Tuesday is the only meatless day in the food calendar. Although the ban on meats has been lifted to some extent, Tuesday is still meatless, and should be observed as such. One meal tomorrow should be wheatless also. Remember that wheat must be saved during these few months before the new wheat crop comes on.

Mrs. Walker Land and daughter, Jane, spent Sunday with Mrs. Land's parents in Newcastle.

Miss Kathryn Broderick who is taking nurses training in St. Vincent's Hospital in Indianapolis, spent the week end with relatives here.

The style show tomorrow afternoon at the Washington theatre, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kolp, promises to be an interesting event in the weeks social calendar. Many new attractions have been added to the show this season which will make it interesting to all.

Miss Margaret Wickmeyer has returned from Bloomington where she attended the state basketball tournament.

Mrs. Kate Duey has returned from Chicago after spending the winter with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Rowlett Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. John Schattel went to Cambridge City last evening where they were guests at a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Will Snyder, celebrating Mrs. Snyder's birthday. A large birthday cake with candles was used as the centerpiece for the table. A four course dinner was served. The guests returned from Cambridge City last evening.

The Tricotage club will meet tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Lewis Fahsing.

St. Paul's Guild of St. Paul's Episcopal church will meet Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Parish house.

Mrs. Ed Wendling is spending a few days with friends and relatives in Newcastle.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Kettling of Portland, spent the week end with their daughter, Mrs. Charles Gibbs.

Mr. and Mrs. James Parkinson are spending a few days visiting in Newcastle.

The Domestic Science association will meet Wednesday afternoon in the Westcott hotel. Miss Ethel Clark, social service secretary, will address the meeting.

Mrs. Clifford Hood, of Portland, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Cates in this city.

Ray Kelley will leave tomorrow for Chicago where he will take training in the Great Lakes Navy Training Station.

The Aftermath club will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. J. Rush at her home on North Eighth street.

The Eagles Lodge will give a dance Wednesday evening for its members and friends. All members will be requested to present their lodge receipts at the door for admission. Elmer Hawkins is in charge of the dance. Among the features of the evening will be an old fashioned barn dance which will be called by Jack Knollenberg.

William O. Conkle who is stationed at Hempstead, Long Island, is home on a short furlough.

Kolps complete orchestra will furnish the music for the Elks' dance this evening at the club house at 8 o'clock. The dance will be a St. Patrick's party and all Elks and their lady friends are invited. The affair will be quite informal.

With rhubarb on the market and the supply of sugar limited, a new problem faces the housewife. Several remedies for this problem have been suggested. First, jellies which are six to nine months old, are not fresh now and in some cases might not be used. Equal parts of jelly and rhubarb cooked together make a refreshing compote. Foreign cooks melt jelly for a good many uses. If rhubarb is cut up in this melted jelly and cooked it will give the rhubarb a sweet taste.

It is not a bad way to soften a sour like rhubarb to use slightly sweetened whipped cream with it. A grape jelly will give a fruit dish a handsome color especially when contrasted with a little whipped cream served on top of it.

Miss Gertrude Clark entertained with a six o'clock dinner last evening at her home in compliment to Frank Solomon, of Elwood. The table was attractively decorated with St. Patrick's decorations. Covers were laid for Miss Evelyn Edwards, Miss Mildred Edwards, Miss Gertrude Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Unthank, John Freeman and Frank Solomon.

Miss Mary Schweikert and Dan Walsh of Springfield, O., were guests yesterday of the former's relatives here.

The March social committee at the Country club are planning for an informal dance at the club Thursday evening. The Evans Smith orchestra will furnish music for the evening. The affair will be very informal and all club members and visiting guests are invited.

The Progressive Literary society will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. W. A. Ellis at her home, 301 West Main street.

The Show Me club will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Oren Miller at her home, 300 Northwest Third street.

Members of the star Bible class of Second Presbyterian church will give a Backward social at the church Wednesday evening. No admission will be charged but light refreshments will be sold.

Revelations of a WifeHOW MADGE SAVED THE SITUATION

"Aha, here's the wanderer! We thought you were never coming."

Harry Underwood and Dicky sprang to their feet as Lillian and I entered her dining room. Of course Mr. Underwood was the first to speak. I stole a glance at Dicky. Was he still angry?

"Hello, Madge," Dicky's voice was careless. Its indifference stung me a little, but I resolved not to let it affect me.

"Good afternoon, Dicky," I said as demurely as I could; then to his companion: "I have already greeted you once today, I believe."

For just an instant, Harry Underwood's face was ludicrous in its surprise. He had not dreamed that I would dare mention his having seen Jack and me at the door of the restaurant when I had been so distressed at the loss of my rings.

I knew I risked something in speaking of the meeting. He might resent my flouting of his knowledge and speak of the temporary loss of the rings before I could tell Dicky about the episode myself. But I had weighed things carefully before I spoke. I could not avert to let Harry Underwood imagine for a second that he was doing me a favor in being silent about any affair of mine.

Lillian and Dicky looked their surprise. I explained in as matter-of-fact manner as I could muster:

"When my cousin and I left Broquin's, where we dined, Mr. Underwood was passing."

Harry Underwood's piercing black eyes met mine squarely. They were dancing with mirth, in which I knew there was more than soupcon on "Broquin's!" exclaimed Lillian, as she indicated my chair, and rang for the maid. "That reminds me. I have not been to Broquin's for ages. It's a bally little place. Do they dress their salads as well as ever?"

A "Smart" Cook

I was so grateful to her for changing the subject that I forgot to be an novice at Harry Underwood's effusive manner as he pulled my chair back and seated me in my place.

"The coffee, Betty," Lillian said quietly to the colored cook who had come into the room at the tap of the bell.

"Oh, yes'm, Miss Lillian. I'll bring the coffee, yes'm."

She disappeared, grinning from ear to ear. Harry Underwood frowned.

"When are you going to attach a can to that noisy coon, Lill?" he demanded unpleasingly. "She's getting fresher every day."

"I'd sooner attach one to you, dearest," she flashed back at him, but good-naturedly. I could not detect a trace of temper or even annoyance in her answer, although Harry Underwood's tone was one that almost any wife might resent.

"On the principle that it's always mighty easy to get another husband, but not so easy to get a good cook," Dicky asked impudently.

"Exactly," returned Lillian laughing.

"Remember, husbands come higher, the older the bidder," Harry Underwood said, and his cutting tone gave emphasis to the offensive words.

Lillian flushed under her rouge, but luckily the entrance of Betty saved the situation.

"How did yoh all like dat pie?"

Betty demanded of everybody in general, as she passed the coffee.

I looked at her in amazement. Surely Mr. Underwood's criticism was somewhat justified.

"Scrumptious, Betty," said Dicky, laughing. "Didn't you see I took two pieces?"
