The Police Judge

The fact that the sale of intoxicating liquor will be absolutely prohibited in Indiana after next April should be considered in connection with the proposed ordinance creating the office of city judge. It is well recognized, and the police records of Richmond will show, that the great majority of arrests are caused from the excessive use of intoxicating liquor. Men drinking liquor to excess get drunk in public, they use profanity in public, they engage in fights and do various acts in violation of law, which but for the liquor they would not do. The abolition of liquor will decrease crime and lessen the business of the police court. With less violation of the law there then becomes less demand for a city judge. Well conducted private enterprises do not add men as their business decreases. No private corporation would give an officer an assistant in April, 1918 if that officer in such month was to have less work than he had before. The rules of good business for a private corporation are likewise good rules for a municipal corporation. It may be said that with the passing of the saloons will come "blind tigers," and by reason thereof the police and prosecutor will have more work, but even if this is true, it will not make more work for the city court for the prosecutor will handle his "blind tiger" cases in the Circuit Court where he will have a grand jury to make his investigations and where when a case is contested there can be no appeal except to the Supreme Court of the State.

But not only will the passing of the saloon make less business for the city court, it will curtail the city's revenue. The loss to the city of license fees from the saloons may cause a deficit in public funds. The councilman then who votes for the city judge ordinance must explain why he creates an office for which there will be less demand than ever before, and for which the city will have less with which to pay than ever before.

Mr. Councilman, in your own business, would you, as your work grew less and your income decreased, add men to your pay roll?

If you wouldn't do it for yourself, don't do it for the city.

A New Sign of Patriotism

The Indiana Council of Defense, through its publicity committee, George Ade, chairman, has issued the following:

A market basket or a shopping bag is as much a badge of patriotism as a Red Cross button or a Liberty bond emblem.

The use of a basket or a bag in carrying home groceries or supplies indicates a willingness to help conserve the resources of the country in a manner which holds out possibilities of vast saving.

Based upon statistics received from groceries, meat markets, department stores and other merchandisers, the Federal Commercial Economy Board, a branch of the National Council of Defense, has declared that in the elimination of delivery charges is the secret of marked reductions in the high cost of living.

Figures received from merchants of all kinds show that they have been forced to add from 4 to 20 per cent—and in some instances 25 per cent—to the retail prices of their wares, in order to cover the cost of deliveries, returns and incidental service to their customers. Just how many hundreds of thousands of dollars, probably millions, this requires every month, in this country, hasn't been calculated, but it will take very little figuring for every housewife, every shopper, to realize her saving if she by co-operating with a market basket, shopping bag, or even a cumbersome box, helps cut off the delivery charges that have lately grown to be such a weighty item in every retailer's cost sheet.

Uncle Sam is just as anxious to have you save as you are yourself. He realizes as well as you do that the margin between producer and consumer represents too much waste, in addition to the excessive, often extortionate commissions frequently added by middlemen. This he knows isn't fair, but to correct the unfairness doesn't imply that he must exact something from someone for nothing—and delivery service, as everybody knows, has grown to be very costly, often useless. Therefore, he asks you, Mrs. Patriotic American Woman, to carry a few things home hereafter and profit both by the exercise and the saving the merchant will gladly pass on to you in reduced prices.

Bundle carrying promises to be a favorite outdoor sport of patriotic Americans in the nationwide food conservation and economy campaign.

Conservation of Foodstuffs

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 2.—Persons inexperienced in the canning of foodstuffs may have trouble which a little precaution will prevent. Dr. H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner says. A statement on the subject issued by him follows:

"A full supply of fruits and vegetables canned from the surplus stocks that would otherwise waste in fields and orchards is the ambition of thousands of housewives who for years have neglected the preserving kettle. The food they can is their contribution to the conservation of our food supply."

Care Will Stop Waste
"Careful adherence to the rules of canning will prevent spoilage. The home economics expert of the Ohio State University has pointed out some of the difficulties that the inexperienced canner will meet."

"Rubbers popping out from beneath the top during sterilization may be due to poor rubber, to too large a rubber or to too much pressure from the top. The top and rubber must be removed, a new rubber and top placed and the jar returned to the canner for about 5 minutes."

"Spoilage may result from the use of old rubbers; from keeping jars in a place that has alternately cold and warm temperatures; from breaking the seal of jars by attempting to tighten the tops after the can has cooled."

Circulation Is Needed
"Jars may break when there is not free circulation of water about the cans; when a cold can is placed in hot water; or a hot can in cold water; when a can is placed in a cool draft."

"Shrinkage of vegetables may be caused by insufficient blanching. An objectionable strong flavor may be due to improper blanching and cold dipping."

"Bubbles that show after sterilization do not affect the keeping qualities of the product. Cloudy appearance of the liquid in the cans may be due merely to overcooking which forces out the interior of the product, or to very hard water."

Stand Too Long
"Flat souring of corn, peas, beans and asparagus is a condition giving a slightly sour taste and objectionable odor, and may be due to allowing the vegetables to stand too long. As soon as each jar is filled it should be set in the canner so that cooking is not delayed."

"Overcooking may not always be objectionable, but it is likely to happen with fruits which require a short time for sterilization. Cooking is going on while the water is coming to the boiling point, and if this time is prolonged some deduction should be made from the time given for sterilization."

Almost all immigration into the United States before 1880 was of English, Irish, and Germans. About that time began the flood of Scandinavian immigration, which filled the Northwestern states. This stopped about 1890, and just before this had begun what is called the "new" immigration, consisting of people from east and south Europe, Italians and Poles. This flood still keeps up.
