 31, while in Richmond. "My appetite was very poor and what food I did eat was not digested properly. I didn't sleep well. Friends prevailed on me to try Tanlac and finally I decided to do so.

Since taking Tanlac my stomach has been placed in such good condition that I can eat anything I care for with no bad after effects. I rest well at night now and am improved generally.

I recommend Tanlac because of the great good it has done me and it would please me greatly if my friends or others who are bothered as I was will try this medicine. I can't praise Tanlac too highly. It certainly is great."

Tanlac, the Master Medicine, is especially beneficial for stomach, liver and kidney trouble, catarrhal complaints, rheumatism, nervousness, loss of appetite and the like. It is a tonic, appetizer, blood purifier and general system purifier. In thousands of cases Tanlac has brought the most surprising results, doing its work quickly and yet in a most thorough and satisfactory manner.

Tanlac is now being specially introduced and explained in Richmond at the Sixth and Main streets store of Clem Thistlethwaite and also may be obtained in Richmond at Thistlethwaite's other stores.—Adv.

HENBYS HONOR TWENTY-FIFTH WEDDING DATE

CAMBRIDGE CITY, Ind., Nov. 14.—Ora Wheeler of Hagerstown, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wheeler.... Attorney A. L. Study of Richmond, spent Sunday with his brother, Dr. J. N. Study.... The funeral of C. J. Connell, who died at his home, southwest of Milton, was held Monday morning in the St. Elizabeth's church, of this place, Father Gorman conducting the service.

Prepare for Inspection.

A special meeting of the W. R. C. preparatory to the Annual Inspection, will be held Friday afternoon.... Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Henby celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage and the eighteenth birthday anniversary of their daughter, Miss Elma, Saturday evening at their home, southwest of town. Many bouquets of chrysanthemums, and other autumn flowers were arranged in the rooms. During the afternoon a delightful program was given, numbers on which were solos and quartets by a ladies' quartet, the Misses Mary Gilbert, Doris Floyd, Johnson and Bernice Fricker, a solo by Miss Frances Sutton, readings by Mrs. Parvin Bond and Mrs. Johnson. A poem on the import of the day, written by Mr. Henby, was read by Miss Elizabeth Wheelan. Cream and cake were served, Mrs. Charles Wheeler, Mrs. John Shroyer, Miss Elizabeth Wheelan with Miss Deborah Peeler of Indianapolis, and Miss Vivian Kendall of Thorntown, assisting in the serving, the favors taking the form of small wedding bells. A number of beautiful gifts were bestowed upon the three. In the company, which numbered forty-five guests, were the Misses Deborah and Margaret Peeler of Indianapolis, Emma Cammack of Munie, Miss Kendall of Indianapolis, a student with Miss Elma, at Earlham college, and Ora Wheeler of Hagerstown.

Will Not Serve Dinner.

The ladies of the Social Union will dispense with the Thanksgiving dinner this year.... A large crowd was in attendance at the entertainment given Friday evening by the W. R. C. The program was in charge of Mrs. Jessie Cornell, Patriotic Instructor, and consisted of music and readings, one of the special numbers of which was the song "Just Before the Battle, Mother," sung by Miss Gertrude Routh. Coffee and pie were served by the committee, the girl avoiding rocks with stroke of the paddle. It grew very dark, the night wind whistled, but Snow-Bird never faltered. Like a wooden figure she sat in the boat as it spun down the stream. At last the light of the camp came in view half a mile away.

Running the canoe upon the shore, she tumbled out, and without waiting to even secure it, she flew over the rocks and brush till she fell exhausted at the feet of a sentinel. Then in a few panting words she told her story.

"Boots and saddles!" rang out from the bugle calls. There was mounting in hot haste and a wild shout as the 500 men set out across the plain in a mad gallop. Behind came Snow-Bird on a horse that seemed to enjoy the race.

On the edge of the sky the moonlight began to shimmer. The racing men could see the dim outlines of the fort in the silver light, and not far from it they also saw the women and a few men within the barracks. Putting their horses into a long, swinging trot, the soldiers shot forward toward the foe. The Indians, not dreaming of any attack from the rear, never knew that the white men were upon them till they almost reached the fort. Then they received in their back the full charge of 500 pistols.

In 10 minutes there was not an Indian in sight, except the wounded lying on the ground. And among these was the swarthy father of Snow-Bird, Chief Big Bear. Mrs. Campbell took him, nursed him as she had done the child, and in a month's time, when the Chief was ready to go back to his Great Spirit and vowed eternal friendship to the whites.

Little Snow-Bird continued her visits to her friends and was rewarded by the Government with a handsome farm and the finest horse in the State. Tomorrow's Story — "The Fairy Stick."

BURNING CORN COBS TO CUT COAL PRICE

Considerable comment is being caused by the fact that there are few calls at Richmond elevators for corn cobs suitable for fuel.

Corn cobs are in most instances given away and the only expense attached to them is that of transportation. If mixed with wood, they make a good fuel.

With coal prices constantly going higher, it is natural to expect that other heat producing materials would be in demand.
