Harrison in tears told federal judge Clayton, who was imposing a sentence of 25 years in prison for Harrison's admitted robbery of a Louisville & Nashville train at Greenville, Ala., the story of how Harry Marks, Frank Moore and John Williams had been convicted wrongly of holding up and robbing an Alabama Great Southern train at Bibbville, Ala., Sept. 20, 1913. Story of the Terrors of a Home in War Zone Told by Rambeau Film

MARJORIE RAMBEAU, famous stage star, has completed "Motherhood," her second screen success. "Motherhood" tells the story of the suffering which the conflict of nations has brought upon woman and pictures the burden which the war has inflicted upon children. It shows battlefields and the great guns in action but none of the wholesale slaughter nor awful horror of battle. Its theme is the problem of women in war.

Since Marjorie Rambeau stepped before the motion picture camera, in the midst of her appearance in

"Cheating Cheaters," she has been amazingly successful. Her first photoplay of the series she is to produce under the Mutual-Powell banner, was "The Greater Woman." Her third picture is "The Debt."

"Motherhood" tells what happened to a happy European family when the husband left to serve his flag and the faithful wife was left behind to defend their home and her honor. The story was written by Frederic Arnold Kummer, an author of international note, and the production was directed by Frank Powell.
