Runaway Boy Caught Here—on His Way to Nebraska

Phelps Coughley, a 13-year-old boy from Dayton enroute to Omaha, Neb., was stopped in Richmond Monday morning by the police.

When stopped Coughley had a ticket to Chicago and $30 which he drew from the bank Saturday. In talking to Chief of Police Gorman the boy said he didn't like the town of Dayton and was going back to where he lived before his parents moved to Dayton. His address in Dayton is 329 Roberts street. He was put in the Home for the Friendless until his parents arrive.

SUCCESSFUL ENDING TO CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM

Richmond has proved that she can "put across" a $10,000 Chautauqua in a time of war and constant rain against her, and yet probably have a good little sum to turn over to the Red Cross, stated B. W. Kelly, ground superintendent, Sunday evening after the final count from the gates was in. Although the expenses are not entirely known as yet, it is estimated that the proceeds would only be about $500 less than last year, which is very good under the circumstances, according to the authorities.

Sunday the gate receipts alone amounted almost to $500, and without the war tax, $533.92 was turned into headquarters, stated Mr. Kelly. Plans for the 1919 Chautauqua are already taking shape. Many tickets have been subscribed, and the audience received with enthusiasm the announcement that J. H. Bentley, principal of the Richmond high school, has again been secured to be platform manager.

The "headline" on the Sunday program was the Hon. Fred Landis, of Logansport.

German Citizens Loyalty. "There has been some confusion as to when the war began. This war started in Philadelphia in 1776. And it isn't going to end until every puppet on a throne takes off his purple robes and comes down to mingle with common men."

"Germany," he stated, "is the only nation where college students pride themselves on coming out with their faces scared and backed with sword cuts, where men are distinguished by the amount of beer they can hold, where an army would march through a country like Belgium and burn or destroy all the homes and churches, but save the breweries, and where the swaggering officers push civilians, even the women and children off the sidewalk into the street."

"In America," said Mr. Landis, "an officer would lose his commission in just fifteen minutes after he tried anything like that; and for the breweries, in America we are saving the homes and churches and running the breweries off the map."

Mr. Landis spoke in warmest terms of the loyalty of the citizens of America who have German blood in their veins, stating that their record has been sublime. However, he denounced emphatically the German propaganda which has been spread over the country and even used in politics.

Woman suffrage, according to Mr. Landis, will be the greatest benefit to the country.

Rev. Whitman Speaks. Rev. C. W. Whitman of Seymour, formerly of Liberty, who gave both the morning lecture, and the evening address, was greatly appreciated. His evening lecture, "The Soul of America," was a historical discussion of facts pointing out the American ideals which never have been preceded in history, and the orator presented his lecture in so forceful and convincing manner that many declared his lecture to be the greatest given from the Richmond platform this year.

He spoke of America as the big brother of the world, whom God began preparing twenty years ago to act as champion first of little sister nations in the Monroe doctrine, then to China when we returned the millions of dollars from the indemnity money which was paid us from the Boxer uprising, and by which China now has been greatly uplifted and Christianized; and finally the Big Brother of the world who comes in fresh and strong to end the war for universal democracy in the world.

Rev. Whitman spoke glowingly of the spirit Americans showed in being conscripted and sent thousands of miles from home to fight for no tangible gain to themselves. He said that the "father and son" draft, September 12, will be one of the finest things in history.

Peace, according to Rev. Whitman, will come about October or November of next year, but the greatest danger peace which Germany may offer to the nations as a last stand toward maintaining their system of government and being able to wait twenty years and then come back more powerful and deadly than ever before.

Allies Must Save Russia. "Germany can give back Alsace-Lorraine, can release Belgium and stop menacing Holland, can let go her grasp even on Turkey and yet by holding Russia under her power will still be able in the next generation to produce an army that all the allies of the world, including China and Japan, can scarcely face," declared the speaker. And he made the most stirring plea for the United States and the Allies to "put their arms about Russia" and save her.

The Hruby Orchestra which gave four concert programs during Saturday and Sunday were very pleasing to the audience. Their numbers included many novel attractions, such as humorous impersonations of Sousa and Creatore, an electric arvil which, made a most vivid representation; and the "sham battle" given as their closing number.

Douglas Malloch, humorist and poet, who delivered the lecture Saturday evening on "The Seven Sinners of Business," was so greatly appreciated by Francis H. Green, who remained after his engagements with the Chautauqua had closed in order to meet the noted lecturer, that he at once arranged with Mr. Malloch to deliver the same lecture to the classes in English literature at the West Chester Normal school.

The "seven sinners," according to Mr. Malloch, include the Liar, the Gossip, the Grouch, the Pessimist, the Quitter, the Loafer and the fiend for work.

Humor Won't Win the War. Douglas Malloch is a thorough believer in humor. "Why, it is humor which is going to win the war for us," he said. "The boys go over the top grinning; they take everything, even hardship, in good humor, and with their morale kept up in the way it is we're going to win, we're bound to win, we can't lose. You can't knock a man out while he's still playing the game with a smile. And you'll find that our boys will come home laughing."

