

WORK ON GRACE CHURCH STARTS

Work on the new Grace church began Monday.

The church furniture is to be removed and the scaffolding for the new structure put up during the week. Most of the brick and steel for the new church is ready, and the construction will begin as soon as the preliminary work is finished.

Sunday morning's service was featured by the presence of Rev. G. H. Hill, of Indianapolis, pastor more than twenty years ago, who preached.

Rev. H. L. Overdier gave a brief sketch of the history of Grace church. He told how the First M. E. church of the city and Grace church were both offshoots from the Pearl Street congregation, one because they wanted men and women to sit together, and one because they wanted musical instruments.

A musical service was given in the evening, the choir singing several anthems and special numbers being given by the organist. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cox, Mrs. Ada Cook and Raymond Stemple also sang.

THOUGHTS TO THINK ABOUT

Remember well but forget easily; hold on to all the good and let all evil pass away from you.

He who knows least doubts most; at the same time he doubts not but a doubter dies from self-destruction.

Destructive thought destroys mental vigor; constructive thought builds character, happiness and health.

Bigotry is the faithful mother of many an unsound doctrine; it always takes care of its own.

A bad back makes you gloomy. Can't be happy with continual backache.

The aches and pains of a bad back are frequently due to weak kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are recommended for weak kidneys.

So Richmond citizens testify. Mrs. Sarah Platt, 454 S. 13th St., Richmond, says: "My back hurt me and was weak and lame. My kidneys were irregular in action. I had read a lot about Doan's Kidney Pills and procured a box at Thistlethwaite's Drug Store. This one box rid me of the trouble and I haven't been bothered since."

Survivor of German Flagship Tells of Battle Off Jutland

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, July 30.—Correspondence.—Scene on board the German flagship Lutzow during the Jutland naval battle when some of the newest and largest of the German battle cruisers were battered or sunk by Admiral Beatty's British squadron in June, 1916, are vividly described by P. Krug, one of the Lutzow's survivors in a pamphlet which has just been published here. It is believed to be the first detailed story of that great battle from the point of view of the German sailor to reach the public eye.

Torpedoed by a British warship early in the engagement the Lutzow, which was the flagship of Admiral Hipper, was hammered unmercifully by the big guns of the British vessels, and soon became a complete wreck, a "ship of the dead," as Krug describes her.

According to his story twenty-seven German sailors were trapped in the Diesel dynamo room before the battle had been long in progress and remained there when the Lutzow, a disabled hulk was abandoned and sent to the bottom by a torpedo from a German destroyer. Two of these imprisoned men had been driven insane and were kept tied by their shipmates.

Tells How Tables Turned. After describing the first part of the battle and telling how the arrival of British battleships turned the tables on the Germans, Krug writes: "Suddenly the entire ship is roughly shaken. The colossus heaves far over, and everything that is not fixed is upset. The first direct hit! The torpedo pierces the fore part of the ship. Its effects are terrible. Iron, wood, metal, parts of bodies, smashed ships' implements are all intermingled, and the electric light, by chance spared, continues to shine upon this sight."

"Two decks lower, in the Diesel dynamo room, there is still life. That compartment has not been hit, and 27 men in the prime of life have been spared, but the chamber is shut off from all others, for the water is rushing into all sections. They are doomed to death. Several 38-centimeter shells squarely hit their mark, working terrible havoc. The first hit the wireless department."

Nothing left but Ruins. "Of the twelve living men who a moment ago were seated before the apparatus, there is nothing more to be seen. Nothing is left but a smoking heap of ruins. The second shot again pierced the fore part of the ship. The entire fore part of the vessel, as far as the Diesel motor room was past, saying."

"Another broadside meant for the Lutzow fell short, but a torpedo-boat close by disappeared, leaving only a

Clash Between North and South Faction in China is Near

LONDON, July 30.—The outlook in China is very serious and a complete rupture between the north and south seems inevitable, according to a despatch from Shanghai to the Times. Dr. Sen Yat Sen, who recently was reported to be leading the rebels near Swatow, has gone to Canton to organize a league of the southern and southwestern provinces.

Proclamations refusing to recognize the government at Peking have been issued in Kwang-Tung, a southeastern province.

disabled, with the guns sticking out in all directions. On deck lay the bodies of the sailors in their torn uniforms, in the midst of the empty shell cases. From the masts fluttered torn flags, twisted signal lines and pieces of wire of the wireless installation. Had not the lookout man and the three officers on the commander's bridge given signs of life, the Lutzow would have truly resembled a ship of the dead. Below on the battery deck and in the coal bunkers, there still lay innumerable wounded, but there was no longer a doctor to attend them.

Bulkheads Give Way. "Night came on and hope was entertained of getting away without a further encounter. But at 3 o'clock in the night news of the approach of two British cruisers and five destroyers was received and just at that critical time the fore and middle bulkheads gave way."

"Orders were given to quickly carry the wounded to the stern. Then the order rings out: 'All hands muster in division order abaft.' A tumult arises on the lower deck, for everybody is now bent on saving his life. It is impossible in that short space of time to bring up all the wounded, for they are scattered everywhere. Eighteen men had the good fortune to be carried up, but all the rest who could not walk or crawl had to be left behind."

"The 27 men shut up in the Diesel dynamo chamber had heard the order through the speaking-tube, for many, mad with anguish, screamed through the tube for help, and it was learned that two of their number lay bound because they had become insane. Inspired by their sense of duty, these sealed-up men had continued to carry on their work in order to provide the ship with light."

Those Left Were Doomed. "The torpedo-boats now quickly took of the crew of the Lutzow, and those left behind were doomed to death. It was resolved that no piece of the vessel should fall into the enemy's hands. An order was given and a torpedo left the waters. Just then seven men to be seen running like madmen round the rear-deck."

Over-fatigued as they were, they had apparently dropped off to sleep and only just awakened. As the torpedo exploded, the Lutzow's bow quickly dipped, and the stern rose until she stood on end. Then she heeled over and sank, forming a great whirlpool that carried everything within it into the depths.

"When the roll was called it appeared that there were 1,003 survivors of the Lutzow; 597 men had perished in the battle."

Jean L. Jaures, leader of the French socialist party, was assassinated on July 28, 1914.

Model Wooden Ship Found Wanting

WOODEN SHIP FLUSH. INTERNATIONAL.

The wooden ship Flush, built four months ago at a Gulf of Mexico port and intended for submarine blockade running, has been inspected by the New York Chamber of Commerce and found wanting. The committee asserts that although the Flush has made only one trip, from the Gulf of Mexico to New York, she is unfit for the purpose for which she was constructed. The finding of the Chamber of Commerce committee is considered a powerful argument for the Goeppels plan of steel ships instead of wooden ships.

FIRE MOTOR TRUCK STRUCK BY TRAIN

EDGEWATER PARK, N. J., July 30.—Richard Whittick, a fireman, was killed and nearly 30 men and women injured here Saturday while fighting fire caused by the explosion of a gasoline tank motor truck when it was struck by a freight train.

Three other firemen were severely burned. The burning fluid spread to a freight station and three small buildings, and fire companies from Burlington nearby were summoned.

While fighting the flames a second explosion occurred, killing Whittick and spreading burning oil over many other persons.
