

CAMBRIDGE CITY SENIORS DESIGN FOOD POSTERS

Importance of Conservation
Shown in Graphic Form by Students.

CAMBRIDGE CITY, Ind., Oct. 24.—Under direction of Miss Elsie Wolford, art teacher, the High school seniors are engaged this week in designing posters illustrating the importance of food conservation. The motto chosen and which heads all the posters is "Food Will Win. Don't Waste." The coloring is vivid and the perspective of all the posters is good.

Raymond Boughner, Elbert Koon, Howard Ells, Rudolph Kunster, Gilbert Evans, Chauncey Locke, Emma Gehring, John Miller, Dresel Drayton, Edith Peet, Kenneth Huddleston, Walter Smith, Edith Wharton, and Neil Smith are the designers. The posters will be exhibited during the pledge campaign in November.

Miss Flossie Neff, head of the Junior High school, with fifty of her young singers, furnished the singing at the first entertainment at Community hall, Tuesday evening. Dr. Lincoln Wirt was the lecturer, and gave a vivid story of his visits to the front in France. The proceeds go to the school fund. The next community entertainment will be given in January.

Poultry shippers generally resent the action taken, at day, by the Cambridge City Horse Thief association ordering an inquiry as to whether or not they had obeyed government regulations respecting receipts and the items regarding the sellers. They agree, however, that chicken thieves should be prosecuted. The association scored the Richmond authorities for the non-prosecutions of well-known poultry thieves.

MEMORIAL FOR SAILORS LATER

Although Secretary of Navy Daniels has designated next Sunday as memorial day for sailors of the navy who have lost their lives since the outbreak of the war, it is probable that naval memorial services will be conducted in Richmond Protestant churches at a later date.

"Services in Richmond church next Sunday will be devoted to food conservation," said Rev. L. E. Murray, pastor of First Christian church and president of the Richmond Ministerial Association. "As a matter of fact the Association has never been officially informed of the action of the secretary of navy in designating next Sunday as memorial day for our sailors. I am quite sure, however, that such memorials will be conducted later."

Twenty-eight navy men have been killed since the outbreak of the war.

The first American soldier or sailor to die was John L. Epoloped, boatswain's mate, first class, of Washington, D. C., of the gun crew of the Aztec, sunk April 1. The first deaths after war was actually begun were those of Lieut. Thomas and Donald Alexander, seamen, of New York; C. J. Fisher, coxswain, of Philadelphia; C. F. Lucke, seaman, of Baltimore, and F. H. Lo Ree, seaman, of Philadelphia, all of his gun crew.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl sixteen years old and am deeply in love with a girl four years my senior. When we first met we fell in love with each other and grew to be great friends.

Some time ago we had a quarrel and she accused me of something which was not my fault and I am perfectly innocent of it and I told her so. Since then she has treated me very coolly. Please tell me what I can do to regain her love, as I love her dearly. I have tried to explain to her the cause of this trouble and tell her the truth, but she will not listen to me.

She is a fine girl in every respect, so please don't tell me to drop her and forget about her because I cannot. PEST.

No, I don't see any reason why you should drop her and forget about her, but you can make up your mind that if you should have to give her up, you can. That is usually the hardest thing to do.

If you are innocent of the wrong doing she accuses you of, that is in your favor and time will clear up the trouble. Your innocence ought to make you confident and you should act towards her as if nothing had happened. When she is cool toward you, don't notice it, but be just as friendly as ever. Show her that you don't cherish the injustice she is doing you by her false accusation. When she sees that you are innocent as she must in time, she will be ready to make up with you and you can then continue your friendship as you did in the past.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I went with a boy steady for two years and we were getting along so well together that we began to talk of marriage. Now he has been drafted and I have received only a post card from him. I believe that something must have happened to him, because he was so attentive to me that he certainly wouldn't let me worry from not hearing from him. What should I do? I am so lonesome I can't enjoy myself any more at all. GWENDOLYN.

For the present you can interest yourself in books, moving picture shows and even knitting for the soldiers. If you know the regiment or company that your sweetheart is with you can write him at the camp and he will probably answer as soon as he has time to do.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like to know just what you would do if you were in my place about this young man. I met him about one month ago. At first I did not care much about him, but he treated me so nice and gentle that I have learned to admire him. He seems to be a perfect gentleman, but to my hard luck I learned he is married. He is not living with his wife.

He came here only a short time ago to take a very responsible position, and as no one knew him before he came here he could easily have passed for a single man. But I only like him the better for telling the truth and being honest and not trying to fool anybody. Don't you? My girl friends say they wouldn't go with anyone who had been married and they tell me I am crazy if I talk to him. Please tell just what to do about it, as I have neither father nor mother to advise me. If I must ignore him tell me how to do so without hurting his feelings. I am sixteen and he is about twenty-two.

WORRIED.

If I were you, dearie, I wouldn't go out with this young man. If he asks you to go with him, tell him it would be fair to his wife; also that it would hurt your reputation to go with a married man. Treat him just the same as you do other young married men.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I went with a boy steady for two years and we

CANNING AND PRESERVING

DILLED GREEN TOMATOES—A layer of tomatoes; sprinkle salt over and small piece of garlic, then pour over sufficient boiled vinegar with water and add another layer; besides, put in quite a quantity of dill and a few bay leaves. They stay hard just like pickles and are ready for eating after the pickles are in ten days. These can also be put in jars to keep for the winter.

NEW GREEN TOMATO RECIPE—Wash and cut in sections or slices, as preferred, green tomatoes and pack in brine same as cucumbers. Cover and set in place where they will not freeze or be too warm. This winter when you have used up most of your sweet pickles (any kind), save the sweetened and spiced vinegar in which they were pickled, take out some of the green tomatoes from the brine, freshen in cold water and cook in the sweet pickle vinegar. If pickle vinegar is not strong enough, add some more vinegar and sugar. This not only saves the sweet vinegar, which most people throw away, but jars that have been emptied of their contents during the winter can be used for these pickles. Add celery seed to the sweetened vinegar when cooking the freshened green tomatoes.

GREEN TOMATO RELISH—Chop fine half bushel green tomatoes and squeeze them dry. Put into large bowl and mix in three pounds minced onions, a dozen green peppers chopped fine, four ounces mustard, two ounces celery seed, a little less than a pint of salt, a large root of finely grated horseradish. When thoroughly macerated put mixture into a stone jar. Pour over enough vinegar to cover. Then take one quart vinegar and one cupful sugar. Put on stove to boil. Take William Dudley Foulke, who will speak on "Italian Pictures," Wednesday evening at the Public Art gallery in connection with a series of lectures in the Arts and Travels Course, will have a number of beautiful Italian pictures and prints placed in the north gallery and these will be used to illustrate his talk.

T. Harold Reynolds, Turners Falls, Mass., picked a bunch of 105 four-leaved clovers on one lawn recently.