Mr. Malloch believes that the American people are the most humorous in the whole world. "Of course," he admitted, "the Irish do have a great claim on their reputation for humor, but then there are more Irishmen in America than Ireland today, so what's the difference?"

Mr. Malloch is known to many of the citizens through the "Notion Counter" in Judge, which he contributes every week. Also he has written several books, "In Forest Land," "Re-sawed," "Fables," "The Woods," and "Tote Road and Trail," which have spread his reputation as a poet.

Sunday school was a great success, with between two and three hundred present. E. H. Hasenauer made a plea for greater leadership among the young men and women for Sunday school teachers and workers, and also that the Chautauqua Sunday school be made even greater next year than this. The four-minute speakers for the day were Miss Mary A. Stubbs, F. W. Riggs and J. T. Giles.

Heart Home Problems

by MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a young man for over two years and I love him dearly. My father and mother both think the world of him, for he does everything to please us.

About eight months ago I started dancing and this fellow does not approve of it. He begged me to stop and I kept promising him I would, but my friends kept on asking me to dance, saying that he would start, too, but he did not and we stopped going together for about three months. During that time I only saw him four times. I tried to forget, but I could not love him too dearly. So I wrote this boy and he answered the letter. Then I told him if we could be the same I would give up dancing.

We started back together and he was the same dear boy, but I went back to the dance hall and he knows it and he has started going out with other girls, and that just kills me. There is a fellow who works in the same office with me who is a good friend to this boy, and he has asked me why I did what I did and I could not answer him. I have tried to explain the best I could, but I would appreciate any advice you could give me. I love this boy and I want to be the same as once were. Please tell me just what to do. I am willing to give up dancing if he won't dance, for life is nothing to me without him. Will I do right by giving up, as that is the only thing he disapproves of, and also tell me what I can do to win this boy's love again?

THANK YOU. Since you love the boy so much you ought to be able to give up dancing to please him. Do not write to him or ask him to come back. When he sees that you are no longer dancing he may understand and will probably ask to go with you again. I believe that in your case it will be best to make the sacrifice, because you seem to love him so much.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am sixteen and I met a boy about two weeks ago who insists upon calling me "Sweetheart." I asked him not to, but he keeps it up. What would you advise me to do?

M. W. Do not let the boy call or take you anywhere if he continues to disregard your wish in this matter. In case you are only friends and he does not come to see you, always pay no attention to his remark. If he thinks he is teasing you he will enjoy it all the more.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please tell me what will restore gray hair to its natural color. DOTTIE. Sage tea applied as a hair tonic will restore brown hair, but nothing will restore light hair except dye. I would not advise you to dye your hair, because when you stopped using the dye your hair would be in a wretched condition—dry and an ugly color.

NATIONAL WAR GARDEN COMMISSION

A simple test for proper sealing of ball top jars is to loosen the top ball and lift the jar by taking hold of the top with the fingers, says the National War Garden Commission of Washington. The internal suction should hold the top tightly in place when thus lifted. If the top comes off put on a new one rubber and sterilize 15 minutes longer for vegetables and 5 minutes longer for fruits.

THE STRUGGLE

BY ZOE BECKLEY

HIS WOMAN Ferrol's sumptuous luncheons and expensive cigars were now of daily occurrence. He rarely reached home with the sharp appetite of the old days, when twenty cents was about the limit he spent at noon. Edith's plain fare no longer tempted him. Daily Ferrol spent untold dollars on men who meant only business to him just to feed them into a more genial mood. Yet, his wife, the woman who was partner in the business of life and his children, continued to eat as frugally as though they meant less to him than a book-buyer. For Edith, after her one bacchanal of buying, had heeded certain warnings that kept tapping at her brain. Her husband's hundred-dollar suit had been a genuine shock to her. She couldn't explain it; but somehow it weighed upon her mind, putting an effective brake upon her expenditures. Besides, Edith still had but little actual money. Her buying had been on "charge accounts." The beautiful yellow fifty John gave her she had put into the savings bank.

Ferrol's plain home dinners began to bother him. His conscience bade him be more generous. It was not fair, he felt. He would treat his own at least as well as he treated strangers. He recalled that the anniversary of his wedding would fall on the following Monday. Something of the warning of the heart he felt toward Edith in sweetest days came to him at the thought. He would prove to himself and others that marriage had not dimmed the luster of his love.

"Edith, dear, I have a particular reason to celebrate next Monday," he said one evening, beaming on her. "Here is an extra $20 for a spread that night—and ask the Blakes to join us. If that isn't enough there's more where this comes from!"

Edith threw her arms about him. "Dear old Jack," she murmured, kissing him. "It's our anniversary you are celebrating!"

"Then see to it that the celebration is worthy of the event!" he said, cheerily, patting her. "No stinting, mind you!"

To make sure that her habitual economy did not dwarf her "technique" in providing the feast Ferrol himself bought the luxuries she would not have dreamed of but which had become commonplace to him since he had begun his policy of lavish "treating."

