The War Celebration

The anniversary celebration of our entrance into the war ought to furnish inspiration and determination to patriots in helping win the war.

The immediate task before us is the forthcoming Liberty Loan. We must address ourselves to this task as if its consummation involved our very existence. Our national prestige and the morale of our boys "over there" will be affected to a marked degree by the result of this loan.

America has wealth and resources. We have drawn on this storehouse but not in quantities that have appreciably inconvenienced any of us. Our per capita contributions for war work is far below that of England, France or Italy. We still can give billions without feeling it.

The new call for subscriptions ought to increase the sense of our determination to win. It ought to accelerate our personal participation in the struggle. It ought to convince us that the boys in the trenches cannot win if we who stay at home do not back them with our money and materials.

If the war is lost, the cause may be traced to a lack of consuming interest and fixed determination of the "folks at home." Unless they enlist in the great army that produces the sinews of war by buying Liberty bonds and producing munitions, all the valor and heroism of our soldiers is in vain. It is blood wasted for a cause that was lost on American soil.

The American people in increasingly large numbers are awakening to the momentous part they, as individuals, must play in the business of defeating the Kaiser. The notion that an army is all that is needed to defeat Germany is waning and in its place is coming the stern realization that the individual effort of every citizen, making itself effective in food and fuel conservation, thrift, economy, and self-denials that permit the government to go into the open market to buy in profusion what is needed for the military establishment, is a factor on which the success or failure of arms is conditioned.

Our celebration of America's entrance into the war ought to invoke in all of us an appreciation of the highly important part the personal equation plays in modern warfare.

Dairy Courses for Women

Another step in the re-adjustment of conditions to meet the war situation became apparent this week when Purdue announced a special course in dairying for women. "It is the purpose of Purdue University to make this course an immediate factor in stimulating food production," says the announcement.

The course will fit women for war time activity so that they may join the army of patriots at home who are fighting for increased food production and conservation. The course will enable women to take the places of men and will prepare them to be cream station operators, milk and cream testers and ice cream and cheese makers.

The announcement of this course indicates to what an extent the war has made inroads on farm labor. It also shows a gradual change in the labor from men to women, a fact that is striking when one remembers that farm labor usually is associated with men.

Pictures of women working in the harvest fields of France and England have reminded us of the depletion of man labor in these countries, but made few of us realize that identical conditions may exist here before the 1918 harvest is garnered.

Enlistment in the great army of workers "at home" is going on daily. We do not realize it, but sure as fate all of us are being caught in the draft and are doing our bit for the cause. Before fall comes, we may be astounded at the services which we will be giving our government.

We hope that a number of Wayne county women see an opportunity in the dairy course which Purdue is offering. The course will start April 11 and end May 4.

Primal Motives of War

[By David Starr Jordan.]

Of the many influences behind the present war it is my belief that economic motives and motives of international distrust, envy, and hate have but a secondary place. These are urged as excuses or justifications or as weapons in argument, but no people on account of these alone would have ventured to break the peace of the world.

The primal motive behind the war was internal and political. It is part of the age-long struggle against privilege. One by one the people in each nation have encroached on the perquisites of the classes that rule through inherited power. Little by little democracy has crowded privilege. Everywhere "freedom slowly broadens down, from precedent to precedent," and as freedom broadens, the scope of aristocracy must be narrowed. The spectacle of an "emperor without an empire" has become increasingly painful to the war makers of Europe. The spectacle of an impotent House of Lords has cast a shadow wherever lords of any kind assemble.

The cause of most modern wars may be defined as a conspiracy of the privileged classes to revive their waning power. The gray old strategists who look to war to place their names in history are the ready allies or tools of privilege, and the young men are their sacrifice. Very few wars are, in a strict sense, international. Each side has its own war castes and these play into each other's hands. But only under dynastic rule can the war makers actually dominate. The war spirit in democratic nations arises through opposition to dynastic purposes or from fear of their results.

The fact that every year of peace marks an advance from militarism to civilism, from privilege to equality, from dynastic oligarchy to democracy, has thrown the tendency to revolution on the other side. "Foreign war presents a sharp remedy for internal disunion or waning patriotism." In other words, it is needed by the privileged class to keep down the "populace" and to divert the attention of the people from the abuses of inherited power.

Conquest and Kultur

"Now, people of Germany, ye shall be masters of Europe." (Nun deutsches Volk wirst du Europa's Meister.)—The German poet, Hermann Stehr, in the first number of the Neue Rundschau after the war broke out, 1914, p. 1186.

