NATION SEEKS

its business undisturbed. Such an absurdity cannot be. Modern instance shows that not armies but nations go to war, and would it not be reasonable to suppose that there would never be any more little wars—these could probably be avoided by some of the plans for stopping war which are now advocated, but these plans will never prevent Big wars, the wars in which all will have a part.

I have seen no scheme for general training suggested which means the organization of a permanent armed force much greater than we now have. In fact, this places a limit upon the regular establishment as nothing else will.

Training is Beneficial. Universal training does not mean an ever-increasing armed body, which is the first essential of militarism, the bogie of the anti, but an annual increase in the number of civilians who know how to do something beneficial for themselves and for posterity. What objection can there be to six months' training in the field or barracks which turns out a well set up boy with good, hard muscles, clear and quick eyes, and with a wholesome sense of discipline and organization, a better knowledge of, and a higher regard for his country—what is wrong with it?

Why deprive the citizen of the knowledge of how to defend himself, his family, his property, his government itself, and thereby possibly make him subservient to another power, more to deny the right to know the principles of civil combat.

If the anti could or would agree to do all the future fighting for the country, or if they could guarantee everlasting peace, then there would be much virtue in their attitude, but these things they cannot do.

We hear the bromide union "they who live by the sword, etc."

Well, "men have died and the worms have eaten them," are this.

The bookkeeper and the author among others. Man dies but once, and a greater proportion of penmen will probably die on duty than of those who carry the sword.

Finally, if the hour comes and the enemy prevails, and the challenge for an accounting is made, will we hear the plaint of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" This is as one sees it.

WOMEN! READ THIS!

Lift off any corn or callus with fingers and it won't hurt a bit.

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on the bottom of your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freeze-one. Small bottles of freeze-one like here shown can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Don't limp or twist your face in agony and spoil your beauty but get a little bottle of freeze-one and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus.

Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses without suffering one particle. You feel no pain or irritation while applying freeze-one or afterwards. It is magic!