Ferrol felt as "a human being should feel" as he stood up at the head of the table on the night of the celebration. Edith wore a handsome evening gown—his present. The table was laden with a feast far beyond their previous experience. His children were wide-eyed at the munificence of the party and the presents their father had given them. Even the Blakes, good spenders as they were, felt impressed with Ferrol's free-handedness that night.

"Happy days!" Ferrol cried as a toast.

"Happy days!" his family and his guests echoed. In Blake's knowing eyes, however, there was the least shadow of anxiety. He knew that it was his lucky tip of Bonanza Copper which was responsible for Ferrol's blossoming out as a spender. He had hopes that Bonanza Copper would keep on rising faster than Ferrol could spend it. But he knew stocks had a way of falling which made building on their continued good behavior a precarious business. He wished, as a friend, that Ferrol were not quite so intoxicated with his good fortune.

Lillian Blake, however, was not troubled with remote possibilities. She considered the good dinner the Ferrols accorded her part of her reward for befriending them. She meant to befriend them still more, especially Edith. Ferrol treated the Blakes and Edith to a box at the current theatrical hit after dinner, and to supper at a gay and expensive hostelry after it. At the desert course, when the men were deep in talk of Bonanza Copper, Lillian leaned over to Edith and whispered:

"Tonight strike him for a good big allowance!" Edith shook her head. "It wouldn't be fair—after he has been so good to me—" "All the more reason for doing it!" Lillian whispered. "You're not his wife tonight—you're his woman—the woman he loves! And it will give him pleasure to give in to you. Take my tip. I know how to handle men!" Edith listened with dreaming eyes. "I'll do it," she whispered. (To be continued.)

Centerville Soldier Accounts For Seven Huns in 48 Hours Action

Three times over the top without a scratch is the record of Mural McKinney, formerly of Centerville, now serving in France with an American signal corps company.

In a letter to his mother Mrs. Ida McKinney, the soldier tells how he "went through hell and came out again," when the American troops launched a terrible attack against the Boches.

The letter follows: "Dear Mother, Dad and Kids: No doubt you are thinking I am bumped off somewhere, but never worry as long as you don't hear any news, because it isn't always possible to write."

"We have been through hell and out again in the last few days and I sure consider myself lucky. Three times over the top in 48 hours and not a scratch. If this war lasts for two years I don't believe we will ever see a better battle field than this one we went through. We went over at a little after 4 a. m. the first time, and the shells were so heavy that our eyes were filled with dust. You could hear nothing except the sound of guns and bursting shells, but it was sure grand and I would not have missed it for the world."

"As we topped the first hill we could see the Germans feeling for their lives, except those who remained in pits and begged for their lives. They are all tired of the war, most of them being mere boys, and as soon as their officers retreat they give themselves up. In one German machine gun nest they fired on us till their ammunition ran out and then came out and cried 'Kamerad! Kamerad!' However, we soon made short work of them. There is no mercy for these kind of Germans. We advanced so fast that they had no time to take their guns with them, and our artillerymen turned them around and fired them the other way."

Going Was Sure.

The second time over we didn't go quite so fast, but our going was sure. On the right of us a unit captured a whole trainload of Germans coming in to help the other out. The second day and third time over I did not go very far. We set up a wireless in an open wheat field about 400 yards from the line, and each time the Germans shot it down. All afternoon of the second day myself and eight of my comrades lay in two by six pits we had dug in the field while aeroplanes showered us with machine gun bullets and the German 88's, the German's most powerful small gun, showered us with shrapnel, and how we ever came through without a scratch I can't see. "We are resting a little now and hope to be able to rest a good while, but we never know when we go back again. One thing I am sure glad of: we had the honor of helping start the Germans on this big drive—and they are still going."

"As well as feeling as fine as can be, so I guess if I can come through what we did I will be able to make the rest of it all O. K. With love, "Mural."

"Co. C, 1st Field Sig. Batn. American E. F., via New York."

"P. S.—I got a German for each of us, seven in all, and three winged."

A COMMON ERROR

The Same Mistake is Made By Many Richmond People.

It's a common error. To plaster the aching back. To rub with liniments, rheumatic joints. If the trouble comes from the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for kidney ills. And are endorsed by Richmond citizens.

Mrs. Will Van Etten, 124 South Fifth street, Richmond, says: "My kidneys were weak and I had attacks of lumbago. For weeks at a time, I could hardly get about; my back ached incessantly. I couldn't rest well and mornings felt all tried out. I had frequent dizzy headaches and my kidneys didn't do their work the way they should. After I had used different remedies with no benefit, I tried Doan's Kidney Pills and they were just the thing to help me. The soreness and aching left my back and I felt stronger and better in every way."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Van Etten had. Foster-McIlburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Commissioners Make Plans for Two Road Bridges

At the meeting of county commissioners Monday morning plans and specifications were made for two road bridges. One was the Austin culvert on the National road west and the other the Mikesell Culvert north of Chester.

A contract was let to the J. D. Adams company of Indianapolis for two road graders.

Claims were allowed. Fourteen cents on every $100 was allowed for the free turnpike roads which are under the supervision of Superintendent Jones.

War contracts now being filled in Detroit amount to more than $1,000,000,000.