"Our next war will be fought for the highest interests of our country and of mankind. This will invest it with importance in the world's history. 'World power or downfall!' will be our rallying cry.

"Keeping this idea before us, we must prepare for war with the confident intention of conquering and with the iron resolve to persevere to the end, come what may."—F. von Bernhardi, Germany and the Next War (1911), trans., 1914, p. 154.

Cut Out the Sob Stuff

From the New York Sun.

CUT out the sob stuff, Sis, when you're writing over here; Do not tell me that "Mother is so sad;" I know it, and I'm sorry that her heart is filled with fear For her boy, who needs bright words to make him glad.

We are learning a new job—and we're very hard at work. But not one of us has time for feeling glum; You should write the kind of stuff that puts pep into a man.

But, Sis, dear, on that sob stuff please keep mum. I know it isn't easy; but we're here to play the game! And when the letters which we call "Blue Blank," Those tear-stained letters 'stead of longed-for cheer cheer up stuff from home.

Arrive, do you think they fill us boys with spunk? Our Uncle Sam has called us, and we're here to do the job. So say to every one who has a boy That if she wants to do her bit and keep him well and strong She must write the sort 'o news that he'll enjoy.

The spirit of the boys is great! We're bound to win this war! All the bowed down suffering nations to release! And with God's help we'll fight until there dawns up on the earth A wonderful and all-abiding Peace!

DINNER STORIES

The war-working wife of the Tommy at the front was very terse with the "nosy" lady representing some committee or other.

"Oh, you needn't worry yourself," she said; "we're both doing our bit. He's bearing arms, and I'm bearing mine."

The small boy sometimes sees straight and sees far, says the Christian Science Monitor. John stood high in his examination, but a girl took the highest mark. His father was indignant.

"John, I am surprised to find you have allowed yourself to be beaten by a meek girl."

"Yes, father," said John unblushingly. "I have; but I can tell you something—girls are not so very mere after all."

It was during a more or less secret conference in Washington early last spring, just before war was declared. Many prominent men were present, both from the north and from the south. The newspapers naturally were anxious to get opinions first hand from the members of the different committees, but found it a hard job.

One reporter finally fairly cornered a courteous southerner—an elderly man of the "old school."

"Mr. Blank," said the reporter persuasively, "I would like to have your opinion of the war."

"Well, sah," said Mr. Blank very courteously, "I haven't thought of it much lately, but I've always been of the opinion, sah, that Lee should not have surrendered. Good evening, sah."

And he left behind him a thoroughly dazed reporter.

TRAINING LITTLE CHILDREN

Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergarten teachers. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.

Article II—Kindergarten Activities Afford Profitable Amusement to Little Folks at Home.

BY MRS. BERTHA EMELIN

The mother of small children who does not live within reach of a kindergarten need not feel compelled to deprive her little ones of the pleasure and benefits of systematic training. It is true that the stimulus of co-operative work and play, so vital a feature of the kindergarten, is not so apt to be found in the smaller group at home and is entirely lacking in the case of the only child. Nevertheless, many of the activities provided in kindergarten can be carried on not only by the small group but by the lonely child as well.

"Come, let us live with our children," is the old familiar Froebelian slogan. We might paraphrase it by saying, "Come, let us sing with our children!" Why shouldn't children sing morning greetings to father and mother as well as to teacher? Even 2-year-olds that I know can sing them and delight in doing so. The good morning songs to various members of the family, to the new day, to sun or clouds, sung while dressing, do much to create a sunny morning atmosphere. There are songs to accompany many of the home duties, beside a wealth of nature songs. At bedtime the devotional spirit of the evening prayer may be enhanced by the singing of a child's hymn. Songs such as these can be found in "Games and Music of Froebel's Mother Play" and in other kindergarten song books. Any good library would have some of these, or it would be possible to buy copies through a bookstore.

A kindergarten calendar may easily be made at home. For this purpose a sheet of white cardboard is ruled off into a sufficient number of blank squares for the days of the month. The children mark the calendar each day with a suitable emblem. Yellow circles should be provided for sunny days and gray for cloudy. Tiny umbrellas denote rain; a gray circle partly covered with white indicates snow. Advertisements furnish pictures for special occasions—a little church, a toy, a birthday cake, a Christmas tree, etc. The particular emblem is less important to the children than the pleasure they take in attending to the calendar regularly, and the fact that they are being helped to a realization of divisions of time. The card should be large enough to allow for a suitable picture for the month to be mounted outside of the ruled portion. Land-seer's "Squirrel and Pair of Nut-crackers" may be used for the October sheet. Correggio's "Holy Night" for December, Washington's or Lincoln's portrait for February.

Games train the senses at the same time that they afford keen pleasure. A mother can play many games with her child without interrupting her work. Dramatization is a wonderful stimulus to the imagination, and numberless stories lend themselves to this form of reproduction.

The kindergarten, aiming as it does to relate the limited world of the small person to the larger world about him, to quicken his appreciation of parents and all world-workers, to deepen his wonder and reverence for natural phenomena, is much more than a mere place of amusement. The home can be made more than this also.

Please pass this article on to a friend and help Uncle Sam reach all the mothers of the country.

On the Spur of the Moment

We are getting up a new war relief. It is a relief for ultimate consumers. During the period of the war. The main object is to teach grocers how to read the English language. For a couple of weeks the newspapers have been telling of the crash in the egg market, and how prices have been shot all to pieces. The papers have said that the retail price has fallen 7 cents a dozen. And is now around 41 cents. After two full weeks of this. We tried three grocers for eggs. They all asked 79 cents a dozen. We told them about the newspaper reports. And they all said they never read the papers. One of them admitted that he couldn't read. It looks as though the time had arrived to do something about this.

That Wonderful Ohio Ice. The following is snipped bodily from the Zanesville (Ohio) "News": "Mr. Jess Coultrap: You have the most wonderful ice I ever saw. On January 7 you brought me a twenty-pound chunk. As I was going away, I just left it lay in the yard. I returned yesterday and there was the ice, but instead of weighing twenty pounds, it weighed twenty-two pounds. It has grown. Yours truly, "Francis Brown."

LOOK HERE FOR IT

Many a Richmond Reader Will Be Interested.

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, is it surprising that they wonder if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter. Read Richmond endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills.

E. W. Carlos, salesman, 333 S. Thirtieth St., Richmond, says: "I can endorse Doan's Kidney Pills as a reliable remedy. I have used them on several occasions when my kidneys have been out of order and acted irregularly and when my back has bothered me. Doan's Kidney Pills have always relieved those attacks and I know they are worthy of trial by anyone having weak kidneys."

Strive To Have Healthy Skin

Next time you are in a gathering of women note the different conditions apparent in complexion. You will see some filled with blackheads, some dry and rough, some smooth and glossy, some smeared with rouge, some streaked with heavy metallic powders and some in a while you will see one that is a demonstration of intelligence from every point of view. The color is rosy, the skin is clear and smooth, the pores are small and open, the powder does not show on the firm vigorous skin. Every woman can have a good complexion if she will only use a little discretion. If you would acquire real beauty, the beauty of perfect health, you must replenish your worn-out nerves with lecithin. Nature's own nerve restorer, and put into your blood the invigorating iron which Nature intended it to have for health. In most of the modern foods these and other vitalizing elements have been largely eliminated. Yet to be healthy and beautiful the system must have them. They are found in Bio-feren, not only in proper proportions to restore weakened vitality but in such form as the system can best assimilate them. A treatment of lecithin and iron peptonate as combined in Bio-feren increases the appetite, aids nutrition and invigorates the patient. And Bio-feren in its pellet form is easy and palatable to take—no liquid

Iron discoloration of the teeth, no unpleasant taste. There is no secret or mystery about Bio-feren. Doctors prescribe it regularly because they know exactly what it contains as well as what it will do and they know they could not formulate a better up-building tonic.

The action of Bio-feren on the system is so beneficial, we are so sure of its giving you positive health and vigor, providing, of course, there is no serious, chronic ailment such as cancer, tuberculosis, etc., that we only sell it on the condition that you agree to return the empty package and accept a refund of your money unless you are entirely satisfied.

There is no use waiting for health and beauty. It is better to do things today than tomorrow. Go to your physician today—right now—he will advise Bio-feren. Then start taking it at once as he advises or as directions on the package call for. The same principle may be had for the asking.

Large package $1.00 at all leading druggists or direct if your druggist can not supply you. The Sentinel Remedies Co., Inc., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Raymond Hitchcock was standing in front of his theater some time ago when a well-known New York man approached him and asked for a pass to his show.

"I'll write you a pass, if you'll let me write it on your shirtfront," said Hitchcock.

"You're on," said the man. Hitchcock borrowed an immense blue pencil and scrawled the necessary words on the broad expanse of bosom. But the box office man would not honor the pass unless he could keep a portion of the shirt as a voucher. The man was about to divest himself of his shirt when an acquaintance came along with two tickets and relieved the situation.
